Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evenings of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

The Calcutta mail of the 17th May, and the Bombay one of the 4th June have arrived simultaneously.

The delay in the receipt of the former was caused by the Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Alma having run aground off Moshedgersh in the Red Sea. The steamer appears to have immediately heeled over, so that the water poured in rapidly through the stern and starboard ports, which happened to be open. The boats were quickly lowered, and the passengers and crew, together with the mails, were saved from destruction. Hopes are entertained that the vessel may yet be got off without much injury.

It is satisfactory to learn that, with the exception of a drunken riot at Agra, the disaffection of the European troops has not manifested itself by any further overt acts of mutiny. They are described, however, as being sullen and intractable, and doggedly determined on obtaining a bounty on re-enlistment, or their discharge from the service. It is reported, too, that the Sikhs in some quarters have adopted the grievance of their European comrades, and declared that they also were enlisted under Jan Koompane, and not under the Ranees of England. If this statement be true—which we are disposed to doubt—a good opportunity is furnished for disembarassing the Government from the danger which has been apprehended in consequence of the immense force of Punjabees under arms.

From the Oude frontier we still hear of skirmishes in which the rebels are invariably dispersed, only to gather together again a few miles in the rear or on either flank. The report of the Nana's capture proves to be unfounded, and the European child in Bala Rao's camp turns out to be a dark-coloured Eurasian, unacquainted with any language but the Oordoo.

The Governor General having thought proper to spare the life of the Nawab of Furruckabad, out of respect for the word of a British officer, the convicted murderer of English women and children is about to proceed on a pilgrimage to Mecca. It is not very likely that he will venture ever again to set foot in Hindostan, as in that case the sentence passed upon him on his trial is liable to be carried into effect.

Cholera, we regret to learn, has broken out at Poona, Sattara, and Hyderabad, and many fatal cases have occurred among the European troops. At the first-named station Captain Brackenbury, of H.M.'s 61st foot, has fallen a victim to that dreadful scourge.

Sir Charles Trevelyan has consented to accept the honorary rank of Colonel of the Infantry Volunteers, whose numbers are to be raised to seven hundred, with ten additional lieutenants. The Cavalry Volunteers, however, have been disembodied, but the use of the uniform on public occasions will be considered en règle.

Sir Charles, we perceive, has already come into collision with the Legislative Council of India, who complain of his conduct in recommending the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts as being unfair and indecorous. The Governor of Madras ought to have been aware that the Council had no power to move in this matter without instructions from the Home Government.

The China papers announce the arrival of the Hon. Mr. Bruce, the English Ambassador, to the Court of Peking. It is thought probable that after his official visit to the capital, His Excellency will fix his permanent residence at Shanghai.

Among the passengers to England by the present mail is Sir John Bowring, after ten years' service in China, first as Consul at Canton, and afterwards as H. M.'s Plenipotentiary. The provisional governorship of Hong Kong devolves, in the usual course, upon Colonel Caine.

The death of Pih-Kwei, the Chinese governor of Canton, is reported as having taken place on April the 25th.

BENGAL.

THE COMPANY'S EUROPEANS.

Two companies of the 3rd Bengal European Regiment (late Company's) have drawn up the subjoined petition to Parliament on the hardship and injustice of their unceremonious transfer to the service of the Crown.

SEPRE, May 18.—Major general Sir R. Napier, commanding the Gwalior Division, accompanied by his aide-de-camp, a few sowars, and some native camel-men, arrived in the station on Monday morning, en route to Gwalior. In the afternoon of the same day he inspected the various detachments at their encampments. When he inspected the detachment of the 3rd Bengal Europeans, under command of Captain Webster, Sir R. Napier read the Kussowie memorandum of the Commander-in-Chief, subsequently addressing the men upon the subject of the present dissatisfaction, remarking that he was proud to know, notwithstanding he understood the men of the detachment had expressed some dissatisfaction, that they had behaved themselves like good soldiers. The Major general added that the officer commanding the detachment would hold orderly room next morning, when the men could state their grievances, a statement of which would be transmitted to the colonel of the 3rd, who would forward it to him (Sir R. Napier), and he would take care, he said, that any statement or petition concerning their grievances emanating from the men, would be forwarded to the Commander in Chief. The Major general left Seprce the same evening, hurrying on to Gwalior, where it is understood there is serious dissatisfaction among the late Company's soldiers stationed there. The men of the 3rd detachment had petitions to both Houses of Parliament in preparation; and the morning following General Napier's inspection, after getting the signatures of nearly the whole of the men in the detachment, these were presented to the officer in charge, who held a parade in the evening to ascertain whether the signatures were bona fide before he forwarded the same. The following is a copy of the petition:—

"TO THE HONOURABLE THE HOUSE OF COMMONS of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled.

"The Petition of the undersigned Men belonging to No. 3 and No. 8 Companies, 3rd Bengal European Regiment of the late Honourable East India Company's Service, on Detachment Duty at Seprce, Central India,

"Humbly sheweth,—That your Petitioners had the first official intimation of their services being transferred to the Crown, without their consent or re-enlistment, on the 7th day of May current, by the following Notification being read to them on parade:—

"FORT WILLIAM, 8th April, 1859.

"No. 480 of 1859.—Upon the recent transfer of the Forces of the late East India Company to the immediate service of Her Majesty, under the provisions of the Act of the 21 and 22 Vict. Cap. 106, certain European soldiers of the East India Company's Forces having claimed their discharge or their enlistment anew into the Queen's service with fresh bounty, the subject was brought under the consideration of her Majesty's Government and referred to the Law Officers of the Crown.

"His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India in Council has now to announce to the European soldiers of her Majesty's Indian Forces in the three Presidencies who were formerly in the service of the East India Company, that her Majesty's Government have finally decided that the claim made to discharge or re-enlistment with bounty is inadmissible. "R. J. H. BIRCH, Major general,

"Secretary to the Govt. of India."

"That your petitioners beg to bring under the notice of your honourable House that they enlisted to serve in the honourable East India Company's infantry, which the following question, in your petitioners' attestation, will show:—

"8.—Are you willing to be attested to serve in the East India Company's infantry, for the term of ten years, provided the said Company should so long require your services? &c.

"That your Petitioners beg to call the attention of your honourable House to another form of No. 8 Question, contained in the Schedules annexed to the Mutiny Act for the year 1854:—

"8.—Are you willing to be attested to serve in her Majesty's Army, or in the Forces of the East India Company, according as Her Majesty may think fit to order? &c.

"That your Petitioners beg to submit to your honourable House that they were not attested by the latter question, but by the former; and that your Petitioners beg humbly to submit their opinion that they should not, therefore, according to the meaning of the Mutiny Act, be transferred to her Majesty's service without your Petitioners' consent, or without their re-enlistment."

"That your Petitioners humbly submit to your honourable House that such transfer, which has been decided by the Law Officers of the Crown as being in accordance with the provisions of certain clauses of the Indian Act of last session, does not accord with the customs and usages of the service; as, when the Crown assumed the government of the Island of St. Helena from the late East India Company, the troops there belonging to the said Company were not then transferred to the Crown, but received a free and unconditional discharge.

"That your Petitioners beg also to submit to the consideration of your Honourable House that both in India and in the late East India Company's depot in England, when a soldier belonging to the Infantry was transferred to the said Company's Regiment of Artillery, the said soldier had to be re-enlisted and re-sworn before a magistrate. How much more necessary does it appear to your petitioners that they should have been re-enlisted and re-sworn when your petitioners were transferred from the late East India Company's service to that of her Majesty's Indian military forces.

"That your petitioners beg to submit that they are corroborated in the opinion of their right to claim their discharge, on the late East India Company ceasing to exercise governmental powers in India, by what her Majesty's late First Minister of the Crown—Lord Palmerston—is reported by the Home News to have stated, in his place in your honourable House, when introducing the first India Bill, that—

"The other [the late Company's troops] will be transferred to the Crown, for the service of the country, subject to certain conditions of service under which they have enlisted; and, of course, if any of them should dislike the change, they will be entitled to their discharge, if they prefer that, rather than to serve the Crown on the same conditions and regulations as those under which they entered the service of the Company."

"That your petitioners beg to submit to your honourable House that they made their contract with the late East India Company, and no other party; and that the said Company, when ceasing their connection with the Government of India, could not, according to the 'usages and customs of the service,' transfer your petitioners without their free will and consent; neither is it in accordance, your petitioners would beg humbly to submit, with the spirit of the recent legislation of your honourable House, to transfer British soldiers or British subjects from one service, or one master, to another, without their free will and consent.

"That your petitioners have been graciously permitted by Lord Clyde, Commander-in-Chief of the Army in India (per Memo. by his Excellency, dated Kussowie, 5th May, 1859, para. 6, and published in Meerut Division Orders), to lay their grievances, entailed upon them by the recent India Act, as interpreted by the Law Officers of the Crown, before your Honourable House, that you may give them your most careful consideration.

"That your petitioners, while requesting of your honourable House to carefully consider your Petitioners' case, by granting them that freedom of choice which your petitioners have endeavoured to show to your honourable House that they are entitled to, do not yield in loyalty to her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen, neither in patriotism to their country, as the recent services of your petitioners during the Mutiny in India have indubitably shown.

"And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.

"Seprce, Central India, May 16, 1859."

SIGNED BY NEARLY THE WHOLE OF THE DETACHMENT.—Bombay Gazette.

PROGRESS OF THE TEA PLANTATIONS IN THE KANGRA VALLEY.

During the last season a large increase in the cultivation of tea has taken place at the manufactory at Holta.

13,190 lbs. of tea were prepared, viz.:—

BLACK TEAS.
Souchong .. ..	2,849
Pouchong .. ..	7,177
Bohea .. ..	1,770
Green Teas .. ..	1,394
Total .. ..	13,190

Of these 10,840 lbs. have been made over to the commissariat department; 580 lbs. sent to Government as samples, and sold; and 1,770 lbs. second class, or Bohea teas, reserved in store. The teas sent to the commissariat were first-class or superior teas. Dr. Jameson brings prominently to notice the improvement made in tea manipulation; the second-class teas being not more than one-sixth of the whole produce, whereas in the preceding year the second-class teas were in proportion to the first-class as two to one nearly.

This improvement is principally owing to careful gathering of the raw leaves, and better manipulation under the guidance of Chinese manufacturers. The native tea-makers have also become more expert.

In addition to the tea prepared, fifty maunds of seeds were sown and five lakhs of plants transplanted.

During the present season the yield has greatly increased, and may be estimated at 26,000 lbs.; and in addition 28,000 lbs. of seeds have been produced, of which 21,000 have been distributed to Zemindars, and more would have been readily accepted had they been available. This demand is attributed to the excellent effects that attended the assembly of the Chief Zemindars, at which Mr. McLeod, Financial Commissioner, and Majors Lake and Taylor presided. This meeting was convened under instructions of the late Lieutenant Governor, Sir J. Lawrence, and it is believed that if the district authorities will continue to take a lively interest in the cultivation, in a short time every village throughout the valley will have a certain portion of their land under cultivation with tea.

A new factory at an expense of Rs. 1,000 has been built at Dhurmsala; and one cultivator, Tej Sing, brought to it 640 lbs. raw leaves. This spirited individual has added a lakh of plants to his plantation, and sown 60 maunds of seed within the last two seasons. This factory has been worked by native residents of the Kangra valley, with the exception of the last process of manipulation, which was done at Holta, under the superintendence of the Chinese. A tea plantation has also been established at Kotghur, near Simla, by Mr. Berkeley, a European, and he has now many lakhs of plants in a flourishing condition.

A large additional tract of land at Holta has been broken up and planted, and the plantation may be estimated at 800 acres, and the number of thriving plants in it are five millions; the yield this season will be about 26,000 lbs.,—next season it may be calculated at 40,000 lbs., and will increase annually until the plants are in full bearing, when the out-turn will not be less than 1,50,000 lbs. To meet this increase additional factory accommodation is required, and Dr. Jameson recommends the erection of a room 24 by 40, and a large pukka godown, the cost of which will be Rs. 2,200. The out-turn this year is 26,000 lbs., which at the average selling rate, Rs. 2, gives Rs. 52,000; the expenditure for this out-turn is Rs. 16,000; making a clear gain of Rs. 36,000.

The present working establishment costs monthly Rs. 1,100, but owing to the increase in cultivation this establishment is found much too small, and Dr. Jameson recommends an increase of Rs. 462, or in all, Rs. 1,562 per mensem.

Throughout the district labour is abundant, and work in the plantations highly popular. The results shown prove how admirably the Kohistan of the Punjab is fitted for tea cultivation. The means of transport are good, and teas can be forwarded to good and available markets at cheap rates.

In conclusion, Dr. Jameson states that capital and efficient superintendence are all that are wanting to make tea cultivation in the Kohistan of the Punjab a work of national importance.

The Lieutenant Governor sanctioned the additional buildings recommended by Dr. Jameson, and strongly supported his application for an increase to the working establishment.

The Governor General desired that the thanks of Government might be conveyed to Dr. Jameson for his report on these operations, the results of which are considered to be very satisfactory.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ANDAMANS.—Letters from the Andamans up to the 29th of May contain the following exciting news; no dates are given, but the facts are as follows:—a few days after the steamer had left for Calcutta, the superintendent who had been for some time in the habit of sleeping on shore, was informed in the evening by one of the convicts that a plot was ripe to take his life the next day. He went to office as usual, scarcely crediting the man's statement, as his information was so vague, but took a loaded revolver with him. All went on quietly until about 2 o'clock P.M., when a convict rushed at the European sentry on duty at the office, knocked him down with an axe, wounding him in four places, and stunning him; another convict seized the sentry's loaded musket, and aimed from the office steps at the superintendent, who was sitting at his table writing. Before he had time to fire, however, the overseer of the establishment, a native belonging to Agra, with great presence of mind rushed on the man and knocked him down. He saved the superintendent's life, but almost at the expense of his own, for a convict coming up at the moment aimed a blow at his head with an axe, but fortunately only laid his shoulder open, while another who had seized the musket bayoneted him in the hand. This unexpected check to their intentions enabled the superintendent to act, and the main guard at the same time turning out, the emete was put down speedily. The convicts employed as chuprassees about the office, all old sepoys, behaved exceedingly well, throwing themselves without fear on the armed convicts and overpowering them. It is well to have even one good word to say for Pandey; not only did the chuprassees behave well, but no sepoy was mixed up with the attempt at all: the conspirators were a party of 150 Punjabee villagers, a set of fellows as fierce and blood-thirsty as they are big-boned and strong-limbed. The plan they formed, as far as has been elicited, was, after having murdered the superintendent and overseer, to seize the barracks, then the schooner Charlotte, a vessel manned with four guns, and, having got hold of her, they were to capture or sink the Sesostris, a ship of 1,200 tons! Wonderful, too, they saw no difficulty in their plans until one asked in committee what they intended doing on reaching Calcutta; the ringleaders had a ready answer, "the English have long since left Calcutta, their names are forgotten." By the same letters we learn that three times during the past month the convicts engaged in clearing the mainland have been attacked and driven to the boats ignominiously by the savages, who have used their weapons so well that three or four of the prisoners have died of their wounds. The aborigines clear the ground of all the tools, food, &c., of the prisoners, and walk quietly off to wait another opportunity. What with deaths in hospital, killed in battle with, or flight from the cannibals, and executions contingent on an emete now and then, the population of the penal settlement at Port Blair is not likely to increase very fast.—Delhi Gazette.

MR. RUSSELL CORRECTED.—We (Delhi Gazette) are exceedingly obliged to a correspondent who has enabled us to act the very pleasant part of refuting one of Mr. Russell's last and greatest scandals against Anglo-Indian society. As our friend says, the bias of the writer is very plain; and as the truth has in this instance been so fearfully twisted and turned to serve his purpose, as is evident from the following explanation, we may fairly conclude that similar liberties have been taken with it on other occasions. We should like very much to know what answer Mr. Russell's friends at home could give to the following:—"Mr. Russell in his letter from Lucknow, dated January 20th, which appears in the Times of the 23rd March, animadverts severely on the conduct of a gentleman who insulted Rajah Maun Singh at his Lucknow ball. It is painful to see Mr. Russell's persistence in his detraction of his countrymen in India, and the eagerness with which he jumps at any isolated fact which with a little 'management' may serve his purpose, and convey an idea in England that gross vulgarities are practised towards natives of rank. The real facts of this case are curious, as showing the bias of the writer, and as my informant was also the informant of Mr. Russell, the facts as stated to the correspondent and as reported by him can be easily compared. In the first place I should premise that the offender whom Mr. Russell castigates, though a very worthy man, and though he had acquired some distinction for the way in which he had brought his steamer up the Gogra, was by no means in such a position that any conduct of his could reflect credit or discredit on the tone of 'society' in India. To return: the latter, whom I will call Mr. A., met my informant, Captain B., at this ball, and was walking with him, when they met Rajah Maun Singh, and stopped to talk with him. The Rajah was wearing a gorgeously embroidered cap, and the conversation turning upon its value and weight, the Rajah himself took it off his own head, and put it into Captain B.'s hand that he might examine it. Captain B. passed it on to Mr. A., who, in the plenitude of his admiration, and ignorance of the customs of the country, put it on his own head, remarked, 'Yes, it must be very heavy indeed,' and then returned it to the Rajah, who walked off with it in his hand, saying nothing. Presently they remarked that the Rajah was still bareheaded, and Captain B. observed that he was afraid he might consider himself insulted by what Mr. A. had done. The latter was much distressed, and entreated his companion to explain to the Rajah the utter absence of any intentional discourtesy. Captain B. did this, saying he hoped Rajah Maun Singh would wear the cap, or else Mr. A. would feel pained. The Rajah at once put it on, laughing and saying he had no object in not wearing it, and never dreamt that Mr. A. had intended anything rude. So the matter dropped, and so Captain B. explained it to Mr. Russell, when the latter asked the meaning of the scene. You perceive Mr. Russell totally alters the features of the story when he says that Mr. A. took the cap off the Rajah's head. He certainly committed a solecism in native courtesy, but it is a thing anyone is liable to do if he has not been much in native society, and it was certainly not a greater one than Mr. Russell himself committed when he wrote (about?) Maun Singh, without the title of Rajah, by which he is invariably called by all natives and by everyone who knows him well. Mr. A.'s error was that of a man who puts his knife into his mouth at table; Mr. Russell's that of the man who talks familiarly of noblemen he does not know without their titles."

REDUCTION OF CIVIL SALARIES.—We (Mofussilite) are informed that the Government scheme for reducing all the present salaries goes home by the next steamer, in order that the Indian Council may approve of it, or suggest alterations before it is actually carried into effect. Two rates of reduction are proposed, one applicable to officers on the receipt of more than Rs. 500, and the other to those who draw less. A memorial is in course of preparation by the Bengal (or rather Calcutta) civilians, addressed to Lord Stanley, remonstrating against having their emolument docked in so shocking a manner, Mr. Money being the leader of the movement.

WILD ANIMALS IN THE PUNJAB.—Statement of wild animals destroyed in the Punjab during the year 1858, and of the number of persons killed or injured during the same period:—

	Men.	Women.	Children.	Total.
Number of persons killed	5	1	293	299
Number of persons injured	2	4	166	171
Animals Destroyed.
	Males.	Females.	Cubs.	Total.
Tigers	13	0	4	17
Leopards	108	2	29	139
Bears	94	4	21	119
Wolves	172	144	230	546
Hyanas	10	0	3	13

Number killed 834
Amount of rewards given during 1858, Rs. 3,075-6-0.

AT LAST!—The sheer necessity for economy has brought about that which the sense of propriety and expediency could not effect. Mr. C. K. Dove, the uncovenanted servant who has so long done the duties of Post Master General in Bengal, has been gazetted to the permanent appointment. According to the Hurkaru, moreover, Mr. Garrett, who has been Acting Deputy Post Master General, is to be permanently appointed Post Master of Bengal. Mr. Dove's appointment has hitherto invariably been held by a covenanted servant, who drew a large salary for doing nothing. In transferring it to the uncovenanted service, a measure recommended alike by Lord Dalhousie and Lord Canning, the pay will of course be regulated by the uncovenanted standard as fixed by Mr. Ricketts; and thus while a good appointment is opened to the unprivileged branch of the service, and increased efficiency is secured in the discharge of the duties of the office, a substantial annual saving will be effected.

BALLA RAO'S CHRISTIAN CAPTIVE.—The long-talked-of English girl in Balla Rao's camp has been sent in to Colonel Brasyer: after all, what do you suppose she is like? Are you prepared to receive her likeness? If so, imagine one of the prettiest portraits that so frequently grace the pages of English annuals of a sweet child of nine years' old. Fancy with what interest her little prattling tongue would be heard describing two years' captivity with a band of black savages, pursued and driven over hill and plain by British troops, and the delight she would experience in being again restored to civilisation and the comforts of a safe and happy home! What a theme for a novel, and one to which I know you could do ample justice. But you must not imagine anything so beautiful or interesting, for the heroine approaches nearer the colour of ebony than chalk, and knows no more of English than the natives of the Andamans. Yet, poor thing, she is to be pitied after the tale she has related of her misfortunes. She says her parents lived at Futteghur when the outbreak occurred, and that her father's name was Jennett Sahib. Her father, she states, died of cholera, but her mother, brothers, and sisters were all murdered by the sepoys. On her person are marks of severe wounds. One of a musket ball which entered her back, and passed through her chest, and several other scars from sword cuts. She says the Rajah Balla Rao saved her from destruction, dressed her wounds, and treated her kindly, and so did also the Begum. Indeed, she cried much when she saw Colonel Brasyer, and begged to be sent back again to Rajah Balla Rao, as she calls him. What can be Balla Rao's object in sending her in I cannot imagine. Is it possible the arch-fiend supposes he can purchase his pardon by giving her up? Perhaps he does—nothing surprises one in these days of extraordinary forgiveness and lovingkindnesses to niggers.

FALL OF THE HINDUN BRIDGE.—The iron suspension bridge across the Hindun Nuddee, between Meerut and Delhi, fell down on the 12th of May. At the time of the catastrophe there were two bullock-train waggons, and one dak gharry, on the bridge, besides fourteen persons, who were all precipitated into the Nuddee, two lives being lost. The traffic is now carried on by boats, and is rather well managed—the delay scarcely being half an hour in passing over a dak carriage and horse. With regard to bullock trains, they have to be unloaded, and another cart supplied on the opposite side. If Government do not immediately set to work to repair the bridge, the goods' traffic between Delhi and the stations in the Doab will be practically put a stop to.

CAPTAIN J. SHERWILL having sent in a claim to the Governor-General for a wound pension, compensation for loss of property, and staff allowances as commandant of a detachment during the mutinies; the two former have been granted, but the latter rejected, on the ground that being an officer and soldier it was his duty to take charge of any detachment on any emergency.

ASSIST. SURG. MR. JOHN O'GRADY, H.M.'s 1st batt. 1st regt., has been dismissed the service by sentence of court-martial.

THE EX-NAWAB OF FURRUCKABAD.—FUTTEHGURH, May 21.—Yesterday the ex-Nawab of Furruckabad was brought to the magistrate's office under a European guard, and there fettered. It is understood he was the day before given the option to decide within twenty-four hours whether he would suffer death or retire from British territory, where his appearance at any time would render him liable to be hanged, and to state where he wished to go; yesterday he, like a faithful servant of the prophet, mentioned Mecca as his intended place of residence, so he proceeds there on his eternal pilgrimage, and doubtless at that holy place he will be well cared for and be thought somebody. He expressed a wish to see his wife and children, but was prevented from seeing the former, permission to see his children only being given. I suppose his Begum can go to Mecca also if she likes, there is nothing to prevent her. The prisoner was observed being lifted on the cart, his fetters preventing the free use of his legs; he seemed very much pulled down and haggard in his look, though his dress was clean and appearance respectable. Most probably he is dissatisfied with such a peculiar display of mercy shown him by Government. There was a great crowd, who seemed much dejected, and expressed their sympathy with the prisoner by (in several instances) shedding tears; two servants are allowed the prisoner, and Rs. 1,000 to pay for his expenses en route.

MYNPOOREE, May 24.—The Nawab of Futtehghur arrived here yesterday under a strong guard of the Futtehghur levy, and marched again this morning; he is in irons, with six sentries over him. Blackwood's levy is ordered off sharp to Dinapore, and they march to-morrow to Cawnpore, thence by rail to Allahabad, and then go down in boats to Dinapore. Weather here frightfully hot.

MAJOR SIR E. FITZGERALD CAMPBELL, of her Majesty's 60th Rifles, at present aide-de-camp to the Governor-General, it is expected is to succeed Colonel Stuart as Military Secretary.

CAPTAIN D. D. GRAHAM has been appointed Immigration Agent in India by the Ceylon Government, and the Governor General has been desired by the home authorities to give that officer such assistance as he may require in carrying out the objects of his mission.

PATENT LAW FOR INDIA.—At length we are to have something like a patent law for India. The one passed by the Legislative Council in 1850 was disallowed by the Court of Directors, because it trenchanted upon the royal prerogative, which claimed for the crown the sole right of issuing patents. Now, however, a "Bill for granting exclusive privileges to inventors" has received the royal sanction, and is again before the Legislative Council, with a probability of its speedily becoming law. We do not believe that hitherto much has been lost in the way of invention, in this country, for want of a patent law. The time has come, however, when such a law is likely to be necessary. Our railways and other public works are bringing so many engineers and others of what may be called the inventive classes into the country, that protection for the results of their ingenuity is likely often to be required. Even the natives employed on public works are, we observe, directing their attention to the improvement of the machinery with which they have become familiar. The knowledge that such improvements can be turned to the profit of the inventor is not likely to be without its effect in stimulating the ingenuity of both European and Native.

REDUCTION OF SALARIES.—The following are some of the reductions in the salaries of the members of the Civil Service, which, we believe, have been provisionally made by Government. Sudder judges are in future to get only Rs. 40,000 a year, being reduced by 20 per cent. Commissioners are to receive Rs. 28,000 a year, with Rs. 10 a day while actually travelling on duty. Civil and sessions judges are to get Rs. 25,000 a year in place of Rs. 30,000, which is their present pay. Collectors are to have Rs. 1,500 in lieu of Rs. 1,900, which they now get. The rate of reduction is less in proportion as the office is lower in the service. We hear that none of Mr. Ricketts' recommendations for increase of pay have been adopted. We hope that this may turn out to be the case, for we are at a loss to conceive what civilian appointments there can be that are insufficiently paid. The only civilians who may possibly be underpaid are some of the excessively hard-worked commissioners and deputy commissioners in the Punjab.—Bengal Hurkaru.

POLICE MAGISTRATES.—The appointments at the police consequent on Mr. Hume's having gone away on sick leave, are as follows:—Mr. Fagan will act for Mr. Hume, and Mr. Dale, of the Calcutta bar, will act for Mr. Fagan. Mr. Dale is a gentleman of eight years' standing at the bar, and has been about a year in Calcutta.

DEFEAT OF REBELS.—We hear from Trans-Gogra that intelligence was brought in on the 16th May, that Bala Rao, and Dabee Bux, the Raja of Gonda, with their followers, had moved farther west, and encamped in the jungle near the village of Jawah Byrath, on the Toolsepoore frontier. On the morning of the 18th, Sir Hope Grant's force arrived at Pitchpuria. Our patrols had sighted the rebels in the jungle not far off to the west of Sissia. Their encampment, somewhat scattered, extended between Bhosulra and the Jawah pass—a little to the west of north of that place. Bala Rao, who had been previously reported ill, was now pronounced dangerously so. There were no rebels north-east, nor south-east of the British camp. All the leaders and sirdars were congregated together with Muminoo Khan, Bala Rao, &c. Colonel Pinckney was expected to have made two marches northward from Chilla. In the little battle of the 13th, an account of which appeared in our last, both Major Vaughan's men, 5th Punjab rifles, under Lieutenant Stewart, and the police jezailchees under Captain Millet, are said to have behaved remarkably well. They fought the rebels at great odds, but licked them hollow, killing 80 out of a body of 400 or more, and losing only one man themselves, with two wounded. Positive information has been received since of the death of General Bukht Khan. A man who was taken prisoner says that there were several leaders present on the occasion; he named General Bukht Khan, General Shere Khan, General Johahee Deen, Khoda Buksh Khan, and some others. Bukht Khan had been known to Captain Fraser of the Artillery, and upon his general appearance being described to him by the men at whose hands he is believed to have fallen, he believed the description to be a correct one. His body had, however, been sent for, but had not arrived up to the date of our advices. Two swords and an English double-barrelled gun belonging to him were found after the fight; and a bay charger which he rode during the engagement was found lying dead by his side. Very many rebels had surrendered within the last few days, but there was still a large number, principally sepoys, in Deokurh, Dang, and Sonar. Rajah Jodhi Singh of Churda, with 100 followers, had surrendered to Major Vaughan at Sidhonia Ghat on the 18th. From Seogurh the rebels had taken a westerly direction. With the little Christian girl, a Rane (name unknown) and four other women had also come in. We hear the little girl has been sent on to Allahabad—thence, probably, she will be sent on to Calcutta, and eventually to England.—Lucknow Herald.

PRESIDENCY SUPERINTENDING SURGEON.—The Hurkaru learns that a separate Superintending Surgeoncy for the Presidency has been established, and that it has been bestowed on Dr. James Anderson, who has long been officiating in the appointment. Dr. Anderson, in consequence, vacates the General Hospital, which has been bestowed upon Surgeon J. P. Brougham for his meritorious services as Field Surgeon at Delhi and elsewhere in the late campaigns.

SUITABLE PRESENTS.—Government has ordered that all valuable sword-blades surrendered under the Disarming Act shall be reserved for the purpose of making presents to natives. All others are to be broken up or melted.

GOONAH, May 23.—News having arrived in camp on the afternoon of the 21st that a party of rebels were committing depredations on the Ra-googurh road, twelve miles from this, orders were immediately issued for a detachment of the 9th N.I. and a portion of Mayne's horse to march in quest of them. They were consequently on the road the same night. From the reports of yesterday, the nature of their outrages appears to be no less than the killing of several gorawallahs, burning a chokee, and carrying off six horses. More to be regretted still, two Portuguese cooks, one belonging to the 71st highlanders, the other to the royal artillery, were sacrificed by the ruffians. These poor men, after doing their duty amid the fatigues and dangers of the late campaign, had been relieved by Bengal cooks. Joyfully journeying to the south to share their savings with their families at home, they were treacherously set upon, robbed and murdered by these banditti—the only name to which they are now entitled. To crown all, there is also a rumour that two Europeans employed at one of the bullock stations have fallen victims to these butchers. This, it is to be hoped, will prove incorrect. The whole European encampment turned out yesterday to see the spectacle of a dead tiger that had been slain in the jungle near a village six miles off. To many it was a new, to all an interesting sight. He was the largest tiger I had ever seen, measuring, as near as I could guess, from the nose to the tip of the tail, eleven feet, and when alive, must have stood at least four feet and a half high. Possessed of a glossy hide beautifully and regularly streaked, the huge dimensions of this monarch of the jungle seemed, even in death, grand and terrible. He is said to have killed a child of one of the villagers, who determining on revenge, planted in a narrow part of the road a net with a dead bullock for a bait; the scheme was successful, and the tiger lured to the snare. We have received no intelligence as yet of the doings of the force sent after the rebels, but I understand that a similar force has left Seronge, and seventy of the police are also on their trail, whose combined movements will, I trust, inflict a speedy and deserved punishment on the robbers. Lieutenant Blair, 71st regiment, has been ordered to join the head-quarters of his regiment at Gwalior, in anticipation of obtaining leave to proceed to England; and Captain C. Mounsey, 71st, has been appointed staff officer at Goonah instead, pending approval.

RAJAH JOBH SINGH, of Churda, with one hundred followers, surrendered to Major Vaughan at Sedonia Ghat on the 18th May.

THE 47TH REGIMENT BENGAL N. I., now at Canton, is to be sent back to Calcutta directly the Ambassador arrives in the celestial city, on account of its weak state; the General having reported this circumstance to the Secretary of War.

NAWAB BUSSORE BULJOO KOONI, of Jhansi, convicted of rebellion, plunder, and arson, has been sentenced to transportation for fourteen years, with confiscation of his property.

BUKHT KHAN.—The famous Commander in Chief at Delhi, Bukht Khan, of the Bareilly battery of artillery, has been killed in a skirmish.

GUNGA DHUR, Mahratta, one of the choice spirits of Jhansi in the three days of the outbreak and massacre, has expiated his crime on the gallows. His share in the business was the murder of Mr. T. Andrews, the principal sudder ameen.

FUTTEHGUR, May 16.—Mooltan Khan's case came on for trial on the 7th, and lasted until today. He is charged with being a leader and instigator of rebellion. This charge is brought home against him by the evidence of credible witnesses produced against him on the part of Government. The Special Commissioner sentenced him to nine years' imprisonment or transportation beyond the seas; but this sentence will not be executed until its confirmation by Government. Mooltan Khan's defence chiefly consists in the statement that he saved Mr. Edwards, C.S., and his companions' lives when on their way to Futtehgur a few days previous to the mutiny at that place. He is a member of the Mhow Nawab's family, and collected by force about two lacs of rupees from the citizens who have now come forward to give evidence against him. It is proved that he took an active part in the rebellion. He commanded rebels at the battle of Puttiala, and was concerned in the murder of Chobi Ghunsam Doss, but there is no evidence to prove this charge against him. The documentary evidence is sufficient to convict him of rebellion, but the Special Commissioner for form's sake examined several witnesses. The Special Commissioner's departure is universally felt by the community at large, especially by his servants, who have experienced innumerable instances of kindness. Shah Zuman Khan another rebel is released. Morad Ali Khan, the late Nazim of Etawah, will be transported for life. These sentences will not be carried out till they are confirmed by Government. Mooltan Khan's defence was taken into consideration by the Special Commissioner, and therefore a mitigated sentence was passed.—Delhi Gazette.

DEATH OF SHADUCK MAHAL.—One of the ex-King of Oude's wives named Shaduck Mahal lately died at Lucknow. She was buried in the tomb of Shah Jehan. The Chief Commissioner has written to Government to be informed how her vast wealth is to be disposed of.

GOVERNMENT TELEGRAMS.—On the 11th May, 105 sowars gave themselves up at Cheeba, on the Oudh frontier. On the 14th, 200 rebels surrendered to Major Vaughan's force at Sedonia Ghat. A detachment drove a body of rebels through the Sedonia Pass into the Soonar Valley, killing 80 men. Benes Madho is said to have entered the Deoghur Valley with 400 followers. The Gonda and Baraitch districts are reported by the officers commanding detachments to be free from rebels. Rajah Jodh Sing, of Churda, with one hundred followers, surrendered to Major Vaughan at Sedonia Ghat on the 18th. A party from Major Vaughan's force, with some of the military police, attacked a body of the rebels 400 strong, and defeated them at Rajpore on the 12th. Seon Bun Khan with 150 men have given themselves up to Major Vaughan, and Abdool Wullee with 150 followers, surrendered at Sedonia Ghat on the 18th. Thirty-five rebels, with horses and one elephant, came in at Bhinga on the 18th. After a night's march, Sir H. Grant came upon the Nana, Bala Rao, and Rajah Deves Bux's forces in the Jorwah Pass early in the morning of the 21st. The jungle was very thick, which favoured all attempts of the rebels to hold the position, armed with two guns. As soon as the heights were crowned, they fled in great disorder up the pass and over the hills, a number were killed, and their guns and camp taken. The force pursued them up the pass and over the hills. Lieut. Torrens of the Bays, A. D. C. slightly wounded, and there are several casualties in the 7th Punjab infantry, the only corps engaged.

SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN.—The Legislative Council on the 11th May very warmly resented the slight cast upon it by Sir Charles Trevelyan's late proceedings. The Vice President pointed out that the course pursued by the Governor of Madras was both unfair and indecorous. The Council, if even not forbidden by the Home Government, could not now for obvious reasons sanction an amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts.

RAJAH HURDUIT SING, of Oude, has expressed his willingness to accept the amnesty, provided his estates are restored to him.

THE EX-KING OF OUDE has called in the aid of the Muses to solace his captivity. His Majesty, we are informed by the Phoenix, lately forwarded through the foreign office, an ode composed by himself, and addressed Lord Canning, in which, in the flowery and figurative language of Oriental poetry, he supplicated the representative of England's greatness in the East, to have pity on a captive monarch and procure him justice. The ode, our contemporary is informed, was a rather lengthy composition written in Persian, and divided into a number of parts of so many stanzas each, the parts assuming the form of apostrophies to his lordship's horse, tent, palace, sword, and elephant in turn. The ex-King bestowed some very flattering epithets upon the viceroy, whom, in one part of his composition he styled the "Full Moon of the World," a title at which the viceroy will probably not feel as gratified as when his new earldom was announced to him.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.—A list has been prepared of those Europeans who did good service to Government during the mutiny. They are 170 in number. 220 natives are also mentioned. The disloyals in Bengal are only thirty-five. Three only are residents of Calcutta.

AGRA, May 21.—We (Delhi Gazette) regret to say that a very disgraceful disturbance occurred among the artillery, at this station on Thursday morning. It originated, we believe, in a drunken riot, and unless we are misinformed, some of Eve's daughters were at the bottom of it. We believe it is not a solitary instance of disturbances originating from causes in which wine and women have had a share. However that may be, the matter resulted in very mutinous and insubordinate behaviour on the part of the men, a portion of the rifle brigade was called out, and eight of the ringleaders were subjected to durance vile. We are, perhaps, almost as sorry as the officers of the artillery themselves are at the occurrence, to have to record this disgraceful event, and the men by this time, we should hope, equally regret it; but we cannot let the matter pass without expressing a hope that the Commander in Chief will take proper steps to prevent a recurrence of such behaviour, by making examples calculated to maintain that discipline, without which an army becomes a disorganised rabble, dangerous to its friends, and a disgrace to its country.

MR. SCONE succeeds Mr. Currie in the Legislative Council. On Tuesday, the 10th May, as he was about to leave the bench on his retirement from the office of Sudder Judge, which he has so ably and satisfactorily filled, Baboo Ramapersaud Roy, the Government pleader, on behalf of the bar, presented and read an address, expressive of the high opinion entertained by the bar suitors and law agents of Mr. Scone's eminent judicial qualities. After reading the address, Baboo Ramapersaud verbally expressed the general regret that was felt at the separation between the retiring judge and the bar; and in reply, Mr. Scone, in few, but forcible terms, expressed his gratification at such an unexpected and (as he termed it) undeserved manifestation of public feeling, and remarked that whatever might be the qualification of a judge, without the aid and intelligence of the bar he could but poorly discharge his duties. In conclusion, Mr. Scone thanked the bar for the assistance, which, by their intelligence, industry, and independence, they had always afforded him, and then took his leave to enter on his new career of office.—Englishman.

MILITARY ITEMS.—We hear that Major Lewis, Principal Commissary of Ordnance, is about to proceed to England on furlough. The Ordnance Department will thus temporarily lose the services of a most able and estimable officer. Major Lewis is, however, to be succeeded by Captain Voyle at present in charge of the arsenal, also an excellent and much esteemed official. Captain Russell—the lieutenant of 1857, who stood match in hand, prepared to blow up the arsenal at Allahabad, had the 6th N. I. succeeded in penetrating into the fort, or the Sikhs proved unloyal, succeeds Captain Voyle in the charge of the arsenal of Fort William.—Phoenix.

APPOINTMENTS.—Colonel Sir Richmond Shakespear, Knight, to be Agent to the Governor General for Central India, Maj. W. F. Eden, 1st Madras N.I., to be Political Agent in Meywar, Maj. R. L. Taylor, 18th Bombay N.I., to be Political Agent at Jeypore, Maj. R. Morrieson, 62nd N.I., to be Political Agent at Harowtee, Capt. J. P. Nixon, 25th Bombay N.I., to be Political Agent at Joudhpore, Maj. P. A. P. Bouverie, 35th N.I., to be Political Agent at Bhurtpore, Capt. A. R. E. Hutchinson, 13th N.I., to be Political Agent at Bhopal.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, May 17).—Intigo.—Prospects continue highly favourable, with but few complaints of partial drought. Exports from Nov. 1, 1858, to May 15, 1859, of Great Britain, 51,948 Pk. mds. Sugar.—A fair amount of business has been done for Great Britain in low qualities at about former rates. Australia also has taken rather largely. In Benares nothing doing for the home markets, and very little for other places. Saltpetre.—We have again to report an advance of about 8 to ten annas per md., caused by the warlike accounts received from Europe, and the consequent advance in the value in London. The latest prices paid have been at Co.'s Rs. 10.4 to 10.8 for 5 per cent. refraction, at which rates some forward contracts have also been entered into. The higher refractions have been sold very irregularly. Rice.—Scarce and still advancing, especially table qualities, which reach Rs. 3.4 Ballam for Mauritius to 2.6. Raw Silk.—We do not remember having such a dull market for some years past. Not a single transaction worthy of note has been effected during the fortnight, although holders are anxious to realise at a reasonable reduction. A few small sales of Hurrupat's alone have been made at Co.'s Rs. 10.4 to 11.4 per ser. Silk Piece Goods.—Hardly 6,000 ps. have been sold since our last. Stock about 50,000 ps., but again chiefly of inferior makes. The last advices from the manufacturing districts report a decline of about Rs. 10 per corg. We do not expect to see much business done until the result of the May sale in London is known here. Shell Lac continues in fair demand at previous rates. Not much in stock, and holders in some instances demand an advance. Lac Dye.—Hardly anything worthy of note doing in this dye. Hides and Skins.—The business done has been moderate for England, but some considerable purchases have been made for the Continent. Prices unchanged and stocks small. No change in Buffalo Hides or Goat Skins since our last report. Inte and Hemp.—There is no demand for Jute for export. The Gunny manufacturers, however, have taken largely of the low qualities at a decline of about 4 annas per md. The exports consist chiefly on account of holders and balers. Best Serajunge is still worth Co.'s Rs. 3.9 per md. Nothing yet done in Hemp. Oil Seeds.—Linsced in small demand, chiefly on account of the inferiority of the supplies. The low country crops seems to have suffered considerably from the early rains, which have damaged the seed. We quote inferior to good Co.'s Rs. 2.14 to 3.14. Bold large and picked, Co.'s Rs. 3.10 to 3.14. Rapeseed lower in value; we quote at 3.7 to 3.12. Teel Poppy nominal at quotations. Cutch.—The last arrivals fetched Co.'s Rs. 8.1. Purchases are being made at Rangoon to land here at 8.8. Safflower.—About 1,000 mds. have been sold of the new crop, including some parcels of the W and G mark, at Co.'s Rs. 65. Native qualities at 58 to 62. The crop estimated at 1,200 mds., and the quality in general not so good as the previous seasons.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, May 17).—Grey Shirtings.—Market for this staple has been a little dull, and prices have declined at 1 to 2 annas per piece. 39 inch 50 reeds at Co.'s Rs. 4.8 to 4.9; do. 54 do. at 5.2 to 5.3; do. 56 do. at 5.8; do. 60 do. at 6.11; 45 do. at 5.7 to 5.8; do. at 9.12. White Shirtings are also lower in value. 36 inches 50 reeds at Co.'s Rs. 4.10; do. 54 do. at 5.2; do. 60 do. at 6.12. White Figured Shirtings and Brocades.—Market continues active, and prices 1 to 2 annas per piece higher. 40 yards at Co.'s Rs. 7.2; 54 do. 9.2; and brocades at 6.15. Grey Jaconets.—Market same as before. 39 inches at Co.'s Rs. 1.13 to 2.10; 45 do. at 3.2 to 3.5. White Jaconets.—Market is lower, say 1 to 2 per piece. 38 inches at Co.'s Rs. 1.15 to 4.8; 45 do. at 4.13 to 5.12. Grey Madapolams.—Market is also lower in value, say 1 anna to 1.6 per piece. 32 inches 42 reeds at Co.'s Rs. 2.7; do. 50 do. at 2.8; do. 56 do. at 2.12. White Twills.—Market is active. 36 inches 40 yards at Co.'s Rs. 6.2. Woolens.—Market dull. Copper.—Prices maintained, and in good demand, with the exception of Sheathing Copper and Yellow Metal, which are lower. Sheathing 41-12 to 42, Brazer 45, English Tile 41 to 42, Australian 49 to 50. Iron.—Stocks are moderate, and prices looking up. Flat Bar and Bolt 3.12 to 3.14. Hoop 4.9. Sheet 4.12.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE GANJAM COAST.—Sanction has been accorded for the erection of distinguishing marks at the minor ports on the Ganjam coast. One black and white column at Barpanapandoo, twenty-four miles above Calingapatam; a white obelisk on a hill near the Travellers' Bungalow, at Poondy, five miles higher up; two black and white columns at Barwah, seventeen miles beyond Poondy; and an obelisk and a column at Sonapoor, twenty miles from Barwah. The cost of each column has been estimated at Rs. 730, and that of the obelisks at Rs. 500 each.

THE DRAINAGE.—The Madras Times has the following:—"Sir Charles Trevelyan has not been slow in redeeming the promise he made to the members of the Chamber of Commerce, on the occasion of the presentation of their congratulatory address that prompt measures should be taken to lessen, as far as possible, the nuisance they complained of, arising from the discharge of sewerage from the main drain near the fort. We understand that it is intended, at the suggestion of Colonel Cotton, to flush the said drain with water raised by steam power from Cochran's canal; and that a large reservoir is to be built for the purpose on one of the bastions of the western wall of Black Town." To this we may add that it is believed the north drain is to be cleansed in a similar manner, and that these operations will, for the present at least, constitute all that is to be done in a considerable way for the municipal improvement of Madras, there being no money in hand or obtainable under existing circumstances for carrying out larger improvements.

GOVERNMENT RECORDS.—The collector of Madras addressed Government on the 21st April last on a practice prevalent in his district of administering the prepared juice of the milk-hedge to children on their birth—a practice which is found by experience to destroy many lives. He enclosed a letter from the Zillah surgeon to the same effect. As a remedy for this evil Dr. Colebrook suggested that besides the issue of a proclamation in the Zillah Gazette pointing out the injury sustained by such a practice, that a midwife bearing a diploma from the Lying-in-Hospital at Madras should be sent to warn and advise the people in the district against such an unnatural practice. The following order on the foregoing was passed on the 3rd May:—"Resolved that a copy of the above letter and of its enclosure be forwarded to the officer in charge of the Lying-in-Hospital, and that he be requested to report through the Director General, medical department, upon the suggestion made by the Zillah surgeon of Madras at the end of para. 2 of his letter."

COCHIN, May 7.—During the stormy weather last week, a party of slaves, while at work in the fields at Poothooppally, near Cottayam, were struck dead by a flash of lightning. The party consisted of seventeen persons, and it is supposed they were struck whilst they had in unison raised their mattocks above their heads.

OOTACAMUND, 6th May.—We have lost a most valuable member of our community here, in Major General Watson, who closed his earthly career yesterday morning at an early hour, most universally regretted, and his remains were followed to the grave this morning by a large concourse of persons, consisting of nearly all the male residents of the station, affording ample testimony of the esteem in which the deceased was held. Indeed his benevolence, open-handed charity, and sterling merit were generally acknowledged. Our worthy chaplain, Mr. Lugard, performed the mournful service in the church with all due solemnity, but our excellent bishop read the most material portion at the grave, with all the pathos and intonation of a deeply sympathising personal friend.—Athenaeum.

SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN has accepted the office of honorary colonel-in-chief of the Infantry Volunteer Guards.

HYDERABAD, May 9.—The Rajah of Kowlas has come in. It is now generally understood of him that he refused to accede to the proposals of Nana, and would take no part in the rebellion. The offence, then, that may be alleged against him is misprision of treason, which, though misprision of treason and felony is, as I am told, known to and punishable by Mahomedan law, is not popularly understood. I think the Rajah of Kowlas should have the benefit to some extent of the common opinion; but then how necessary it is that there should be a reorganisation of the moral system of the country. Azmut Jung pressed upon with some severity by the Nizam and threatened with forcible expulsion from his capital, quitted it on the night of the 3rd instant; he is now in a suburb of the city, and, it is said, will move towards his destination in a day or two. The trials of those who harboured Rohillas are proceeding slowly. I do not know where the hitch is. Some make a difficulty of appearing before the court to answer for their conduct; but the trial of the others within reach of its authority need not be postponed on that account. On the festival of the Eed, Moulvie Ukhbur, the preacher in the Mecca mosque, who on more than one occasion has incurred unpopularity by preaching doctrines adverse to the Jihad, on descending from the pulpit read the Khootba in a loud voice in the name of Nizam ool Moolk Asuf Jah, justifying it to the Mahomedans on the ground that the money of Hyderabad was coined in the name of that sovereignty, and by consequence Afzool ood Dowla must be understood to be the King of it. Some people here affirm that this Moulvie is acting an insidious part, and that his public condemnation of the rebellion of his co-religionists is meant to keep up the excitement. It is not so frequent as to make this the basis of such an opinion. But two circumstances out of many which I could mention stand so firmly in support of his truth as in my opinion to allay all suspicion of any sinister design. Moulvie Ukhbur, at Delhi, about twenty-seven years ago, received a paper of thanks from some fifty or sixty respectable inhabitants of the place, for having preached down the doctrines of the Wuhabees on a holy war which had begun to prevail there. And about a year ago at Hyderabad it is within my knowledge that he called upon a poor unknown Wuhabee to lecture him as to the impropriety of his doctrines. This circumstance is accidentally known to me from the complaint of a connection of the reputed Wuhabee, and is perhaps not known to twenty persons besides. He has also excited great scandal by advising the Government to dismiss Moulvie Suleem from its territories, and to apprehend one Khodrut Oolla, who came from Madras, from whence the Wuhabees generally come, to preach Wuhabee doctrines. He has besides been reviled in unmeasured language by proclamations posted at the mosque where he preaches, and by anonymous notes placed within his pulpit. I question whether the example of Moulvie Ukhbur, in regard to the Khootba, will be followed by other Moulvies here. We shall know nothing of it, for the Khootbas will be read as formerly, in an inaudible voice.—Englishman.

CAPTAIN WEST, of the 11th Madras Native Infantry, has been tried by general court martial for a very extraordinary offence. It would appear that the boatmen at a ferry on the way from Tellicherry to Cannanore made some demur as to effecting the transit of his conveyance, or doing it on his terms; whereupon, about midnight, the gallant commander ordered out a naitque and six sepoy, with muskets loaded with ball cartridge, and leading them down to the ferry, ordered them to fire,—not at the ferrymen, we may suppose, but for their intimidation! Furthermore, on his way back, he made the sepoy fire blank cartridge, all these firings being, as the indictment alleges, highly irregular, and tending to create alarm in the neighbourhood. Captain West was convicted in both instances of the charge, and was sentenced to three months' suspension from rank, pay, and allowances. The Commander in Chief, Sir Patrick Grant, while confirming "the very lenient sentence," also remitted it, for reasons which he does not give to the public, but will communicate through the officer commanding the Mysore division. His Excellency directs, however, that Captain West shall not be employed on any detached duties, unless a senior officer may be present to exercise the command. He, a full-grown captain, is not to be trusted by himself with troops at his command. His excellency regards him and treats him as childish, founding his judgment on a passage in the defence in which he says that he "made no unmilitary or officerlike use of the guard, the men of which were, and still are, ignorant of any object he might have had in what he did; for although he intended the second discharge for a joke with a friend, he took care not to let the sepoys perceive that object from his manner which was outwardly sedate throughout, and they went away totally unaware of any irregularity having taken place!" An officer who uses his men as the agents of his jokes, and defends his conduct on the plea that from his outwardly sedate manner they did not know what he was doing, requires much instruction in his duties before he can be safely entrusted with the command of troops.

THE PEOPLE'S PARK.—Madras is to have a "People's Park," and one of the first steps in the direction of carrying out the intended improvement has been already taken. The locality chosen is the esplanade to the west of the town wall, and as the contemplated arrangements include the removal of this useless line of ramparts, the work of demolition was commenced on the evening of the 23rd of May, in the presence of his Excellency the Governor. The case-mated battery forming the southern extremity of the wall was blown up with gunpowder. The duty was entrusted to Sergeant P. D. Riordan, of the Madras Sappers, assisted by Sergeant Fitzgerald and about thirty of the sepoys of the corps. The extent of rampart was about forty yards on the west face and thirty on the south. About twelve mines were laid, containing some twenty, and others as much as twenty-eight lbs. of powder, according to the thickness of the wall. The ramparts here are between three and four yards thick, some of the bastions being a great deal more. About six o'clock the Honourable the Governor, attended by his Private Secretary, the three Municipal Commissioners, Captain Hinchins, of the Sappers and Miners, and some other officials arrived on the ground, and after having inspected the works, preparations were at once made for setting fire to the trains. Notwithstanding that no notice was publicly made of what was to come off, an immense concourse of people assembled in the locality. All preliminary arrangements having been completed, the trains on the west side at a given signal were fired as rapidly as possible by Sergeants Riordan and Fitzgerald; a flash and a puff of smoke appeared as each train lit, then came about three minutes' intense suspense, and with loud reports huge masses of masonry and mud work fell to the ground, leaving what was a short time before an unbroken line of fortification, a mass of jelly. The mines on the south side were similarly fired, and with the same results, the only failure being for the explosion of the south-west angle, which, owing to the dampness of the earth affecting the trains, did not go off. The other explosions were most effective, and nothing now remains but the inner line of masonry, which is only about a foot in thickness, and can be removed with little trouble and expense. His Excellency was very well pleased at the manner in which everything was carried out, and on passing by after all was over, complimented Sergeant Riordan on the successful termination of the evening's work.

VIZAGAPATAM.—A most serious accident befell the temporary barracks in occupation of the 2nd European Regiment at Vizagapatam on the 8th May. About the middle of the night there was a heavy squall and storm, which entirely destroyed the new roof of these buildings; the roof, together with the pillars supporting it, fell in with a tremendous crash; six poor fellows were seriously hurt, and the life of one is despaired of by reason of the fractures and other injuries received.

SIR ROBERT HAMILTON.

A brief sketch of the Indian career of a man like Sir Robert Hamilton will not be unacceptable to our readers, and this, through the kindness of a correspondent, we are enabled to lay before them.

Mr. Hamilton arrived at Calcutta in January, 1821, and, on passing college, obtained two gold medals. He was then appointed Assistant Magistrate at Benares, under Mr. W. W. Bird, who was then judge and magistrate. From Benares he was deputed to Azimgur and Ghazepore, to act as registrar, and subsequently was appointed to Benares in this capacity, being eventually appointed Magistrate there in acknowledgment of his successful services in restoring order and tranquillity at the time of the grain riots. He held this office at the time when the law for the abolition of suttee came into force. The carrying of it into effect at Benares was left to him, and suttee was suppressed at the Holy City of the Hindoos without a murmur of dissatisfaction arising. Lord William Bentinck recorded his opinion that to this signal success at Benares it was mainly due that suttee was so quietly and thoroughly put down throughout British India.

Mr. Hamilton's next appointment was that of Deputy Secretary to Government in the Judicial Department. Here he remained till he was entitled to take furlough. On his return to India he was appointed Magistrate and Collector of Delhi, and was thence sent to take charge of Meerut, where he remained till appointed Officiating Commissioner of the Furruckabad and Agra Division, from which appointment he was taken by Sir Charles Metcalfe, and made Secretary to the Government of the North-West Provinces in the Political, Secret, and General Departments. This appointment he held till Sir Charles resigned the government of the North-West. It was then proposed to transfer him to the Secretariat at Calcutta, but he returned to his appointment as Commissioner of the Agra Division. This was about the time of the last terrible famine in the North-West Provinces, and to Mr. Hamilton, of course, fell the duty of originating and carrying into effect the means of alleviating the horrors of that dreadful visitation. For his services on the occasion he was honourably noticed in a despatch from the Court of Directors, published in the official Gazette. While at Agra, Mr. Hamilton originated the bullock train, and he subsequently introduced the transit carriages for passengers, still so great a convenience to the public.

He was next appointed Secretary to the Government of the North-West Provinces in all its departments, for which he declined the office of Chief Magistrate of Calcutta, with a seat at the Military Board, offered him by Lord Auckland. He had now much influence in promoting public improvements, and the Ganges Canal and the cultivation of tea (under Dr. Jameson), alike benefited by his support. Mr. Hamilton remained as Secretary under Sir George Clerk's administration, and on that gentleman's retirement was sent on a mission to Bhawalpore, to arrange for the opening of the Sutlej to trade. Proving eminently successful in his negotiations, Lord Ellenborough rewarded him with the appointment of Resident of Indore.

The politics of Sir Robert Hamilton are truly liberal. He was opposed to the extinction of the landed gentry, talookdars, and zemindars, by the system of settlement, always maintaining that the hold this class had on the people was not to be slightly regarded. Opposed to the annexation policy, he had, while in Central India, to fight hard for the rights of those under treaty. In all matters of importance to the welfare of the country he has ever been one of the foremost advocates and promoters. Education, the post-office, the bullock train, the electric telegraph, railroads (prospectively), and regular Customs tariffs have all been introduced into Central India through his influence. That part of the country has prospered much under his auspices.

Sir Robert was in England when the mutiny broke out,—he had not been there three months,—but he lost no time in returning to his now somewhat delicate and dangerous post. The plan of the campaign so admirably executed by Sir Hugh Rose was drawn up by him, and received the approval of the Governor general and that of the Governor of Bombay, to whose invaluable support the force employed in carrying it out is largely indebted. Having accompanied Sir Hugh Rose during his campaign, Sir Robert's health suffered, and his return to England became necessary in the opinion of his medical advisers. He was offered a seat in the Supreme Council, but this he declined, and sailed for England.

Sir Robert Hamilton owed his appointment to the Indian Service to George Canning, when the latter was President of the Board of Control.—Bombay Gazette.

A FAREWELL ORDER.

The following is General Napier's farewell order to the troops that have lately left his division:—

Division Order by Brigadier General Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., Commanding Gwalior Division.
Camp Seronge, 20th April, 1859.

To Major Lightfoot, 1st troop of Bombay horse artillery; to Captain Fuller and Captain Brown, field batteries Nos. 4 and 18; to the 14th light dragoons; to the 86th regiment; to the 3rd Bombay European regiment; and the 25th Bombay native light infantry.

I cannot part with the troops now leaving the Gwalior division, after having been associated with them during a year's eventful service, without a few words to convey to them my admiration and regard for their excellent and soldier-like conduct during the period they passed under my command.

It would not become me to advert to the more prominent actions of the late campaign, to which the praise of the highest authority has already been awarded, but the services to which I will refer, and which the troops whom I now address were called upon to render, when they scarce had breathing time after their wonderful exertion at Jhansi, Calpee, and Gwalior, though not of so showy and conspicuous a nature as the great battles of the campaign, yet frequently called even for more individual exercise of valour and endurance of hardship, and exposure, at the most inclement season of the year.

I need but remind you of the state of the Gwalior division when it came into our hands. The Jhansi district was overrun by many thousands of rebels, so that the British cantonments were the only part of which we had undisputed possession. In the south of Gwalior, a dangerous insurrection was eagerly watched by 7,000 of Scindiah's disbanded troops.

The return of the fugitive rebels under the Rao Sahib and Tantia Topee threatened to overturn every recommencement of order, and at a later period, the Oudh rebels under Ferozeshah, evading many columns, swept through the country.

To the excellent arrangements of Colonel Liddell, and to his gallant regiment, the 3rd Bombay Europeans; to Major Lightfoot, and his noble troop of horse artillery; to the squadron of the 14th light dragoons under Major Thompson, and the force under Major McMahon, is greatly due that the rebels have been defeated and scattered, and the district restored to its present state of tranquillity.

By the judicious promptitude of Colonel Liddell's movements the state of "Tehree" was saved from devastation in October last; each of these officers and the columns they led, have highly distinguished themselves.

To Colonel Lowth and the 86th regiment; to Captain Fuller and Captain Browne, Bombay artillery, and their batteries; to Colonel Robertson, of the 25th native infantry, I am indebted for their services in every part of the district;—in the ravines of the Chumbul, at the siege of Powrie, in the pursuit and destruction by Colonel Robertson of its fugitive garrison at Beejapore, and in the surprise of Ferozeshah, in the jungle of Arone, under Captain Rice.

To Colonel Scudamore it is due that the state of "Dutteah," and the Central Districts of Gwalior were protected from the rebels under Rao Sahib, who were baffled by the movements of his small, but undaunted column.

The brilliant 14th light dragoons, and their charges at Jowra, Allipooa, and Ramode, will not easily be forgotten.

Although I cannot hope that there is nothing left to be done, yet tranquillity has in a great measure been restored. The Rao Sahib and Ferozeshah, with the remnant of their followers, are scattered fugitives in the jungles. Tantia Topee has paid the penalty of his crimes. Rajah Maun Sing has surrendered.

This incomplete notice faintly records the valuable services which have been rendered to the State by you during the past year, nor is it necessary now to advert to the share in those services borne by the excellent troops still in the division.

It will always be a source of pleasure and pride to me to remember that I have commanded such troops; and to their officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers, I bid a cordial and sincere farewell.—By order.

(Signed) J. A. Todd, Major,
Asst. Adjt. General, Gwalior Division.

COMMERCE BETWEEN INDIA AND CENTRAL ASIA BY THE INDUS.

THE most rapidly-rising city in the East is undoubtedly Kurrachee. It is now not only a seaport of considerable commerce, but the terminus of a railway and the entrepôt of the commerce of half a continent. The traders of Central Asia are largely availing themselves of the advantages it offers, and the wools of Thibet and the shawls of Cashmere are now freely exchanged in the Kurrachee bazaars for the cottons of Manchester and the broadcloths of Yorkshire. The commerce of Kurrachee has of late years steadily progressed at the rate of 20 per cent., and latterly an impulse has been given to it which will nearly double this rate. As soon as the Scinde Railway opens Mr. Andrew* calculates that goods brought to Attock, on the Indus, by steamer and rail may be placed in the Cabul, Ghizni, Candahar, Herat, Balkh, and Bokhara markets at a much less cost than by the expensive caravan route from Novogorod and the Volga. There is a great trade in silk between Bokhara and the Punjab. The trade of India with Central Asia amounts to about £1,000,000 sterling. One portion of this seeks egress and ingress on the borders of Scinde, and the remainder passes through the Punjab. By the former route the trade is carried on by means of the Indus, and by camels, horses, mules, and more recently by carts; by the latter route it is carried on by multitudes of camels, mules, and ponies, which are used in the transit instead of wheel carriages. A string of camels, numbering 5,000, occasionally comes from Bokhara to Dhera Ismael Khan on the Indus. The merchants travel armed, and are accompanied by their families, and the caravan constitutes, as it were, a moveable bazaar. Silks and wools, groceries, and spices, furs from Russia, and gold with the Bokhara stamp, although extracted from the Ural mountains, dyes, books, cloths, and metals are the wares they carry. Arrived at Dhera Ismael Khan, the families and baggage are deposited, and the merchants severally start, with their trains and merchandise for the south. About 20,000 camels are employed in this trade, exclusive of ponies and mules. A large number of armed retainers accompany the caravans, besides 8,000 servants. In former times the Indus was the great highway of commerce between India and Central Asia; but upon the dismemberment of the empire of the Great Mogul the river fell under the power of a multitude of petty chiefs, whose exactions gradually extinguished the traffic. One consequence of this revolution was that Cabul, Bokhara, and Persia, instead of being supplied from India with manufactured goods, has had previously been the case, received most of their supplies from Russia, which from the facilities of conveyance afforded by the Volga running into the Caspian Sea was enabled to come into markets of the East upon eligible terms. These advantages possessed by Russia have, it is understood, been latterly augmented by the establishment of steam vessels upon the Volga and the Caspian; and the Russians are now supplanting the English manufactures in the Punjab, and even threatening to do so in the north-west provinces of Bengal. The imports into Central Asia consist of European manufactures of every description—calicoes, long cloth, chintzes, muslins, and other kinds of cotton goods, broad cloths, velvets, nankeens, gold thread, copper and brass wares of all description, cutlery, and jewellery, and, in fact, of almost every article which compose British exports, and including considerable quantities of refined sugar. At present (besides the Valley of the Indus) there are three routes by which these imports are received:—1st. By the Persian Gulf, through Persia. 2nd. By the caravans from the Smyrna and the ports in the Levant; and 3rd, chiefly, and by far in the largest proportion, through Russia. Let us trace the route from the latter, as being the chief source. Goods either manufactured in, or imported into Russia from England, France, and Germany, many of them purchased at the great German fairs, after paying very high transit duties, are shipped at some point on the Volga, and conveyed by steam boats down that river to the head of the Caspian Sea. They are then conveyed the whole length of that sea by other steam boats established thereon to Balfrush, where they are again landed. From that point they are conveyed by the eastern caravans by the high road through Sari to Bustum. At this point one road diverges in a north-easterly direction to Bokhara, Khiva, and Balkh. Another road continues onward in an easterly course to Herat, thence to Candahar, and so on to Ghizni and Cabool; from whence Peshawur, Attock, Lahore, and all the country of the Punjab and Cashmere have partly been supplied. The imports of Cabul are indigo, cotton, sugar, calicoes, muslins, and shawls; and the exports are horses, the madder of Ghizni and Candahar, and fresh and dried fruits. The chief carriers of the trade are the Lohanee merchants, a pastoral race of Afghans, who occupy the country eastward from Ghizni to the Indus. The Lohanee caravan usually reaches Cabul about the beginning of June; and after the merchants have disposed of their goods they prosecute their journey onward to Bokhara. The imports which Bokhara receives from India are the same as those received by Cabul. About two thousand camel loads of goods reach Cabul from India yearly, and about half this quantity is transmitted to Turkestan. The imports into Bokhara from Russia are white cloths, muslins, chintzes, broadcloths, velvets, brocade, nankeen, gold thread, cochineal, refined sugar, honey, furs, locks, iron pots, wire, copper and brass, leather, pepper, needles, inferior cutlery and jewellery, hardware, and a variety of other small articles. English broadcloth is much prized in Bokhara, but none reaches that country except through Russia or Persia; from which countries, although its transmission is subject to heavy imposts, it can be brought at a cheaper rate than from India, in consequence of the expense of the land-carriage through Afghanistan, which, however, the opening of the Indus would in a great measure supersede. Besides the Russian and Indian trade Bokhara carries on a considerable traffic with China by way of Cashgar and Yarkund. The imports to Bokhara from China are China ware, musk, bullion, and tea. Of the latter article there are 950 horseloads, or 200,000lb. transmitted annually, although the difficulties of the road, and the long land-carriage through Tibet necessarily must enhance the price. A horseload of 250lb. costs 60 tillas in Yarkund, and sells for 100 tillas in Bokhara. It is entirely green tea, which is carried to Turkestan, and the best comes from a place in China called Turkh, and is packed in small boxes of Banca tin, from whence it is called Banca tea. The sugar-candy of China is also imported into Turkestan, but being a comparatively cumbersome article it cannot be carried by the same route as the tea, but is conveyed from China to Bombay, from thence up the Persian Gulf, and on by land to Teheran; from thence a large quantity is carried across the Caspian to the Bay of Balkhan, from whence it is carried to Khiva, and a small quantity is also carried by way of Meshed. It is obvious that if the Indus were available for commerce it would afford a much easier route for the produce of China to Khiva and Bokhara than either the route through Tibet or the route through Persia; and many of the commodities which find their way into Central Asia through circuitous routes would necessarily take the route of the Indus so soon as that channel of communication was properly opened up. The principal exports of Bokhara are silk, wool, and lambskins. The silk is chiefly produced on the banks of the Oxus, where the mulberry grows in the most luxuriant manner, and nearly all the inhabitants are engaged in rearing the silkworm during the summer months. The lambskins of Bokhara are renowned throughout the East, and are only procurable at Karahool, a small district lying between Bokhara and the Oxus. These skins are chiefly carried to Persia; but the risks of the transport are great, in consequence of the unsettled condition of the tribes between the two countries. From these causes it is not possible to negotiate a bill between Meshed and Bokhara, and the cost of transport is very high. It will therefore from this be perceived the immense advantages which Kurrachee is likely to derive both from natural position and the assistance of science. The city will not only be a terminus of railways, but a grand junction centre of the Oriental system of electric telegraphs. The enterprise and industry of the inhabitants are well known, and we feel convinced that they only require the usual business facilities of large towns to place the capital of Scinde in the position it ought to occupy amongst the mercantile cities of the East.—Bombay Telegraph and Courier, April 21.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NUGGUR PARKUR.—Telegram from Lieutenant Colonel Evans, commanding moveable column, dated Kijreara, May 20, 1859:—"Marched here with column 60 miles in 28 hours; arrived last night. Cavalry had an affair with rebels. Heavy rain; banks of Loonee river quicksands; and branches of river full of water. One sowar wounded, five rebels killed; nine prisoners. Ladjee gave himself up to-day; Rana and others surrounded. Durbar Naib Wakeel and Hakim of Sahore, with several hundred Joudhpore sowars here. Kupree is a prisoner. Lieut. Tyrwhitt deserves the praise; all due to him."

A MEDAL FOR NATIVE GIRLS.—At the third day's funeral ceremonies, which took place on Thursday week for the death of Avabaye, wife of Mr. Cursetjee Ruttonjee Colah, this young Parsee contributed a sum of a thousand rupees to the Zoroastrian female schools. This sum is to be invested in the five per cent. Government loans; and the proceeds are to be expended on a medal bearing the name and a likeness of the deceased lady, which will be presented annually to the most proficient girl in the schools.

USEFUL FIBRES.—The manufacture of a fibre from the "khip" plant is said to be equal to our best hemp. It may be mentioned that this plant is very abundant in the Kurrachee collectorate from the Sehwan districts down to Tatta; it is also met with all over the northern portion of the Shahbunder district and throughout most parts of Scinde. The "khip" and the "ukh"

(another plant which yields a still stronger fibre and a gum similar in its properties to gutta percha), are perfect weeds in many cultivated portions of this country, where, when once they have taken root, they are difficult to eradicate, and give in fact constant labour an annoyance to the cultivator. The "khip" is well known to the Juts, or camel-men, who make ropes from its fibre for their camel-gear; the cultivators also make use of it for their water-wheels, and occasionally for matting. Its use as a fibrous plant has already attracted the attention of Mr. A. F. Bellasis, the collector of Kurrachee, who has obtained sanction from the commissioner to prepare a large sample of about fifty maunds of the fibre, and Captain Lionel Dunsterville has undertaken to prepare this quantity in the Sehwan districts; we therefore hope soon to have sufficient of this khip fibre in Kurrachee to supply a sample to all parties interested, and we have no doubt a specimen of it will be sent to the Kurrachee Museum. The best plan to make it more fully known is to send a large sample to the trade in London, where its intrinsic value as a fibre will soon be determined.

MR. ARMISTEAD of the department of Public Works, died suddenly on the evening of the 30th May, on the railway train between Bombay and Campoolee. He was about to proceed to Europe on sick certificate, and was on his way to Poona to see his medical attendant when the melancholy event took place.

CHOLERA AT SATTARA.—A private letter from Sattara mentions that cholera rages to a frightful extent at that place, no less than six deaths having occurred within a few hours of each other, and all of them among Europeans. It is also reported that the casualties daily amount to twenty-one on an average. The weather is excessively hot and unbearable.

ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE.—We hear that Lieut. Brett, who was lately tried by court martial at Kurrachee, and sentenced to six years' penal servitude, with loss of commission, attempted to commit suicide by throwing himself into a well, from which, however, he was immediately rescued. Mr. Brett arrived in Bombay on the 31st of May, by H.M.'s steamer Berenice, from Kurrachee, and has been handed over to the superintendent of convicts.

CAPTAIN R. G. BRACKENBURY.—We regret to announce the death of Captain R. G. Brackenbury, of H.M.'s 61st regiment. The melancholy event occurred at Poona on the 27th May, from cholera. Captain Brackenbury served as aide de camp to General Wyndham at the action of Pandoo Nuddee, on the 26th November, 1857, and during the operations of the 27th and 28th November; also at the defence of Cawnpore in command of the various depots when the Gwalior mutineers were defeated; and was present with the 61st regiment at the action of Kallee Nuddee.

THE RACE-WINNER "ARGUS."—We learn that Colonel Blood's celebrated Arab horse "Argus" has been purchased by Government, to be presented to the Khan of Khelat.

CHOLERA.—We regret to announce that symptoms of cholera have begun to manifest themselves in the Native Town. The epidemic has broken out in Girgaum, where ten natives succumbed to its stroke in the course of the last week in May.

TESTIMONIAL TO MR. C. FORJETT.—The native gentry, under the presidency of Sir Cursetjee Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy, Bart., had a meeting on the 28th May, at which it was resolved to present an address and a piece of plate to Mr. Forjett, the deputy commissioner of police, about to depart for England, in testimony of their high appreciation of his official character and proceedings. Few testimonials have been so well deserved.

OUR ACCOUNTANT GENERAL.—We have been given to understand that Mr. Sylvester Douglas Birch, sub-treasurer at Madras, has been appointed by the Government of India accountant-general at this presidency, in the room of Mr. Edward Eden Elliott, retired, and that Mr. Gregor Grant, sub-treasurer at Bombay, will act as accountant-general until the arrival of Mr. Birch from Madras to take up his new appointment.

EXTRAORDINARY ACCIDENT.—Mr. Boddington, C.E., went out with some Madras cavalry officers in a boat to shoot pigeons at a dangerous place on the Nerbudda, called "Marble Rocks"; the noise of the firing disturbed a swarm of wild bees, which attacked the party so furiously that, as the only hope of saving themselves from being stung to death, they jumped into the river. The officers saved themselves by clinging to the boat, but Boddington was never seen afterwards, nor have I yet heard of his body being found. The survivors are dreadfully stung, and temporarily at least blinded."

A NEW ATTORNEY.—Mr. William Saunders Sebright Green, who lately arrived from England, was sworn in on the 23rd May, before Sir Joseph Arnould, as an attorney, solicitor, and proctor of the Supreme Court of Judicature at Bombay. We learn that Mr. Green will join his practice with that of Mr. Cumroodeen Tyebjee, under the style of Messrs. Green and Cumroodeen.

SIR BARTLE FRERE.—A deputation from the Parsee community of Kurrachee waited on Sir Bartle Frere on the 25th May, and presented him with a congratulatory address on the distinction recently conferred on him by his Sovereign; the address was subscribed by nearly the whole of the Zoroastrian population of the station.

CHOLERA AT POONA.—We regret to have to announce the cholera of a very malignant type has recently broken out at Poona amongst the European troops, chiefly amongst the artillery. An officer of the 61st Foot, Captain Brackenbury, has, we regret to learn, succumbed to the fell epidemic; and altogether ten Europeans have died of cholera since the 21st May in this place. Poona was yesterday visited by a thunderstorm, when some rain fell, which, we hope, will clear the atmosphere, and rid us of this plague. The medical officers of the brigade are indefatigable, as they always are in similar afflictions, in their efforts to stay this awful scourge.—Poona Observer, May 28.

We are much concerned at being compelled to state that, notwithstanding the very great change that has taken place in the weather during the past week, and that we experienced a violent thunder-storm, accompanied by a heavy downpour of rain, on the evening of Sunday last, the fatal scourge of cholera still continues unabated at Poona, and has carried off many Europeans from among the troops and others resident in camp since our last. H. M.'s 61st regiment have, we regret to learn, been amongst the greatest sufferers from the epidemic; so much so, that it was proposed by the medical officers to send them away immediately, by detachments of 200 men each, to Nigree, Wurgaum, Karlee, and Khandalla, on the Bombay road, in order to try what effect the change of locality may have. Strange to say, although the Europeans have suffered so much from the ravages of this fell disease within the last ten days, the deaths amongst the natives from cholera have been much fewer than is usual at this season of the year. From motives, which we trust will be duly appreciated by our readers, we have deemed it prudent to omit full particulars of the melancholy list of those who have fallen before the destroyer since our last issue; but we deem it only right to mention that there have been thirty-two deaths in all since Thursday last; namely, one officer, (Dr. J. M. Bowie, Bombay medical establishment); thirteen men of the Jager corps, the same number of H.M.'s 61st foot, one man of the 4th troop of Bombay horse artillery, three women, and one child. The epidemic has greatly abated in the artillery lines, but it still continues to ravage those of the Jager corps and H.M.'s 61st regiment. The disease has as yet been confined to the horse artillery lines, and the barracks occupied by the 61st foot and Jager corps—formerly those of the 3rd European regiment. Ghorpoorie, and all other parts of the camp and station, as well as Kirkee, have as yet providentially escaped the contagion.—Id., June 1.

BANGALORE, it has been finally decided by the Supreme Government, is to be a civil station.

Mr. Justice Temple leaves Ceylon on a year's leave and Mr. R. F. Morgan, who returned by the last steamer from England, will act as Puisne Judge of the Supreme Court.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Our Cabul advices are from the 15th April to 1st May:—On the 15th the Kohistanes presented themselves, who were ordered to have their troops passed in review, but they declined doing so until they were paid their arrears, to which the Ameer did not assent. On the 16th the Ameer, accompanied by Sirdar Sultan Mahomed Khan and Gholam Mahomed Khan, Mooktear, went to the Bala Hissar, and reviewed the troops of Sirdar Mahomed Ameer Khan and Sirdar Mahomed Shureef Khan. He was much gratified with the manner in which they went through their manoeuvres, and ordered pay to be issued to them. On the 17th a letter was received from Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan, ruler of Balkh, stating that an agent of the King of Bokhara had arrived with a letter from his master, in which he says that the ruler of Koondooz, who had rebelled and withheld the payment of tribute to him, has asked pardon for his late disobedience, and requested that the district of Koondooz, which formerly belonged to him (the King of Koondooz), may be restored to him, by which the friendship which exists between him and the Ameer will be strengthened, otherwise hostilities will take place. On the 19th the Ameer, after holding a private consultation with some of his Sirdars, ordered the troops of Sirdar Mahomed Ameer Khan to proceed to Huzara, to collect revenues. It is rumoured that their ultimate destination is Turkistan. On the 20th the Dost ordered Shah Newaz Khan, his grandson, to be released from confinement, and a khillut to be bestowed on him. On the 22nd a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Ufzul Khan was received, stating that Hyder Khan Kuzilbash, who was sent to Tashkir Khan, as its ruler, had died there, and that he was sorry for the loss of such a man. The Dost was much grieved, and wrote in reply to appoint one of Hyder Khan's sons in his place. On the 23rd some sowers of Sirdar Shere Ally Khan and Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan arrived from Candahar, who were ordered to come in the evening. It is learnt from them that a dispute has taken place between the two Sirdars, and that they have brought some papers from them. On the 24th a kossid from Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, ruler of Candahar, arrived with a letter, stating that Sirdar Sultan Ahmed Jan, ruler of Herat, had sent a man with a letter to Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan, who confined the bearer, and sent the letter to the Ameer, which states that as Sirdar Shere Ally Khan has turned out his (Sirdar Futteh Mahomed Khan's) brother from Candahar, it will be advisable for him to come to Herat at once; and on his arrival there he (Sirdar Sultan Ahmed Jan) will oppose Sirdar Shere Ally Khan, and get possession of Candahar. The Ameer said that Sirdar Sultan Ahmed Jan is sowing the seed of discord in his family, he should, therefore, be well punished. On the 25th news arrived from Candahar that Sirdar Shere Ally Khan had sent some of his courtiers to bring back Sirdar Jelalooddeen Khan, who had gone to Kurrachee displeased with him; but they had returned unsuccessful. The Dost ordered two regiments and some artillery of Sirdar Shere Ally Khan to proceed to Ghuznie. On the 26th, Sirdar Wully Mahomed Khan arrived in Cabul from Jellabad. On the 27th, a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, ruler of Balkh, was received, stating that he had despatched the agent of the King of Bokhara to the Dost, who will reach Cabul in a few days. On the 29th a despatch from Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan was received, intimating that agreeably to order he has proceeded from Takhtabul to Tashkirghan, where he will wait for further instructions, on receipt of which he will proceed to Koondooz. The Dost requested Sirdar Mahomed Ameen Khan to send orders for all his regiments to assemble at Charukkar, from whence they will be sent to Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan on receipt of another despatch from him. He has also sent orders to all the rulers in his territories to levy forces and send them to Dusht Suffed and Ghoree Bughlar, to be ready there to march at the shortest notice to join Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan. On the 30th intelligence from Toorkistan arrived, to the effect that the King of Bokhara had reached Kursh, and sent orders to all his officers to assemble forces. The agent of the King of Bokhara arrived in Balla Hissar this day. On the 1st of May the Dost ordered Sirdar Ahmud Khan to bring the agent to the Durbar, who was received honourably by the Dost. The agent delivered his master's message to the Dost, who put it into his pocket without perusing it.—Lahore Chronicle.

JAVA.

We learn from good authority that the Dutch taking the lead of Great Britain in introducing the improvements of science in this part of the world, have determined to lay a submarine telegraph from Batavia to Singapore; and with admirable promptness have gone to work at once and in earnest.

The British Government has agreed to cede to them a suitable and sufficient position for their terminus here, and the cable is now on its way out to Java.

This work will form one of the most memorable eras in the Eastern Archipelago, and we give our neighbours the Dutch full credit for securing to themselves the honour of accomplishing it.—Singapore Free Press.

THE NEMESIS OF SIN.—All calamities, personal or national, in China are regarded as proofs of sin, especially such as are sudden and overwhelming. A man struck by lightning is immediately condemned by the united voice of all who hear of the catastrophe. He must have poisoned some one, or have intended to do so, or he must have committed some other great crime. If lightning strike a tree, the popular remark made from one to another will be that there must be a venomous snake concealed at its roots, and that on this account the tree was singled out to be visited with the retribution of Heaven. Blindness and other bodily calamities are also ascribed to the operation of a retributory decree, the execution of which is superintended by the ruling power in heaven. The charge of personal blame is, however, often shifted from the present life to an imaginary one that preceded it.—Edkine's Religion in China.

2nd Instance.—In having at the time and place stated in the preceding instance, destroyed a receipt for the sum of Rs. 2,000 paid on account of camels, and caused a false receipt for Rs. 3,110 with a forged signature to be substituted in its stead in the Commissariat-office receipt-book of the station.

3rd Instance.—In having at Sukkur, on or about the month of December, 1857, caused the entry of Rs. 4,110 set forth in the second instance of this charge to be tampered with, and converted into an entry of Rs. 2,000, purporting to be an advance for camels; and a false entry to be written immediately below it for the sum of Rs. 2,110, purporting to be an advance for sulletas, no such sum having been advanced for sulletas.

4th Instance.—In having at the time and place specified in the third instance of this charge, destroyed the false receipt with forged signature for the sum of Rs. 4,110, specified in the second instance, and caused two false receipts with forged signatures to be entered in the Commissariat receipt-book at Sukkur in its stead as vouchers for the sums Rs. 2,000 and Rs. 2,110 respectively.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, JUNE 18.

The Queen has been graciously pleased to confirm the grant of the decoration of the Victoria Cross to the undermentioned officer of her Majesty's army, which decoration has been provisionally conferred upon him by the C. in C. in India, in accordance with the rules laid down in her Majesty's warrant instituting the same, for an act of bravery performed by him in that country, when serving under his personal command, as recorded against his name, viz.:—

42nd Regiment.—Lieut. F. E. H. Farquharson.—For conspicuous bravery, when engaged before Lucknow on the 9th March, 1858, in having led a portion of his company, stormed a bastion, mounting two guns, and spiked the guns, by which the advanced position, held during the night of the 9th of March, was rendered secure from the fire of artillery. Lieutenant Farquharson was severely wounded while holding an advanced position, on the morning of the 10th of March.

Her Majesty has also been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officers and privates of her Majesty's army and Indian military forces, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval, on account of acts of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their several names, viz.:—

42nd Regiment.—Private Walter Cook and Private Duncan Millar.—In the action at Maylah Ghat, on the 15th of January, 1859, Brigadier General Walpole reports that the conduct of Privates Cook and Millar deserves to be particularly pointed out. At the time the fight was the severest, and the few men of the 42nd Regiment were skirmishing so close to the enemy (who were in great numbers), that some of the men were wounded by sword cuts, and the only officer with the 42nd was carried to the rear, severely wounded, and the colour serjeant was killed, these soldiers went to the front, took a prominent part in directing the company, and displayed a courage, coolness, and discipline, which was the admiration of all who witnessed it.

13th Bengal N.I.—Lieut. William G. Cubitt.—For having on the retreat from Chinhat, on the 30th of June, 1857, saved the lives of three men of the 32nd Regiment, at the risk of his own.

26th Bengal N.I.—Lieutenant Hanson Chambers Taylor Jarrett.—For an act of daring bravery at the village of Baroun, on the 14th of October, 1858, on an occasion when about seventy sepoy were defending themselves in a brick building, the only approach to which was up a very narrow street, in having called on the men of his regiment to follow him, when, backed by only some four men, he made a dash at the narrow entrance, where, though a shower of balls was poured upon him, he pushed his way up to the wall of the house, and beating up the bayonets of the rebels with his sword endeavoured to get in.

1st Bengal Fusiliers.—Private John M'Govern.—For gallant conduct during the operations before Delhi, but more especially on the 23rd of June, 1857, when he carried into camp a wounded comrade under a very heavy fire from the enemy's battery at the risk of his own life.

Expedition against the Abors.

No. 656 of 1859.—H.E. the Gov. Gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from the Dep. Adj. Gen. of the army, No. 99, of the 8th ult., with enclosures, reporting the successful operations of Lieut. col. F. Hannay, against the Meyong clan of the Abors.

H.E. in Council concurs with the C-in-C. in the approbation expressed by his lordship regarding these operations:—

No. 99.

From the Dep. Adj. Gen. of the army to the Sec. to the Government of India. Mily. Depart.

Sir,—I am directed by the C-in-C. to transmit for the information of H.E. the Gov. Gen. in Council, a letter dated 11th ult., No. 107, from Col. F. Jenkins, agent to the Gov. Gen. and comdg. troops N.E. frontier, enclosing a report from Lieut. col. F. Hannay, of his recent successful operations against the Meyong clan of the Abors.

Lord Clyde desires to express his approbation of the manner in which these operations were conducted, and of the gallantry of those engaged in them, but especially of the detach. Indian nav. brig. under Lieut. Lewis.

H. W. NORMAN, Major,
Dep. Adj. gen. of the army.
Delhi, 8th April, 1859.

No. 107 of 1859.

From Col. F. Jenkins, agent gov. gen. and comdg. N.E. Frontier, to Maj. Ross, Asst. adj. gen. of the army. Hd. qrs., Barrackpore, dated Gowhaty, the 11th March, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour to submit for transmission to the rt. hon. the C. in C., in original, a letter, No. 41, of the 28th ult., from Lieut. col. Hannay, reporting the complete success of the detach. under his command in carrying by assault on the 27th ult. the strong stockaded position of the confederated Meyong clans of Abors and the destruction of two of their villages.

2. I have pleasure in drawing notice to the high satisfaction expressed by Col. Hannay at the conduct of the whole of the troops under his command, and particularly with the gallant manner in which the attack was led by the naval brigade, under the command of Lieut. Lewis, of the Indian Navy.

F. JENKINS, Col.
Agent Gov. gen. comdg. N.E. Frontier.

No 41.

From Lieut. col. S. F. Hannay, comdg. 1st Assam L. I. Batt., and expedition to Abor Hills, to Col. F. Jenkins, agent gov. gen. and comdg. troops Assam, Gowhaty.

Passes Ghat, Monday, Feb. 28, 1859.

Sir,—In continuation of my letter No. 40, of the 19th inst., I have the honour to acquaint you that the expedition under my command reached the vicinity of Passes Ghat on Saturday, the 26th inst., and on Sunday morning, the 27th inst., I proceeded from that point with a party as per margin, * to the attack of Passes and the adjoining Meyong Abor village of Rong Kong, which was effectually carried out, and those two positions taken and completely destroyed by four P.M., when I returned to the Camp established at Passes Ghat.

2. I beg to state that the resistance made by the Abors to our advance was most obstinate and determined, which they were enabled to do from their thorough knowledge of the ground, their peculiar skill as marksmen and their formidable barricades and stockades, eleven in number, from the river bank, nine of which the enemy defended, and in three instances it was necessary to use a twelve-pdr. howzr. gun, to open a way for the assault.

3. The list of killed and wounded (Europeans and Natives) will show that we had to contend against a formidable enemy, armed with a powerful weapon in skillful hands; the strong nature of the defences keeping the attacking party unavoidably exposed, not only to the fire from the front but from both flanks, and from trees and heights occupied by the enemy. However, all went down before the gallantry of the troops. The village of Rong Kong and three strong positions were carried at the point of the bayonet by our gallant band of Europeans, I. N., and the advanced guard under Lieut. Lewis and Davies, with Mr. Midshipman Mayo. The position of Passes was taken by Maj. Reid and myself, the main body of native troops, with the local Arty. and a 12-pdr. howtz. gun.

4. In such jungle positions and with the prevailing practice of carrying off their wounded, the loss of the enemy cannot be ascertained, but they must have suffered considerably, particularly in the defences of Rong Kong where the conflict was hand to hand. One body was found at Rong Kong, and the traces of blood from the different positions they held, to the villages, afforded proofs of their having suffered.

5. I beg leave to express my utmost satisfaction with the conduct of the troops engaged, European and native. I would especially notice for your information, and that of the rt. hon. the C-in-C., the very gallant conduct of the Indian nav. brig., under Lieut. Lewis, I. N., with Lieut. Davies and Mr. Midshipman Mayo, I. N. Lieut. Lewis had a narrow escape; an arrow fired at a very short distance lodging in his cap pocket. Lieut. Davies, who gallantly led the advance guard throughout the whole of the operations of the day, was, I am sorry to say, severely hit in the left breast and left arm. Mr. Midshipman Mayo also, a gallant young lad, who was prominently forward on all occasions, was slightly wounded in the finger. I beg to report that the conduct of these officers was most gallant and exemplary, and I have to add also the highly meritorious conduct of Mr. Asst. Surg. White, whose devotion and attention to the wounded, in positions of great risk, was beyond all praise.

6. I have now to bring to your notice the great assistance which has been afforded throughout the expedition by Maj. Reid and his small party of artillerymen; being an eye-witness to their gallant conduct in serving the guns amidst showers of arrows from all directions, and seeing many of the men hit, their continued exertions to dislodge the enemy evinced a very soldier-like spirit.

7. My sergt. maj. was present, and he behaved with his usual soldier-like steadiness.

8. In conclusion, I beg to state that I have received the greatest assistance from Capt. Bivar, your principal asst., with me. His personal exertions, in regard to the requisite supplies, carriage, and boats, and on bringing the large fleet with us up stream, have been most praiseworthy. I shall await his wishes for a few days at this place, to enable him to make his arrangements with the different tribes.

S. F. HANNAY, Lieut. col.
Comdg. 1st Assam L. Inf. Battal. and Expedition to Abor Hills.

THE NAWAB OF FURRUCKABAD.

THE decision of the Governor-General of India in the case of the Nawab of Furruckabad, which has been so long and so anxiously expected by those interested in the affairs of India, has at length reached us. An extra of the Bombay Standard gives us the following account of the charges against the Nawab, the sentence, and the subsequent decision of the Governor-General:—

"1st Count.—That he, Tufuzzul Hosein Khan, being a person owing allegiance to the British Government, did rebel and wage war against the said British Government, from the month of June to the end of December, 1857, and acted as a leader and instigator in revolt in the Furruckabad district, one of the centres of rebellion, during the above period.

"2nd Count.—That he, Tufuzzul Hosein Khan, was a principal and accessory, before and after the fact, to the murder of many British subjects in the aforesaid districts of Furruckabad and its neighbourhood, between the months of June and December, 1857, in the following instances:—

"1st. To the murder of forty Europeans, more or less, on the Maunpoor Kutraa or sand-bank, in the month of July, 1857.

"2nd. To the murder of European ladies and children, with Eurasians and native Christians, about twenty-two in all, on the Futtelghur Parade-ground, in the month of July, 1857.

"3rd. To the murder of Kallay Khan, a loyal sepoy of the 10th Native Infantry, in the month of July or August, 1857.

"4th. To the murder of two loyal Sikhs, names unknown, who were killed with Kallay Khan, sepoy, in the month of July or August, 1857."

On these charges he was tried by a special commission, the court sentencing him to death. The general order says:—

"But it came out on the trial, and was pleaded by the prisoner as a bar to the execution of the sentence, that before his surrender a letter had been written to him by Major Barrow, the special commissioner with the camp of his excellency the commander in chief, in which he was invited to surrender, and that in this letter he was told that pardon had been extended to all who had not personally committed the murder of British subjects, and that if he had not personally committed the murder of British subjects he might surrender without apprehension.

"Whatever may have been the meaning of Major Barrow in addressing this letter to Tufuzzul Hosein, and whatever may have been the prisoner's understanding of it at the time, it is certain that on the receipt of it he immediately surrendered. He now claims the fulfilment of the promise of pardon made by Major Barrow, being found guilty, not of having personally committed the murder of English subjects, but of having been an accessory before the fact.

"The Governor General in Council entirely condemns and disavows the act of Major Barrow, in making a promise contrary to the Royal Proclamation, and contrary to the express order of the Government, excepting the prisoner from all benefit of pardon. But his Excellency in Council will not suffer it to be said that the prisoner, having been induced to surrender on the promise of a British officer in Major Barrow's position, has in consequence of that surrender been put to death for a crime of less degree than that which was designated by the officer as alone rendering him liable to punishment.

"The Governor General in Council has, therefore, resolved to forbear from carrying out the sentence of the Court on Tufuzzul Hosein, on the condition that he shall immediately quit the British territory for ever. If he accept this condition he will be conveyed to the frontier as a convict under a military guard, and there set at liberty. If he refuse the condition, or if, having accepted it, he shall break it, or attempt to break it, now, or at any future time, the capital sentence pronounced upon him will be carried out."

The Nawab of Furruckabad did not slay the Europeans, the ladies and children with his own hand, nor did he apply the port fires to the guns from which the ladies were blown away; but he was the ruler of the district and the leader of the rebels, and ordered all the murders of which he was found guilty as a "principal and accessory before and after the fact." How, then, Major Barrow's promise of a pardon to all who had not personally committed the murder of British subjects could apply to him we cannot see. The Nawab was specially exempted from pardon by the proclamation, and Major Barrow's letter only said that those who had not murdered Europeans, and had surrendered, had been pardoned. But this was not the case of the Nawab. He knew he had ordered the slaughter of Europeans, and he surrendered with a full knowledge of the consequences. At the trial he alleged that he had not ordered the slaughter, and that he had no power over the rebels. This was the point at issue, and had he proved his case he was entitled to pardon for his rebellion; but having been found guilty it would have been no breach of faith, no breaking of a British officer's promise, had his execution been ordered.

But Lord Canning is of a different opinion. With a great show of displeasure he entirely condemns and disavows the act of Major Barrow, but he gives the prisoner the benefit of it, and proceeds to award him, in stern and menacing language, the next greatest punishment he can inflict upon him. Banishment for life across the sea—that terrible punishment to a native—was the least that we expected, and what the cruel and cowardly murderer of women and children deserved, if he escaped death. No such thing. He is to be banished from India; to be conveyed to the frontier under a military guard, and there set at liberty. Furruckabad is only a few marches from the frontier of Oude bordering upon Nepaul, and the Nawab can in a few days join his dear friends the Nana and the Begum, and again make war against us, or he can spend the remainder of his days in the Nepalese territory in affluence, with his own fortune and the treasures he seized from the Company's coffers at Futtelghur and elsewhere. It has been alleged by many Indian correspondents that Lord Canning is so favourably disposed towards natives that he would grasp at the smallest shadow of excuse or reason to justify the pardon of the Nawab. We fear the result has shown that there has been too much truth in these statements. There may be doubts as to whether Lord Canning was justified in giving the Nawab the benefit of Major Barrow's letter, and interpreting its meaning as he did, but there can be but one opinion as to the impolicy of his permitting—with an offensive display of wordy severity—this base murderer and rebel to escape with entire impunity.

GENERAL VIVIAN AND THE COMPANY'S EUROPEANS.

EVEN a cursory perusal of the Blue-book on the recent Inquiry into the Organization of the Indian Army will suffice to show the preconceived opinions entertained by H.R.H. the Commander in Chief, by the late Secretary for War, and by the Adjutant general of the army, as to the inexpediency of having a local European force for special service in India. We do not for a moment suspect these high authorities of being actuated by unworthy motives. We entirely absolve them from all imputation of desiring to increase the patronage of the Horse-guards, and we believe, unreservedly, that they were moved solely by a sense of duty and by a sincere conviction that there should be but one imperial army enlisted for general service in any quarter of the globe, and receiving its impulses and general direction from Whitehall. Still, the fact remains that after having arrived at a foregone conclusion, they undertook to conduct an investigation which required before all things a perfectly unprejudiced frame of mind. This bias they never, indeed, attempted to conceal, and the manner in which they examined the different witnesses clearly enough indicated the sort of answer they wished to receive. Accordingly, nothing could exceed the urbanity of their address or the suavity of their tone, when the evidence tended to strengthen their own views and to justify their prejudices; while, on the other hand, an unfavourable witness was subjected to a cross-examination as rigorous and browbeating as if he had been standing in the box at the Old Bailey. Something too much of this insolence of demeanour was displayed towards Major general Sir R. J. H. Vivian, K.C.B., though apparently without affecting the composure of that gallant and intelligent officer. Again and again they returned to the attack, now openly and now insidiously, in the hope of extorting from him an admission, however guarded, that the troops of the line are superior to the Europeans of the Company's service. In this they were invariably baffled and disappointed. General Vivian had facts on his side to oppose to abstract principles, and the Triumvirs were defeated at every point.

It is almost incredible, indeed, that these great military personages could venture to underrate the efficiency of the local European regiments, while the memory of their distinguished achievements is so fresh in the minds of men. Without going back to the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshahr, and Sobraon, in which the 1st European Light Infantry bore so glorious a part—without referring to the siege of Mooltan, where the 1st Bombay Fusiliers rendered such good service—without even alluding to Chilianwallah, where, if any European troops misconducted themselves, it was certainly not the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers—and without so much as glancing at the crowning victory of the second Punjab campaign, or the various actions more recently fought in Burmah—it is only necessary to mention Delhi in connection with the 1st and 2nd Bengal Fusiliers, Agra with the 3rd, Havelock and Neill with the 1st Madras Fusiliers, and Central India with the 3rd Bombay Europeans, and at once all doubts must vanish as to the efficiency of regiments that have covered themselves with such imperishable renown. It may be that they would not look so handsome on parade as a regiment of the Guards, and that their movements might be less mechanical; but on the field of battle they have proved themselves equal to any troops in the world. If the absence of pipeclay to this limited extent is so displeasing to the Triumvirs, we may imagine with what horror they would listen to any suggestion having for its purport the enrolment of a corps on the principle of the Zouaves. General Vivian expressed his conviction that two-thirds of the European troops in India should be local, if for no other reason that there might always be a force on whose presence in the country the Governor-General could at all times rely. Upon that H.R.H. demanded with some semblance of astonishment if he thought it possible that "any Government would ever venture to withdraw so many European troops from India, whether of the line or local, as would endanger the permanence of our rule in India?" In reply, General Vivian mentioned the conduct of the Home Government at the commencement of the Crimean war, when regiments were suddenly withdrawn, notwithstanding Lord Dalhousie's emphatic protest that he could not spare a single European soldier. The fact is simply this: the military authorities are quite aware of the necessity of keeping up a large army, but they are also aware, from sad experience, that the Manchester men, who postpone their country to cotton and honour to cheap labour, would never consent to the estimates that must then be submitted to Parliament. They would not, however, raise the same objections if the expense of maintaining the army fell upon the natives of India; and thus almost any number of troops might be kept there out of the way and out of sight until their presence was required by a European emergency. The plan is ingenious, but it is also unjust; and, besides, it would never answer in the hour of need to wait for months before the protecting force could reach these shores.

Again and again did H.R.H. endeavour to entrap General Vivian into an acknowledgment of the inferiority of the local corps as compared with regiments of the line, but the General was true to his ancient comrades, and to the real facts of the case. "For my own part," he said, "I conceive that such portion of the European troops as we have already as local troops in India are equal to any troops in the world. I do not see that there is any difference in their discipline or efficiency in the slightest degree. I think that the one force is quite as good as the other." The Duke then attempted to turn the flank of this unmanageable witness by advancing a remark once made by the Duke of Wellington that local corps are inferior for service as compared with ordinary troops. One would really imagine that our military authorities regarded the great Duke as a being from another world, or as one inspired. His opinions are put forth as unanswerable, and his judgment is declared to have been infallible. But how much longer is this absurd deference for precedent and authority to be allowed to impair the efficiency of our army? How long is Old Foggydom to reign supreme at the Horse Guards? General Vivian, however, answered with great spirit that, having his own experience to guide him, he could not admit for a moment the inferiority of the local troops in India. And when H.R.H. again returned to the charge, he replied yet more emphatically, "I cannot admit, even on the high authority which your Royal Highness has placed before me, that our European local troops are in any way inferior; I believe that there are no better troops under the sun. No better proof of efficiency can be given by a regiment than its conduct in the field. The gallant behaviour of the Company's European regiments during the recent struggle is universally admitted. Such as they have now proved they have ever been whenever employed in war." All honour to the gallant general for the spirit and moral courage with which he upheld the fair fame of his former comrades!

THE BIBLE IN INDIA.

A PAPER, we regret to say, is being actively and extensively circulated for the avowed purpose of getting up a petition to Parliament to the following effect: that "We, the undersigned, humbly pray your Honourable House to take measures for removing the authoritative exclusion of the Word of God from the system of education in Government schools in India, so that none who may be willing be interdicted from the hearing, or reading, of the Bible in school-hours." In this singularly ill-constructed sentence we discern the germs of much future trouble and excitement. The stream, however, is setting so strongly in favour of Government interference with the religion of the natives of India, that it is vain to struggle against it. We shall, therefore, content ourselves with entering our final protest against the suicidal tendency of the policy which is about to be inaugurated, and leave to others the responsibility of undermining the foundations of our Indian Empire.

The Christian Vernacular Education Society for India have issued a slight, though dogmatic, pamphlet in support of the proposed petition to the legislature, and in opposition to the statesmanlike policy advocated by Lords Ellenborough and Stanley. As an example of special pleading, bordering upon misrepresentation of facts, this brochure is entitled to the equivocal praise that is usually accorded to such performances. A few of its inaccuracies may be selected at random to illustrate the cool audacity of assertion that characterises the followers of the self-styled Evangelical School. The compiler of the pamphlet is Mr. H. Carre Tucker, lately Governor-General's Agent and Commissioner, Benares. This gentleman begins by premising that "religious neutrality" is "simply impossible," because the religions of India are "so intimately blended with false science and false morality that we cannot teach the simplest lessons of true science and true morality without contradicting the false science and ethics of their religious books, and so far proving the religions themselves to be false." We submit, however, that this is no infringement of religious neutrality, as it is understood by practical men of common sense. Nor is it by any means inconsistent with their views, as he alleges, that they recommend secular education as conducing "directly to uproot the ancient forms of belief." On the contrary, this is precisely the system they advocate in order to produce the results which both parties equally wish to attain, though in different ways. The ultimate conversion of the natives of India to the truths of Christianity enters into the aspirations of all men who have sympathy with their kind. All are anxious to improve the moral, religious, and social condition of their fellow creatures, however widely they may disagree as to the measures to be adopted. The one party, however, would fill up a gulf by precipitating into it an island, while the other prefers to follow the example of nature, and by sure and steady steps to raise up dry land without submerging that which already smiles above the surface of the waters.

The practical school sets about removing the rubbish which has been shot for centuries on the site, before it attempts to lay the actual foundations of the new and glorious edifice it hopes to erect on the barren and unsightly spot. With this view it inculcates physical and moral truths, so that the mind may be gradually prepared for the comprehension of religious truths and their adaptation to the ordinary pursuits of life. It is perfectly true it teaches geography, astronomy, and physics, in the certain expectation of sapping "all faith in the native religions," and it does so from the conviction that this method is preferable to placing any reliance on the two other modes which alone are possible. The first of these is by the miraculous teaching of the Holy Spirit, which even the ultra-Evangelicals will probably deem it presumptuous to expect. The other is by compulsion, whether at the point of the sword as practised by the Mahomedan conquerors, or by the exercise of Government influence and the fear of European bayonets, and we cannot think that this mode of proceeding will ever be justified by ultimate success. It is constantly dinned in our ears that the authorities in the Punjab have never hesitated to countenance the Christian religion, and even to testify their desire that all men should be brought to believe in it. But it is conveniently forgotten that the Punjabees not only retained a lively recollection of their recent defeats and consequent infirmity to their English rulers, but that they were also without arms and held in subjection by the flower of the European army in India. We have no wish to derogate in the slightest degree from the importance of the great services rendered by Sir John Lawrence and his energetic lieutenants, but it is only just to others to bear in mind that no portion of our Indian territories was held so securely by English troops as the province within the Five Rivers. If the British public is willing to maintain an army of 100,000 Europeans in India the work of conversion may no doubt be accelerated, but then the maintenance of that force must be provided for from the revenues of this country, for it cannot be obtained from any other quarter. In reply to the address presented to him on Friday last in Willis's Rooms, Sir John Lawrence is reported to have said that "had the mutineers of the Bengal army possessed some insight into the principles of the Christian religion they would have never been misled in the manner they were." No doubt, if the natives could be made good Christians, the task of governing them would be greatly facilitated,—unless, indeed, like other Christians, they were moved by Christian notions of liberty to throw off a foreign yoke. But here the whole question at issue is assumed as an axiom. Is it so very certain that Christianity is adapted to the native mind, or rather is the native mind yet trained to receive Christianity? This is the real battle field between the new school and the old. The latter insists that the advanced works shall first be carried, and regular parallels driven up close to the enemy's fortress, while the former is clamorous for an immediate assault, shouting as its war cry, "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon!" Such rites and usages as were clearly contrary to the laws of our common humanity, such as Suttee, Meriah Sacrifice, &c., &c., have been gradually abolished; but it is erroneous to speak of these horrors as being not only sanctioned but held meritorious by the native religion. They were no more than abuses which had crept in of late years, and were, for the most part, of local growth, and by no means general throughout Hindostan. The abolition of these horrid rites and superstitions, consequently, created no excitement among the mass of the people, while, at the same time, a purer tone of morality was perceptibly inculcated. Before the Divine truths of Christianity can be properly appreciated, the natives must be raised to a higher moral elevation, whence they may learn to desire a more holy and spiritual faith than that which they have inherited from their forefathers.

Mr. Tucker, in the course of his arguments in favour of proselytism, declares that the "obligation on the part of Government to raise its subjects is fully recognised by the natives," and, in support of this assertion, quotes from a declamatory lecture lately delivered at Bombay by Dr. Bhawoo Dajee. Now, this young lecturer was educated in an English institution, and, with native volubility and parrot-like power of imitation, delivered himself ore rotundo of the platitudes he had picked up in the course of his empirical training. Besides, he represents the very smallest section of the inhabitants of India, the descendants of a handful of Persian exiles. Why, it would be as much to the purpose to describe a paper, signed a few years ago by half a dozen French refugees, as representing the sentiments and opinions of the people of England. A poor cause indeed must that be which can hope to derive strength from such statements as this!

Then we are invited to look to Ceylon, where the Bible is publicly taught without any opposition from the natives. No doubt it could in like manner be taught in the Andamans also, and indeed in any place that admits of rapid coercion by sword and bayonet. Such comparisons are as absurd as the Times' expression of astonishment that it is only in India we have encountered any difficulties on religious grounds. "We never incurred any dangers of this sort in any other colony, or from any other of the countless races with which we have been brought into contact." Perhaps the Times will be good enough to mention in what other possession of the British Crown the same conditions prevailed. In what other colony or conquest have we encountered a civilised people wedded to institutions that have existed for thirty centuries? In Van Diemen's Land we adopted the American plan of—"improving the aborigines from off the face of the earth," and we are doing the same in Australia. In North America we offered the brandy bottle in lieu of baptism, and it was accepted with the usual results—the decay of the native tribes. At the Cape we have had enough to do in looking after our flocks and herds, without preaching to the sheep that had gone astray, and likewise in New Zealand. There is not the shadow of an analogy between any of these cases and that of India; and the remark only serves to show how sorely the writer was beset to find something to say.

The Times further asserts that recent events have proved the fallacy of the "traditional policy" of the East India Company's Government, but they actually prove just the reverse. It was not until persons in authority began to depart from that traditional policy, and to act in contravention of their engagements to their princely masters, that any distrust was exhibited or felt as to the ulterior designs of the Sirkar. The natives, it is well-known, cannot, or do not, distinguish between the public and the private capacity of a Government servant. They cannot understand that any official would venture to do as an individual what his employers profess to regard as displeasing in their eyes. So when magistrates and commandants began to distribute the Bible and to preach Christianity, they naturally enough attributed occult designs to the Government. But it was against this contingency that the traditional policy was especially directed, and recent events have only borne witness to the sagacity that gave rise to it.

REORGANISATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel Skiffington Poole, of the Bombay lancers, was of opinion that for the Bombay Presidency the proportion of Europeans to natives might be as one to four; regulars and irregulars should both be employed—the latter being very serviceable for detachment and outpost duty, though not equal to the former in actual conflict with the enemy; the tight dress very detrimental, and the shako extremely inconvenient; a helmet far better, especially if made of felt; had no objection to the English saddle, if well made; once in command of a cavalry brigade on the left of the line at Mooltan, as he was going past the lines one evening he saw a number of men of his own regiment standing together as a naik's party of the Bengal army went by, so he inquired what was the matter, and one of his native officers answered, "The naik of that party is a lower caste man than one of the privates, and the private has just said, 'We have left our lines, I intend to take command, and you go into the ranks and you will obey me;'" was opposed to giving direct commissions to native gentlemen, as they are likely to be very overbearing; two European non-commissioned officers quite sufficient for a regiment, as they are apt to take to drinking and are not very manageable; the native officers of his regiment mingled a good deal with the European officers; native troopers in the Bengal cavalry do not groom their own horses, though they do so in Bombay; it would never answer to mix Europeans and natives together regimentally, for the latter would never be happy, through jealousy with regard to their women; even in brigades it is necessary to keep the native and European lines apart; the sending in a petition, without its going through the proper channel, was considered a great military offence in the Bombay army; the commanding officer ought to have the power to punish a man without reference to the divisional officer in command; if he cannot be trusted with that responsibility he ought to be removed.

Major General J. G. Griffith of the Bombay artillery would have one European to three natives in all the Presidencies; with a good police force, a smaller native army might suffice; would remodel the whole Indian army; there should be two corps in the Bengal Presidency and a third in the Punjab—a corps being from 30,000 to 35,000 men; the regular cavalry should be entirely European, six troops to a regiment, and the native cavalry all irregulars; the artillery should be exclusively European, "either on the present system of formation of twenty-three officers per battalion of four companies each, or incorporated with the Royal service, after an equalisation of ranks according to length of service;" the engineers should be one half of the artillery, the sappers and miners all Europeans, but the pioneers natives; would keep Europeans at healthy stations and send them into unhealthy districts only when they are required; had the artillerymen been all Europeans the natives would never have dared to mutiny.

Major General the Hon. T. Ashburnham, C.B., of H.M.'s service, was in India about twelve years; would have one European to two natives; if Sikhs are employed, the European proportion must be larger; would not trust natives with the Minié rifle; would dress them more after their own fashion; there should be 40,000 Europeans of all arms, and 80,000 native infantry and cavalry in the Bengal Presidency; half caste natives alone to be employed in the arsenals; would rather add to the Bombay and Madras armies than divide the Bengal army; would have no native commissioned officers in a regiment of regular infantry; the Bombay native officers are superior to those of Bengal, but even they do not fulfil the requirements of an officer; in the irregular cavalry they are more efficient, perhaps because they are entrusted with greater responsibilities; would recommend a supplemental battalion of natives to each European regiment on the Indian establishment; there would be increased communication between the two races; this native battalion to be commanded by a major or captain of its own.

Major General David Capon, of the Bombay army, said that there must be one-half Europeans in the Bengal army if it were to be no better disciplined than heretofore; one to one in the Bengal Presidency, and one to four in the others; would give the Europeans a superior weapon; the old musket was useless, it would be better to give a lighter arm with a conical bullet; 12,000 European infantry and cavalry enough for Bombay; would have native foot artillery, but not horse artillery; in Bengal would confine the native artillery to Christian half-castes; in 1810 there were twenty-six officers present with his regiment, in later times there were sometimes no more than eight or ten, and some of these were young ensigns of not six months' standing; would certainly maintain the native officers, and even give them charge of companies in preference to a very young ensign; would have four European officers to a cavalry regiment and fifteen to an infantry one, reserving three or four companies as a reward and encouragement to native officers; large cantonments preferable to small, but the latter unavoidable in the absence of military roads; would keep European and native troops separate, they should be brigaded together, but nothing more; the major should be transferred to the command of another regiment and not the lieutenant colonel; in the European infantry the major, not being transferable, is obliged to serve under a lieutenant colonel, thereby losing £400 a year, because no European regiment is allowed to be permanently commanded save by a lieutenant colonel.

Colonel Edmund Wintle, of the Bengal army, would recommend one-third Europeans of all arms for the Bengal Presidency; the Bengal sepoy were in the habit of appealing direct to the higher authorities against their own commanding officer; the discipline of the army had been gradually deteriorating for the last twenty years; would enlist more low-caste men for the future; formerly the station guards used to be weekly, but the practice is dying out; in the hot season very few officers required with a regiment, the men being so manageable; native officers useless, but European non-commissioned officers would be very apt to take to drinking, as there would be so little to occupy their time.

The next witness was Major gen. Sir R. J. Hussey Vivian, K.C.B., to whose admirable evidence we have alluded in a separate article, and shall therefore now pass on to that of Major gen. Sir E. Lugard, K.C.B., who was decidedly of opinion that the whole of the European troops in India should belong to the line, because India is the best nursery for soldiers, and also because it is advantageous for discipline that there should be but one imperial army; he admitted, however, that regiments might be there for years and retain their efficiency, and instanced H.M.'s 10th foot; still, there is a tendency to looseness of discipline in India; this happens after fifteen years' service in the east; the system of reliefs is, of course, very expensive, but that consideration would be counterbalanced by the greater efficiency of the troops, and by the general benefit to the empire; it would benefit England by compelling her to maintain a much larger army; the local European force does not mix more with the natives than do the royal troops; officers of the Queen's army would readily apply themselves to acquire the native languages, if encouraged to do so; as it is, the interpreter to the C. in C. has usually been a Queen's officer (Sir E. Lugard might have added, because the C. in C. himself was a Queen's officer); the Company's regiments have been usually below, and the Queen's usually above, their strength; the Company's European troops more addicted to drink than the Queen's; a Queen's regiment, however, stationed by itself at Colaba was as much given to drunkenness as any he ever saw; the canteen system is not so strict in the Company's as in the Queen's army; the Company's European troops he had seen were not in the highest state of discipline, but these questions are invidious; a great army should have but one sentiment, one object, one interest, to prevent jealousy between officers of European and of native regiments; would make the pay of the latter higher than the former and hold them out as rewards to meritorious officers; the most able officers should be encouraged to go into the native regiments; the native regiments should be supplied with officers from the European army; a local European army would come to be regarded as a colonial corps, and as such would be looked down upon; formerly this did not happen, but it could not be avoided if both armies are under the Queen; the bulk of drafts and all relieving regiments should be sent out round the Cape in large screw steamers, though a small number might be despatched monthly by the Red Sea route to Kurrachee; there should be a regular subsidised transport service; the Cape useful for convalescent and returning troops, but not for those going out; great difficulties in the way of amalgamation of the two services on account of the Military Fund; any change must be prospective; the public service would be benefited by the amalgamation, because there would be one common service, one common interest, and no petty jealousies; if there be a local European force would advocate its being recruited by volunteers from regiments returning home; otherwise, the recruits should be disciplined at home, and sent out formed soldiers; the volunteers from returning regiments would be mostly the younger soldiers (this, however, is not the case, as many men stay because they have native wives and families); there is a limit to age for volunteering and a limit to service.

Colonel J. Holland, lately Quarter master general of the Bombay army, thought it desirable that there should be both troops of the line and local European corps for the sake of the emulation; the local force should be numerically the stronger, otherwise it will come to be considered as a subordinate force and lose its prestige; if the line force were the chief force India might at any time be denuded of troops to meet a European emergency; the superiority of line regiments consists in their having a greater number of officers than the others; while the local corps have the advantage of local knowledge and experience; no European regiment is morally and physically acclimatised until after two or three years' service; the line should not furnish more than one half of the European cavalry and infantry; the artillery and sappers should belong entirely to the local force; there should be 12,000 artillery; the cavalry and infantry would be about 48,000 or 60,000 Europeans in all; in the peculiar circumstances of India it is expedient to have a local force under the Governor general, of men trained to India service, and having no ulterior views; to be efficient, officers must adopt India as their country, and not be anxious to get home whenever a European war breaks out, even now impracticable with the present strength of the British army to send out reliefs as often as practicable; field officers should be selected men, and especially commanders of regiments; incompetent men to be passed over in promotion and compelled to take their pension when entitled to it; all field officers should be selected from line officers; no C. in C. or divisional general should be named to an Indian command who has not had actual local experience; and as a rule these appointments should be shared equally between the two services; a system of exchange likely to be abused by officers of influence going out to hold the highest appointments, to the disparagement of the officers of the native army; except in case of emergency a newly arrived regiment should be sent to a healthy station to become acclimatised, and to acquire some knowledge of the native customs and language; the objection to having Royal artillery in India is that they would certainly be withdrawn if a European war broke out; besides, embarrassments would arise from the Royal artillery having their own staff; the C. in C. in India should have power to regulate dress of European troops of the line, without the interference of the home authorities; Lord Frederick Fitzclarence regretted that he had no power to relieve the Queen's troops of their stocks; there is undoubtedly a certain degree of jealousy at present between the two services, and chiefly because the higher posts of power and honour are given to Queen's officers; in the Bombay presidency when the witness left there were five regiments in the Queen's service against more than forty of the Company's regiments, yet at the very lowest the Queen's officers had one-fourth of the divisional commands, and every alternate season one-half.

ORDER OF THE BATH.—Her Majesty the Queen held an investiture of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath on Thursday, the 30th ult., on which occasion the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine was introduced, when her Majesty, assisted by the Prince Consort, invested his lordship with the riband, badge, and star of a Knight Grand Cross (Civil Division) of the Bath. Rear Admiral Sir M. Seymour was also introduced, and received the honour of knighthood from the Queen, with the sword of state, and was invested by her Majesty with the riband and badge, and also the star of a Knight Grand Cross. The investiture included a numerous list of officers of the army and navy.

TO LORD STANLEY,
ON HIS TEMPORARY RETIREMENT FROM OFFICE.

"On, Stanley, on!" So, in prophetic strain,
Sang the great Minstrel of the North; and now
Aptly the muse the words attunes again,
Noting how lofty are thy aims, and how
Class prejudice and pride of caste are vain
To turn thee from thy mission to bestow
Free access into Honour's fair domain
On all compeers alike—on high and low.
Nor shalt thou lack success; for though awhile
Faction and party strife thy course may stay,
And jealousy thine upright zeal revile,
A nation's voice shall speed thee on thy way,
Echoing the dying charge of Marmion
With living meaning fraught—"On, Stanley, on!"

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 1.

OUDE.

Mr. KINNAIRD asked the Secretary of State for India whether the proclamation confiscating the soil of Oude to the Crown is being acted upon, so that, while the rights of the talookdars have been restored in many instances, those of the peasants are considered to be forfeited.

Sir C. Wood said there was no foundation for the fears of his hon. friend, and he would shortly state what had taken place. During the first ten months after the re-occupation of Lucknow in March, 1858, a great many talookdars gave in their allegiance, and they were, for the most part, admitted to a settlement (on the basis of the summary settlement made in 1856-57), their tenure being made conditional on their rendering active assistance to the British Government in all matters of police. From this there was some reaction; but, after the issuing of the Royal Proclamation, a new impetus was given to the returning allegiance of the landlords, and many fresh settlements were made. Some of the great landholders, however, held out, and others were suspected of having participated in the murder of Europeans. Their estates were confiscated, and new settlements either made with friendly chiefs or with the under proprietors; but no estate had been confiscated in Oude, the proprietor of which had tendered his allegiance under the terms of the Proclamation. The number of actual confiscations was very small. The settlement was made principally with the talookdars on the principle of a general restoration of the state of things which was found on the first annexation of the province; but regard was paid to the claims of the village proprietors (who, during the rebellion, had in many cases voluntarily acknowledged the authority of the talookdars), and a certain quota of the net profits of each estate was fixed as their share, while the talookdar was left without the power of enhancing his demands upon them beyond the sum fixed in the village rent-roll. By these arrangements it would appear that the rights of all parties are protected, the object having been while reverting to the old talookdaree system, to afford, at the same time, increased protection to the village proprietors. The old talookdar system had been restored, but the interests of the under tenants, or proprietors, had been cared for by fixing their proportion of the rent, beyond which the talookdars could claim nothing from them.

THE LATE GOVERNMENT AND THE INDIAN LOAN.

Mr. CRAWFORD begged to ask the noble lord the member for King's Lynn whether he was aware, when he proceeded on Thursday, the 21st day of April last, to receive and adjudicate upon the tenders invited to be sent in for the Indian loan, of the fact that the Austrian ultimatum to Sardinia had been made known to her Majesty's Government on the previous evening by a telegram from Vienna, and also by a written communication from his excellency the French Ambassador to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs? The hon. member stated that when the loan was first in the market it was at a small, he might say merely nominal premium, but in the course of the afternoon, from the publication of a telegram stating that the Austrian ultimatum had been sent to Sardinia, it fell to 1½ discount, and in the course of three or four days it was quoted at £4 to £5 per cent. discount; so that, in fact, the stock became nearly unsaleable. A suspicion had arisen that the then Government were in possession of intelligence that the ultimatum of Austria had been sent to the Sardinian Government before the issue of the loan; and, if so, there could have been no question that it ought to have been withheld until the public had received the intelligence. He merely wished to know whether it was true that at the time Government received tenders for the loan they were aware of what had occurred.

Lord STANLEY said that nothing could be clearer than the manner in which the hon. gentleman had put his question, and it was one to which he could give a very simple reply. He should have answered the question at the time the hon. gentleman gave notice of it, but that he thought the hon. member might wish to make some remarks in introducing the matter. It was not the fact that either he, or any person connected with the negotiations for the loan, was cognisant of the news to which the hon. gentleman had referred at the time when the tenders for that loan were made. He did not know precisely at what hour of the night or morning the intelligence in question was first received by any member of the Government, but the intelligence was not received by him (Lord Stanley) till four in the afternoon, and the tenders for the loan were finally adjudicated upon between the hours of twelve and one on that day. He might explain how the interval elapsed between the time that the noble Secretary for Foreign Affairs received the intelligence and the time that it became known to the rest of the Government. Immediately upon the receipt of the intelligence alluded to his noble friend proceeded to summon a cabinet council, that deliberation might at once take place, but on that day Lord Derby was in attendance on her Majesty at Windsor, and consequently the cabinet council could not be held till four o'clock. The first intelligence he (Lord Stanley) received of the facts adverted to by the hon. member was at four o'clock in the afternoon of the day named, between three and four hours after the transactions had taken place.

Mr. W. CRAWFORD said the answer of the noble lord was perfectly satisfactory.

ADDRESS TO THE RIGHT HON. SIR JOHN LAWRENCE, BART., K.C.B.

The interesting ceremony of presenting an address to Sir John Lawrence took place on Friday, the 24th, at Willis's Rooms, the Lord Bishop of London in the chair. On the platform we observed Sir John Lawrence, the Bishop of London, the Bishop of Durham, Marquis of Westminster, the Earl of Bandon, Earl of Ducie, Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Kinnaird, Arthur Mills, M.P., Hon. A. Kinnaird, M.P., Rev. James Bagge, W. J. Maxwell, Robert Hanbury, M.P., Rev. J. W. Reeve, J. H. Brawbridge, Rev. S. Minton, Sir John Ogilvy, Bart., M.P., Rev. John Hodgson, Canon Miller, E. McNaughten, Rev. H. Beamish, William Long, Lord Sandon, Lord Lyttelton, L. H. H. Oliphant, Admiral Trotter, T. Nisbet, M.P., Canon Dale, Rev. H. Venn, Rev. Albert Rogers, Sir Andrew Agnew, Bart., M.P., A. Haldane, T. Meadows White, Colonel Macdonald, Sir Culling Eardley, Bart., J. M. Strachan, Lord Duncan, M.P., Admiral Harcourt, Joseph Hoare, M.P., A. Lefroy, M.P., Rev. Dr. Cumming, Monckton Milnes, M.P., Sir John Logan, T. O'Malley, Q.C., J. Farish, Abel Smith, Esq., M.P., General Alexander, Sir J. Kennaway, Rev. H. Latrobe.

The proceedings having been opened by prayer by the Bishop of London, the right rev. prelate called on

Sir Culling E. Eardley, Bart., who said that he was requested by those who had convened this meeting to state a few facts connected with the business of the day. He begged first to state that the number of signatures which were attached to this address was between 7,000 and 8,000, and that they were without exception those of persons of education, and capable of forming an opinion on the subject which had been brought before them. The list included, up to that morning, the signatures of three archbishops, twenty bishops, twenty-eight peers and noblemen, and seventy-one Members of Parliament; and in connection with the classes now referred to, he might observe that the circulars had been sent to Members of both Houses of Parliament only the day before yesterday (Wednesday), therefore there had been comparatively little time to obtain their signatures. A very large number of persons in important naval and military positions had signed the address. To these were added also the names of lord mayors and mayors, lord provosts and provosts, numbering three hundred, in the United Kingdom, who desired that their names might be appended to this document; and he believed that if it was desired to collect the calmly expressed opinion of the public of this country, there were no better means by which it could be fairly tested than through the chief municipal officers of the towns and cities throughout the kingdom, for while he had no doubt that the representatives in Parliament fully sympathised in the objects of this day, yet there was more calmness of opinion and expression of public sentiment than in the opinions of party representatives of the country. He had also to state that this document was signed by persons of all political and ecclesiastical parties in the country to an extent far exceeding anything he had ever known in connection with any other subject. The committee further requested him to inform the meeting that the box on the table contained the address, elegantly engrossed on vellum, which the right rev. prelate would be asked by his fellow citizens to sign, and it contained the autograph signatures of those who had requested that their signatures might be attached thereto. To the signature of his lordship would be attached a certificate of the number of the persons who had requested that their signatures might appear.

The Bishop of London then rose to present the address to St. John Lawrence, and said:—I believe I shall best consult your feelings, and certainly I shall best consult my own, in being very brief in what I have to say on this occasion. I am deputed by 7,000 of your fellow countrymen to express to you that they are thankful for your safe return to your native country, and to express to you that they are thankful also for the eminent services which you have been able to achieve in a very difficult period of your country's history, which has since happily passed away. It would ill become me to enter into the eminence of your services, for they are matters of history, and have been already brought before the British community by two of the most august assemblies in the world, whose privilege it is to award the powers and honours which are awarded by the Sovereign and by the country—(applause). I should fail if I were to attempt to follow your career in the brilliant services which you have performed; but perhaps if you look back to what has passed we shall be best performing our part, and I am sure it will be most in sympathy with your feelings, if we say we are anxious on this occasion to express our thanks not to you, but to the Supreme Ruler of all events, who, in having placed you in a position in a fearful crisis, used you as an instrument through which the Christian power was to be maintained in that country. When we look back to the services which you were able to perform we turn our eyes only a few years back, when the country over which you ruled was the battle-field of India, and we remember how those prodigious armies seemed to threaten the existence of the English name and power—how the existence of these armies were not a terror to England, but the cause of great anxiety. There seemed, indeed, to be a prospect that Sikh power might destroy the English power in India. We remember that at the commencement of the Indian mutiny it was said by you that the ability and honesty of the British forces were sufficient to keep the Sikh territory. We know that through your instrumentality that land which had been our terror became our strength, and in a fearful crisis you were enabled to send out all your forces for the rescue of Delhi—(applause). Thus those against whom the British power was arrayed became at once your strength and your faithful allies. The whole history of your proceedings in the Punjab in relation to this mutiny has so much of marvel connected with it that it cannot be attributed to human instrumentality, but to God, by whom that instrument was employed. We congratulate you on your safe return to your native country, and when we thus express our congratulation, our hearts must turn to those who have not been permitted to return in health to their homes; to those, many of whom for the time became illustrious, and who seemed to give the brightest promise, but who in God's mysterious providence have been cut off in the middle of their strength. And while we express our thanks to God for your safe return, we turn to one who was near and dear to you, and we have no doubt, that with us, you will be anxious to acknowledge that a great part of the security of the Sikh territory was due to him in former times. Though he did not survive to return to his native country, his name will long be associated with its annals, not only for the part he bore in that bloody strife in which his life unfortunately closed, but still more for what he did in the cause of peace. He was known not only for those great and brave qualities which distinguished him as a soldier—not only for his sterner qualities but also his loving heart. His name will long live in the affections of the soldier, whose friend he was; and he was privileged to do great things in the missionary work. He ever showed the interest he took in the soldiers and their children, and the welfare of the people, as well those who were heathens, committed to our charge. We trust that, if it should so please God that other institutions in India should fail, the Lawrence Schools will long survive. And while we congratulate you on being thus spared to return to your friends, it is not unnatural (and no doubt you have asked yourself the question) that we should ask for what purpose are you spared? It has been said by the first speaker that we are anxious more distinctly than has been done before to associate your name with the spread of real Christian principles in the government of India. But you would mistake the feeling of the meeting and of those who have signed the address, and we beg you not to suppose that we are anxious to pledge you more than you desire, when present in the councils with regard to the management of India—we do not pledge you, but we express our trust in your manly and straightforward Christian principles—(great applause). We say we are thoroughly satisfied with the declaration you have made. Nevertheless it may seem good to you to use your right as a Christian statesman to apply the general principle which you have laid down. We are not of those who make this question of the Christian government of India a party question, far from it. We believe that the question is one in which the whole country is interested; we do not believe that it belongs to one party any more than to another; and if we deplore the difficulty, if expressions are used which imply neutrality as to the spread of Christianity on the one side and heathenism on the other, we contend such a course of proceeding will never find an echo in the heart of the country, and we do not believe that any practical evil or danger can result from upholding the view we take, because we have a confident hope that the more questions connected with this subject are examined the more calmly they are looked into, the more the difficulties are faced, the more will good and patriotic Englishmen feel convinced that it is no Christian principles that the stand must be taken—(applause)—for the general Government and education of the country. Now as to the introduction of the Bible into the Government schools. I hail the documents to which your name is attached with much satisfaction, because they seem to answer the only objection which could be urged against what we earnestly desired to see introduced into the schools. We are told from time to time it may be well to think of introducing Christianity, but it would be attended with danger. I was anxious to hear what would be said by men whose opinions and practical knowledge were great, and when we had your testimony that to the best of your belief there was no such danger to be apprehended, I felt in my own mind that the question was settled; and I believe that the feeling of the whole country is the same. I believe that no one man could be found from one end of England to the other who would be opposed to Christian education if it could be done. No man opposes the introduction of Christian principles in India without attempting to introduce such elements of discord as to prevent a fair consideration of the question, and your testimony, sir, appears to me to set the question at rest, and that there is no danger in doing that which all agree ought to be done. I have no doubt that in the document you laid before the public you spoke with the caution becoming one in your position, that you stated with reference to the introduction of the Holy Scriptures into the Government schools, you must first find competent teachers before you bring the Bible into those schools. I heartily concede that point. I do not believe that much good would result from a heathen giving lectures on the New Testament, nor any good from the discussions of a Deist. I look to China, and among the rebels I see there is a strange mutilated form of Christianity which is a mockery to the name of Christianity; and I am thankful that when we take this subject in hand we shall endeavour to make the instruction in the Scriptures a real instruction; that men shall not only become acquainted with Christian duties, but that they shall hear such teachers as they wish, and that they will have Christian principles imbued into their minds, and that real Christian charity will form the bases of their conduct. I cannot but think that on your position in the country much of the future inculcation of Christian principles depends, seeing how you have maintained them in times past. I cannot help indulging the hope that in the position in which you are placed in the councils of India you will feel it becomes you to settle this question, and in doing so you will carry every party and sect with you. I trust that in this mission of spreading Christianity through the length and breadth of India your life may long be spared—(loud applause).

The right rev. prelate then read the following address, and afterwards signed it, and the certificate of the number of those who had signed it, and handed it to Sir John Lawrence, amidst loud applause.

"SIR JOHN LAWRENCE,—

"We, the undersigned, taking a deep interest in the moral and religious welfare of the people of India, beg to approach you, on the occasion of your happy return to your native country, with our most respectful and hearty congratulations. It has pleased Divine Providence to relieve our nation from the solicitude into which it was lately plunged by the state of our Indian Empire; and to fill us with thankfulness for the restoration of tranquillity and the complete establishment of the Royal authority in every part of the country.

"In you, Sir John, we, in common with the great body of your fellow-countrymen, gratefully recognise the instrument raised up by an all-wise Providence, to bear a part equal, if not superior to that of any living man, in this never-to-be-forgotten service to the British nation. Placed as ruler in a country where you were isolated by rebellion from the three presidencies of India, and by nature from the sea—the ordinary reserve of a British governor—having a dangerous frontier on one side, the chief seats of rebellion on the other, and a turbulent population immediately around you; it was your singular happiness, in conjunction with the illustrious band of men, trained in your own school, not merely to hold the recently occupied Punjab, but in a spirit of the noblest self-devotion to strip it of a large portion of its European garrison, and bring all its resources, and its old Khalsa soldiery, to bear upon the conquest of Delhi and the recovery of our Indian Empire.

"We rejoice that your valuable life has been preserved, whilst so many who shared with you the burdens and merits of the conflict have fallen before its close. Among the very foremost of these, your countrymen will bear in memory the great qualities, the inestimable services, and the patriotic end of your illustrious brother, Sir Henry Lawrence.

"With especial gratification we call to mind how, in the very midst of the struggle, and of greater dangers than others have deemed sufficient grounds for shrinking from every avowal of Christianity, you advised its frank profession. You laid down the principle that, 'having endeavoured solely to ascertain what is our Christian duty, we should follow it out to the uttermost, undeterred by any consideration.' You knew that the tolerant spirit and benign precepts of our religion provided a permanent guarantee for the rights of all, especially in matters of conscience, which could not be furnished by temporising policy. You knew that 'if anything like compulsion enters into our system of diffusing Christianity, the rules of that religion itself are disobeyed, and we shall never be permitted to profit by our disobedience.' You have recorded your conviction that 'Christian things done in a Christian way will never alienate the heathen. About such things there are qualities which do not provoke nor excite distrust, nor harden to resistance. It is when unchristian things are done in the name of Christianity, or when Christian things are done in an unchristian way, that mischief and danger are occasioned.' These words are memorable. Their effect will be happy not only on your own age, but on ages to come. Your proposal that the Holy Bible should be relieved from the interdiction under which it is placed in Government schools and colleges was true to the British principle of religious liberty, and faithful to your Christian conscience. We fully concur in your statement, that 'anything like abnegation of our own principles does not generate confidence in us with the people. They only suspect us of some hidden ulterior design.'

"In such public acts you were enabled amid extraordinary cares of State to honour Him who reigns over all potentates. And in the pre-eminent place which the esteem of your countrymen assigns to you, we recognise another proof of the principle, 'Them that honour Me, I will honour.'

"We offer our fervent prayer, in which we know we shall be joined by tens of thousands, that God may long preserve your life, and still continue to employ you as a great instrument of the public good." (The printed list of signatures was appended to the address.)

Sir John Lawrence rose and said: My lords, ladies, and gentlemen, the state of my health is such as to make it very difficult to speak without suffering afterwards, and with your permission I will read my reply: "I heartily thank your lordship and the many noblemen and gentlemen who have signed the address for the high honour which they have done me. You have been good enough to attribute to me a large share of the credit which is considered due to those who fought to maintain the supremacy of England and secure the safety of her people, so sorely jeopardised in the late dreadful struggle in India. I am grateful for the good opinion of my countrymen, and deem their suffrages the highest honour I could gain. There were, however, in that crisis, many men by my side who are fairly entitled to participate in this distinction, and whose services I have endeavoured to bring to notice. All, however, which we did was no more than our duty and even our immediate interest. It was no more than the necessities of our position impelled us to attempt. Our sole chance of escape was to resist to the last. The path of honour, of duty, and of safety was clearly marked out for us. The desperation of our circumstances nerved us to the uttermost. There never, perhaps, was an occasion when it was more truly necessary to win or to die. To use the words of my heroic brother at Lucknow, it was incumbent on us 'never to give in.' We had no retreat, no scope for compromise. That we were eventually successful against the fearful odds which beset us was alone the work of the great God who so mercifully vouchsafed His protection. Nothing but a series of miracles saved us. To Him, therefore, alone is the glory due. I see no valid reason for changing the opinion which I expressed on the expediency of allowing the Bible to be read in all our schools and colleges in India by those who desire to do so. Far from apprehending evil from this liberty I believe that the results for some years would be scarcely perceptible. In progress of time, no doubt, however, the seed which was sown would bring forth fruit. It is not possible to introduce western learning and science into India without leading its people to throw off their own faith. If this position be correct surely we are bound to give them facilities for acquiring a knowledge of the true faith. This is our true policy, not only as Christians but as statesmen. In doing our duty towards them we should neither infringe the rights of conscience nor interfere with the free will of man, while we should be working in the true way to maintain our hold on India. Had the mutineers of the Bengal army possessed some insight into the principles of the Christian religion they would never have been misled in the manner they were—they would never have banded themselves together to resist and to avenge imaginary wrongs. Ignorance in all ages has been productive of error and delusion. India has formed no exception to this rule. I pray that the misfortunes entailed by this mutiny may teach England true wisdom, without which her tenure of India can never prove prosperous and enduring."

The Hon. Arthur Kinnaird, M.P., proposed the cordial thanks of the meeting to the Lord Bishop of London for his kindness in presiding on this occasion. His lordship was really the right man in the right place.

The Rev. Dr. Cumming ably seconded the resolution, which was carried with acclamation.

The Lord Bishop of London briefly acknowledged the compliment, and the company separated.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

The report of the directors of this company states, that the chief engineer of the company in India reported, under date of the 7th of May last, that he had proceeded from Surat to Broach on a trial trip, running the same engine through from the Taptee to the Nerbudda, a distance of thirty-three miles. The distance of 117 miles between Surat and the Vaturnee River, on the Bombay Junction line, was in progress of construction. The plans and sections of alternative lines for the remaining portion, about forty-six miles, into Bombay, by the last advices had been completed, and were to be laid before the Government. If all matters go on concurrently, and with energy, the directors are informed by the consulting engineer that 260 miles of line between Ahmedabad and the Vaturnee River may be opened for traffic within the year 1860. The completion of the remaining portion into Bombay would mainly depend upon the date at which the Government sanction for its construction might be conceded. The Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India in Council had conceded a guarantee of interest on an additional capital of £550,000, of which £300,000 was to be raised upon debentures for five years, bearing a guaranteed interest of 5 per cent. per annum, and convertible into shares with the like guarantee, at one month's notice after the expiration of twelve months from the date of their issue. The Government have authorised the company to survey an important extension of their line from a point between Broach and Baroda to Indore. It would open the rich districts of Central India to their traffic, the export trade of which was of a most valuable description. The capital account shows that £1,090,405 had been received, and £986,345 expended, leaving a balance of £14,104 in the hands of the Secretary of State for India in Council, and £89,956 at the bankers and in cash in India.

BOOKS.

The Religious Condition of the Chinese. By the Rev. Jos. Edkins, B.A. Routledge and Co.

"Three modes of worship and three philosophies underlying them" have flourished for ages in China, sometimes in conflict, but more frequently in harmony with one another. The Chinese are naturally tolerant as to religious matters, and by no means prone to persecution, unless political movements be concealed under the mask of faith. In the northern provinces there is even a considerable sprinkling of Mahomedans, "probably the most lax of all believers in Islam," but who are unmolested in their resistance to idolatry. The Roman Catholic converts are estimated by Mr. Edkins at one million, and these, too, enjoy perfect freedom of worship according to their own creed. The national feeling, however, converges into a union of the three systems of Koong-foo-tsze, or Confucius, Buddha, and Taou. This convenient facility of belief is ascribed to their superstitious temperament, combined with a deficiency of conscientiousness. They find it more easy to accept as truth whatever is told them than to sift the evidence, and distinguish the true from the false. Besides, these three religions are not so much antagonistic as supplementary to one another. The teaching of Confucius was of a moral nature. He inculcated the duty of mutual love and forbearance, of filial piety, and of reverence for departed ancestors. Taou, on the other hand, was a materialist. According to this system the soul is matter, but matter of a purer kind than the body. The soul achieves immortality by a physical discipline which prepares it for a new existence. The stars in the eyes of the Taouists are divine, and so also are "hermits and physicians, magicians and seekers after the philosopher's stone and the plant of immortality." Buddhism, again, is metaphysical. "It appeals to the imagination, and deals in subtle argument. It says that the world of the senses is altogether unreal, and upholds this proposition by the most elaborate proofs. Its gods are personified ideas. It denies matter entirely, and concerns itself only with ideas." Thus the cold philosophy of Confucius was supplemented by the more spiritual, though erroneous, religion of Buddha, and men learned to worship the Deity as well as to love their fellow creatures. But an ignorant people were not satisfied with an abstract faith, or even an active morality. They asked for immediate and material rewards for virtue, and this want was supplied by Taouism, which removes sickness and averts calamities from its pious followers. It is obvious that these ill-defined notions on the subject of religion tend to facilitate the task of conversion, and to afford considerable encouragement to the labours of the missionaries. Thus far, indeed, the Protestants have not much cause for exultation, as their converts are not supposed to much exceed one thousand, "the fruits of sixteen years' labour by about a hundred missionaries at the five treaty ports."

Mr. Edkins' little volume is full of much curious and interesting information with regard to the different kinds of temples in China, and likewise on the religious, moral, and social condition of the Chinese. It is surprising that he should have succeeded in condensing so much valuable matter within such narrow limits, and that without being at all dry or obscure. So far from this being the case, he has produced a very readable work on a topic of general interest, in which he not only stimulates our curiosity but gratifies it to a large degree.

Field Exercise. 1859. Pocket Edition. Wm. H. Allen and Co.

On the principle that "good wine needs no bush," it may seem superfluous to write in terms of commendation on this extremely convenient edition of the "Field Exercise and Evolutions of Infantry" as revised by her Majesty's command. At the same time, without indulging in undue praise, we may well offer a few remarks in explanation of its peculiar advantages. In the first place it is cheaper than the larger edition, and it is only one-third of its size. So portable, indeed, is it that it may be easily carried in a coat pocket without the slightest inconvenience on the score of bulk or weight. Then, it is equally authentic with the more cumbersome edition, and corresponds with it page for page. The letter-press, too, is particularly clear and distinct, and may be read in any light by any man not absolutely blind. The plates, also, are excellent, and, if possible, even more accurate than those from which they are copied. These various reasons have already secured for this pocket edition a very extensive circulation among the officers of her Majesty's regular army. It will, however, be found equally useful for militia regiments, and in the midst of war's alarms the subject becomes one of almost universal interest. A reference to the plates and their accompanying descriptions will certainly tend to render far more intelligible the accounts which reach us from Italy of battles and skirmishes, marchings and counter-marchings. In short, this little pocket volume is "the latch-key" to all military chronicles, and is scarcely less indispensable to general than to professional readers.

The Future of India. By M. N. S. L. Booth.

A civilian of ten years' standing has had the honesty to come forward and denounce the defective points in the administrative system of India. He has put his finger upon the many blots which disfigure that system, and which have rendered its perpetuation quite impracticable. It is, of course, gratifying to us as journalists to find our own statements thus corroborated by one so well qualified to judge of their correctness. But, at the same time, we are a little curious to know why this civilian should have waited until the present moment to recognise the existence of the evils so long proclaimed by the press, and so stoutly denied by the service to which he has the honour to belong. How is it that he did not raise a warning voice before the rebellion broke out? Or are we to understand that it needed that terrible convulsion of society to open his eyes to the real nature of our position in India? In the latter case it was not creditable to his perspicuity to have remained in ignorance of matters which were notorious to all European residents beyond the pale of the services. However, we would rather welcome than discourage a convert, though we may fairly regret that his conversion should have been so long delayed.

The civilian of ten years' standing is opposed to annexation, to the employment of a large native force, and to the instruction of natives in the scientific branches of the military profession. He has no more confidence in the Sikhs than in the Hindoos or Mahomedans, and has heard them confess that they, too, would have risen against us could they have found a leader. He concedes the propriety of reducing the salary of the Governor General, the Commander in Chief, the other members of Council, and of all civilians in the higher grades; and he proposes to apply the fruits of this reduction to the augmentation of the number of magistrates. He admits that no one man can efficiently administer justice to one million of individuals, besides collecting revenue from a district as large as Wales, overseeing roads and buildings, superintending the jail, managing the treasury, directing education, visiting the Mofussil schools, and attending to a host of miscellaneous duties. He is even of opinion that the best possible training for a good judge does not necessarily require him to have undertaken, in the course of ten to fifteen years, the various duties of magistrate, dacoit-catcher, postmaster, secretary to a bank, inspector of prisons, and financier or accountant-secretary. He regards the planters as "a highly respectable, intelligent class," and believes that we shall never have a firm hold of India until more capitalists are settled there. But before these can be expected a more intelligible criminal and civil code must be enacted, and the local courts purified. He advocates, however, the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts, but apparently because he considers the Company's judges as singularly incompetent, and ignorant of law. He would have all civilians trained according to particular departments, and kept each to his peculiar province. Honorary magistrates are regarded with favour, and also the admission of barristers of five years' standing in India to sit as judges of the Mofussil Small Cause Courts, and in the Legislative Council there should be, he thinks, four non-official members, two European and two native. The system of taxation is declared to be unjust and ruinous. The zemindars are reduced to poverty, and the ryots to starvation, partly through over-assessment, and partly through the action of the law courts. And unless reforms are promptly introduced we are promised a rebellion far more general and terrible than the one we have scarcely yet suppressed. The financial embarrassments of the Government are likewise visited with unsparing censure, and their origin attributed to breach of faith and ignorance of finance. Such is the purport of this pamphlet, which, though carelessly written, is full of home truths and not unwise suggestions. The only extraordinary thing is that they should have emanated from a civilian of ten years' standing; for the most radical planter could not have been more severe upon the whole system of civilian administration.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW is, as usual, distinguished by discussing subjects of deeper and more permanent interest than are commonly entered on in monthly publications. The first article, on a book entitled 'Man and his Dwelling Place,' affords the writer an opportunity of professing his acceptance of the Idealistic theory of Bishop Berkeley, which, though supported by reasoning that it is admitted cannot be refuted, has hitherto made so little progress with mankind in general, chiefly on account of the misapprehension that has prevailed, or, perhaps, we may say, which does prevail, respecting it—a misapprehension that, doubtless, the writer is correct in ascribing to people picking up their notions of it at second hand, instead of resorting to the exposition of Berkeley himself. The article entitled 'A Reviewer's Parcel' is a lament over the degeneracy of the present age, especially made manifest by the vast number of new books published every month. Every one has a vague desire to go behind the scenes of a theatre, and by admitting, or pretending to admit the public behind the scenes of reviewing, the writer of the article in question has produced a taking and readable paper, with which those who know little or nothing about the subject of which it treats will probably be best pleased. 'The Story of Microscopical Discovery' is an interesting article in which the progress of microscopical sciences is traced from its commencement to now. 'The Resources of India and its Colonization,' an article the first part of which appeared last month, is continued in the present number by a writer who has evidently devoted to the subject considerable care, pains, and research. An article on the picture exhibitions, a political article entitled 'The French in Italy,' 'The Slavonians in Austria,' with other papers, fill up the number."—Globe, June 3, 1859.

"It would seem as if the conductor of this periodical has reached, even so soon as its fourth number, to a painful sense of his responsibilities. The article entitled 'A Reviewer's Parcel' is evidently a picture of an interior drawn from the life. To judge from the tone in which the writer bemoans himself, he is sinking under a mouthful avalanche of modern literature, the aspect alone of which is tending not only to deprive him of the time and repose necessary for the operation of thinking, but is actually shortening his life—we hope not because he is assisting in producing a really good periodical, which, as we have before had the occasion to state, possesses the merit of improving as it goes on. The present number exhibits a judicious selection of subjects, treated with the same freshness and earnestness on which we have previously remarked, and which show that there is so much youthful verity among his contributors as to act amply as compensation for any such decay in his own energies as the book-ridden Editor seems desirous of indicating. It ought to be noticed that a speciality in this magazine is the regular attention which is paid to subjects connected with India, and the thorough knowledge of the subject with which they are treated, which the internal evidence proves to the least initiated of the readers of the articles in question."—Illustrated London News, June 11, 1859.

Extract from a Letter recently received from New Zealand.

"Auckland, N. Z., Nov. 19, 1858.
"A lady to whom I gave some of your invaluable Cough Lozenges, and likewise several members of her family, who were troubled with severe coughs and colds (especially the youngest child, who had a hard croupy cough) have experienced great relief, and speak of them in the highest terms. One of my own children, too, who was troubled in like manner, has taken them with the greatest advantage. On account of their pleasant taste, children will readily take them, when they will not take other medicines. I may add that the lady above referred to informed me that she had frequently purchased them, when residing in India, of Messrs. Treacher and Co., Bombay."

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and ALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided: no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unobtainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

BRITISH COLLEGE of HEALTH, New Road, London.—MORISON'S VEGETABLE UNIVERSAL MEDICINE

is the only medicine that strikes at the root of all disease. This has been proved by an experience of thirty years, during which time upwards of 400,000 cases of cure have been effected. The Hygeian agents throughout the world are unanimous upon the Hygeian system of medicine introduced by James Morison, the Hygeist, who not only taught the public how to cure their own ailments, but also rescued the world from the dangers of false medical doctrines. The monument lately raised to his memory, by a penny subscription, sufficiently attests the importance of his discoveries.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT

from the Second Edition (page 188) of the Translation of the Pharmacopoeia of the Royal College of Physicians of London, by Dr. G. F. Collier, published by Longman and Co.:—

"It is no small defect in this compilation (speaking of the Pharmacopoeia) that we have no purgative mass but what contains aloes; yet we know that hæmorrhoidal persons cannot bear aloes, except it be in the form of COCKLE'S PILLS, which chiefly consist of aloes, scammony, and colocynth, which, I think, are formed in a sort of compound extract, the acidity of which is obviated, I suspect, by an alkaline process, and by a fourth ingredient (unknown to me) of an aromatic tonic nature. I think no better and no worse of it for its being a patent medicine. I look at it as an article of commerce and domestic convenience, and do not hesitate to say it is the best made pill in the kingdom; a muscular purge, a mucous purge, and a hydrogogue purge combined, and their effects properly controlled by a dirigent and corrigent. That it does not commonly produce hæmorrhoids, like most aloetic pills, I attribute to its being thoroughly soluble, so that no undissolved particles adhere to the mucous membrane."

NEWBURY'S COD LIVER OIL CAKES.

"We have examined a specimen of gingerbread made by Messrs. Newbury—each cake containing a teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil. The gingerbread is extremely light and pleasant, the flavour of the oil being completely covered. This seems likely to prove a very useful mode of administering Cod Liver Oil to children, and to others who are nauseated by the offensive odour and flavour of the Oil as generally taken."

THE ARMIES OF THE GREAT POWERS.

BY LASCELLES WRAXALL.

.* The object of this work is to furnish a correct and detailed account of the amount and nature of the forces belonging to the Great Powers. At a glance may be perceived the strength of the respective armies, and characteristics of their troops, their drill, discipline, and uniform. Although Mr. WRAXALL treats more especially of the Armies of France, Austria, England, Russia, and Prussia, he has not omitted those of Sardinia, Turkey, and Anglo-India. The value of such a Manual can hardly be over-estimated at the present moment, when three armies are already in the field, and at least two more placed on a war footing.

"A volume of both special and popular interest."—Athenæum.

"For all whose interest in the noble art of self-defence is as real as it should be, a compilation like Mr. WRAXALL's, has considerable value."—Saturday Review.

"A very readable and instructive volume. But better than his opinions are his facts. The description of the Austrian, Prussian, Russian, French, Sardinian, and Turkish Armies is exact and entertaining. He is also very accurate in his delineation of the composition of the British and Anglo-Indian Armies."—United Service Gazette.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

To some of our readers the most agreeable intelligence received by the Calcutta Mail of the 3rd of June will be the announcement that the reports of the local authorities in Bengal, the North-West Provinces, and the Punjab, on the subject of compensation, together with a minute from the Governor General in Council, have, at last, been forwarded to the Secretary of State for India. Nothing, however, appears to have been done in the matter of prize-money.

On the 1st of June the Calcutta Volunteer Guards were disembodied by a formal order published in the Gazette. This proceeding has naturally caused considerable dissatisfaction among the European residents in Calcutta. In the present threatening aspect of affairs in Europe, it is thought unwise to renounce any means of defence, however slight, especially when they are popular and not expensive. The Volunteers, moreover, took it as a slight that they were not assembled on parade, and publicly thanked for their patriotism. But Lord Canning was probably aware that the worthy citizens, with whose martial services he was about to dispense, were not particularly well disposed towards himself, and might, consequently, have expressed their sentiments otherwise than by cheers.

On the Queen's birthday the Bishop of Calcutta, with the Archdeacon and clergy of the metropolis, congratulated his Excellency, the Governor General, on the honours he had won, and also read an address to her Majesty setting forth "the views of the clergy upon the relation of the Government of this country (India) to its subjects in a religious point of view." Lord Canning returned thanks for their good wishes for his own health and happiness, and expressed his gratitude for "the steady introduction of peace."

In the midst of the clash of arms public works of great utility have not been neglected, at least, in the Punjab. On the 11th April the Baree Doab Canal was opened with befitting ceremony, and well-merited praise has been bestowed by Government upon the officers chiefly concerned in this stupendous undertaking. Though inferior in extent to the Ganges Canal, it is superior to any other in the world, and promises to be the means of fertilising an immense tract of country. The officers especially commended in the Gazette are the late Lieut. Home, Captain Gulliver, Mr. A. G. Crommelin, Major Innes, Captain Crofton, the Superintendent of the Canal, and Captain Dyas, the director of the Works.

The disaffection of the European soldiery appears to have extended to the Madras Presidency, and it is stated that the First Fusiliers, who distinguished themselves by their heroic conduct in the first relief of Lucknow, refused to give "three cheers for the Queen" on her Majesty's birthday. It is only fair, however, to that illustrious corps to add that there seems to have been some misunderstanding on the occasion.

The news from China is comparatively unimportant. The British Plenipotentiary was about to start for Peking, escorted by a large force as far as the Gulf of Pechele, though it was not expected that any opposition would be made to his progress.

BENGAL.

RAJPOOTANA IN THE MUTINIES.

Perhaps no division of India seriously imperilled attracted so little attention during the mutinies as Rajpootana. By situation, constitution, and political circumstances, this region was singularly exposed, and to this day the escape of British influence in that quarter is almost incomprehensible. The territory touching to the east on Delhi, and to the west on a dangerous corner of Bombay, is occupied almost entirely by Hindoo feudal sovereignties. The Bhurtpore Rajah is, we believe, a Hindoo dissenter, and the Nawab of Tonk is a Mussulman, but the majority of the chieftains are pure Hindoo nobles, one of them with pedigrees to which those of the blue blood of Europe are of yesterday, and acknowledging only a general suzerainty in the British Government. Their thakoor, like the nobles of the middle ages, are always striving for independence, and the public opinion of the fighting class sways strongly against the white protectors of the Rajahs. There were in May, 1857, no Europeans nearer than Deesa, and very few of them there; and both at Nusseerabad and Neemuch the garrisons were composed, to a great extent, of Bengalees. The provinces were choked with small contingents, not usually in the finest state of discipline, and frequently sympathising with the mutineers. The disposition of troops was as follows:—At Nusseerabad were the 1st Bombay lancers, 15th and 30th regiments Bengal N.I., and a native (horsed) battery; at Neemuch a wing of the 1st Bengal cavalry, 72nd Bengal N.I., 7th regiment of the Gwalior Contingent, and a native troop of horse artillery; at Kherwarra, to the south-west of Neemuch, distant about one hundred miles, were the Meywar Bheel corps, and a troop of the 1st Bengal cavalry; at Bewar the Mhairwarah battalion; at Erinpoora the Jodhpore legion, consisting of three arms; and at Deolee the Kotah Contingent, consisting likewise of cavalry, artillery, and infantry. At Mount Aboo there were about eighty men of H.M.'s 83rd regiment, chiefly invalids, with a detachment of the Jodhpore legion. The first intelligence of the mutinies reached the political agent, Colonel G. St. Patrick Lawrence, at Aboo, on the 19th of May, 1857, and that officer at once directed the chiefs to call their troops, ordered a light field force from Deesa to Nusseerabad, and made arrangements for protecting Ajmere.

On the 25th of May part of the light field force marched from Deesa, and in passing through Erinpoora was joined by 300 of the Jodhpore legion. Before this force reached its destination, the safety of the Ajmere magazine had been provided for by Colonel Dixon, the commissioner of Ajmere, who sent one hundred Mhairs, under Lieut. Carnell, to replace the company of the 15th Bengal N.I. No small praise is due to this officer, who with his men made a forced march of thirty-seven miles from Bewar, and took over charge before the company in possession could communicate or arrange any plan of action with their comrades in Nusseerabad. The Maharajah of Jodhpore also despatched 2,000 men, with six guns, to preserve Ajmere, which, as a purely British possession, and in the heart of Rajpootana, was of incalculable importance. Most other princes showed equal alacrity. At the very commencement of the disturbances the Rajpoot States of Jeypore, Ulwur, and Bhurtpore, marched considerable forces in the direction of Agra, at the requisition of Mr. Colvin, to assist in re-establishing order. The Maharajah of Jeypore sent 5,000 men, under the superintendence of Captain Eden, the political agent, towards Muttra and Goorgaon, and they rescued several Europeans in the last-named district; but after meeting with Rawul Sheo Singh, ex-minister of Jeypore, on his return from Delhi, they tampered with the Hindustani sepoys, and the spirit of the men became so disaffected, that in spite of the gallant bearing of the political agent, and the Sirdars, Captain Eden felt compelled to return in July. This was the more necessary as cholera in a severe form had broken out among the troops. Indeed, the wonder is that this force returned intact to Jeypore, for it contained a large number of Hindustances, who sympathised to the fullest extent with their Delhi brethren, and had actually plotted to murder Captain Eden.

The Bhurtpore force mutinied, but the Ulwur men stood firm, and were subsequently annihilated by the Nusseerabad brigade en route to Delhi. Their chiefs were throughout loyal, and, like most of their order, looked to us as their ultimate defence against the ambitious pretensions of the lesser nobles. Thus the Rana of Oodeypore held his mutinous troops in check. The Rajah of Jeypore furnished a really efficient force to protect Ajmere. The Rajah of Bikaner headed his own men. The Durbar of Bhurtpore remained, in spite of their traditions, loyal to the last. The Nawab of Tonk, after his troops had fled to Delhi, still stood by the British, sent them information, and, as the sole Mussulman prince, exercised a most favourable influence over the few Rajpoots of his creed. The Rajahs of Jhallawur, Kotah, and Boondee were all loyal, through circumstances; and in Boondee a strong hatred towards Kotah deprived them of efficiency. All arrested mutineers wherever they were found. All maintained the peace in their respective territories; and one—the little Rajah of Kerowlee, compelled his villagers to surrender all European plunder left among them by the mutineers of Mount Aboo.

The mutiny at Nusseerabad commenced at four P.M. on the 28th of May, and the very company of the 15th regiment which had guarded the Ajmere arsenal was the first to seize the guns. The Bombay lancers alone, as a body, stood firm, and made an attempt to retake the guns; but, in the face of two full regiments of infantry, and a company of mutinous artillery, their charge was unsuccessful. Two of their officers were killed, and two wounded. By order of Brigadier Macan, commander of Nusseerabad, the lancers retired with the European officers and ladies to Bewar. The mutineers then plundered and burnt the station, and next day marched on Delhi. It is possible that the knowledge of the approach of the Europeans from Deesa precipitated the mutiny. Doubtless that knowledge saved the town of Ajmere from plunder, and the magazine from assault.

They were pursued by 1,000 Marwar cavalry, who, however, refused to attack them, conduct they repeated when the garrison of Neemuch, following the Nusseerabad example, mutinied, burnt the station, and marched to Delhi. Neemuch was immediately regained by Captain Lloyd, the superintendent, with some mounted police, and Major Barton, political agent for Harowtee, marched into the station with troops from Kotah, Boondee, and Jullawar. These did good service, and on their relief by a party of H.M.'s 83rd regiment, and some of the 12th Bombay N.I., departed with proffers of further service. This gallant conduct of Captain Lloyd and Lieutenant Ritchie was of the utmost importance, as the former was the chief civil authority, Captain Showers being absent at the time. Colonel Dixon, the regenerator of Mhairwarra, died on the 25th June, but his influence survived him. General Lawrence assumed charge of his civil duties, and the reclaimed Mhairs flocked to his aid, forming one complete new regiment, and bringing the old one up to the strength of a regiment of the line. The Maharajah of Bikaner held Hansi and Hissar gallantly against the rebel villagers, but his men, commanded by Lieut. Mildmay, a gallant young officer, who, on 19th August defeated 3,000 mutineers and villagers, could not be induced to act actively on the offensive.

By the end of July affairs seemed in a position in which an attitude of quiet expectancy was possible. Nusseerabad had been strengthened by the arrival of the light column from Deesa, and Neemuch occupied by a detachment including 100 Europeans, when an unfortunate occurrence precipitated the crisis. Capt. Showers, officiating agent for Meywar, resolved to attack Nembhaira, a Pergunnah of Tonk, some twenty miles from Neemuch. The authorities of the place offered terms, but were attacked, unsuccessfully, and next morning evacuated the place. The military commandant escaped to Mundesore, and became conspicuous for the ceaseless energy of his attacks. Neemuch was constantly threatened, and an attempt to dislodge the Mundesore rebels from Jerun, only twenty miles from the city, failed, though the position was, as usual, evacuated. On the 8th November the Mundesore rebels attempted a yet bolder stroke. Upwards of 4,000 men, headed by the late commander at Nembhaira, took possession of what remained of Neemuch, pillaged every place, and destroyed every house still standing. The Europeans, with the two companies of the 12th Bombay N.I., took refuge in the fortified square. As this, from its small size, did not afford accommodation for the cavalry, they were sent into the districts. An attempt was made to charge the rebels; but the Meywar horse, under the Political Agent, gave no assistance, and nothing could be effected.

The rebels, chiefly Wylaytees and Mewattees, kept up a matchlock fire from an entrenchment recently constructed. The entrenchment formed excellent cover for the matchlockmen, of which they promptly availed themselves. Their cannon placed at a greater distance fired occasionally, but had little effect on the walls of the fortified square, and a few shells severally silenced them at once in that position. It was most fortunate for the garrison the enemy had no mortars, or the walled enclosure would have afforded little protection. On the morning of the 21st November the rebels, in large numbers, attempted to escalate, but were completely beaten back. The siege lasted fifteen days, and was only razed by the advance of the Central Indian Field Force on Mundesore. All the troops, Europeans and natives, behaved with the utmost coolness and intrepidity; the command and management devolving on Captain Lloyd. Major Simpson and Captain Lawrie were incapable of taking any active part from their wounds. Captain Lloyd's arrangements were excellent, and ably carried out, but, strange to say, although the above-named officers have received promotion, as yet he has been unrewarded.

From this moment the peace of the district has been preserved, and Neemuch has been made a station for Europeans. For the next three months Rajpootana remained comparatively quiet. The Jodhpore Legion mutinied at Mount Aboo on 21st August, but the invalids drove them down the hill, and the men fled, succeeding only in the plunder of Erinpoora. They took service with Koopial Singh, Thakoor of Awah, who was attacked by General Lawrence with a small force, but without success. The siege attracted some attention at the time, but its political importance was slight, and the great object, the maintenance of communications between the Governor-General and Bombay, was secured. The campaign of retribution did not commence till January, 1858, when Col. Raines arriving from Deesa marched with a reinforcement from Nusseerabad against Awah. These consisted of details of H.M.'s 83rd regiment, of the 10th and 12th Bombay N.I., of the 1st and 2nd cavalry, and of the 2nd Sindhe horse, with fourteen guns and mortars, the whole under the command of Colonel Holmes, 12th Bombay N.I. This force numbered about 1,800 men, 700 of whom were cavalry. After five days' siege operations, the cavalry being disposed so as to prevent escape, a breach was pronounced practicable, and the assault fixed for the next morning. Unfortunately, a most fearful storm raged during the night, when it was impossible for sentries, placed at a few paces apart, to hear much less see each other. During the storm the enemy evacuated the place, and were only heard by one picket, that of the 1st Lancers, who killed twelve and took nine prisoners. Next morning the cavalry pursued, and took 124 prisoners, and among them 24 of our sepoys, who were tried and shot. The remainder were handed over to the Officiating Political Agent, Major Morrison, who was with the force. Six brass and seven iron guns were found in the fort, with a large quantity of ammunition. The defences were of great strength, and consisted of two lines, both well loop-holed. After destroying the palace and fortifications the troops proceeded to Nusseerabad, where, at the request of General Lawrence, a force was assembling from Bombay to retake Kotah.

By March a sufficient army had been formed, consisting of 1,800 European infantry of H.M.'s 72nd, 83rd, and 95th regiments; of the same number of sepoys of the Bombay 10th, 12th, and 13th regiments; of 450 sabres of the 8th Hussars, 1,075 native cavalry of 1st and 2nd Bombay cavalry, 2nd Scinde horse, and 2nd Belooch horse; of ten horse artillery guns, one European horsed battery, and two guns of a native battery, a mountain train of six guns, and a second class siege train, with the 11th company of Royal Engineers, and a company of Bombay Sappers. The army encamped on the left bank of the Chumbul, where batteries were constructed. The Kerowlee troops, who were throughout faithful, and who held part of the old town and palace, were reinforced by 200 of H.M.'s 83rd regiment and some guns. Supplies for the troops were abundantly furnished by the Kotah authorities.

The siege of Kotah was longer protracted than might have been expected. Some days were lost in merely cannonading the town from the left bank. The mode in which the cavalry was placed and handled after the assault rendered the force comparatively useless. There was no active pursuit, the horses might as well have been at their pickets. With whom the blame of this rests is not yet known, but opinions have been freely expressed, and some have even talked of a court martial. The despatches have not been published in India.

On the morning of the assault the horse artillery and cavalry brigade were posted seven miles down the river at the Gamuckford, to prevent the rebels, when driven out of the town, crossing the Chumbul. During the assault, a portion reconnoitred without seeing anything of importance. The same evening they received orders to stand fast that night, and to move early next morning on the Lollpoorah gate of the city. They did so, and found all deserted. On the evening of the 1st of April, the brigade of cavalry and horse artillery started in pursuit; but as the enemy had evacuated the place on the assault, there was little chance of overtaking a native army, even encumbered with women and treasure, which had a start of forty-eight hours. None were overtaken in the pursuit of sixty miles to the Parbuttee, but their route was plainly marked by the dead bodies and the abandoned carts, which were strewn all along. Seven brass guns were found abandoned in the bed of the Parbuttee. Kotah after the assault showed a desolate appearance; the prize property was of small value, and chiefly taken from the poorest classes. The real and valuable was taken to Gwalior by the fugitives.

With the fall of Kotah our supremacy in Rajpootana was completely re-established. A brigade was despatched to assist Sir Hugh Rose, and from that day to the present the tranquillity of this vast region has been maintained. We have not encountered a story already too long with the attack on Doongurpore, the intrigues of the Rajah of Salumbhur or the danger of Kherwarra. Enough remains to show that we owe the safety of Rajpootana to the fidelity of the chiefs, secured by the watchful anxiety with which Sir Henry Lawrence and his brother removed every cause of discord.—Friend of India, May 26.

RULES FOR THE GRANT OF WASTE LANDS IN THE DARJEELING TERRITORY.

I. Grants of waste land in the Darjeeling territory shall be sold by auction at an upset price of ten rupees an acre.

II. Sales of grants of waste lands shall be made from time to time at the office of the superintendent of Darjeeling, on application for that purpose by intending purchasers, in such manner and under such rules as may be laid down for that purpose by the Board of Revenue, full and sufficient notice of the day of sale, and other needful particulars, being given to the public. Should it in any case be deemed inexpedient to grant the land applied for, the superintendent shall refer such case, with his reasons for deeming the grant inexpedient, for the orders of the Board.

III. Every grant proposed to be sold shall first have its boundary cleared, and its area determined by an officer appointed for that purpose by the superintendent.

IV. No grant shall be sold of less than fifty acres.

V. A purchaser at auction of such grant or grants shall make a deposit, at the time of purchase, of ten per cent. on the amount of purchase-money.

VI. The balance of the purchase-money shall be paid in annual instalments of ten per cent. on the amount of purchase-money, and in default of such payment the sale shall be considered void, the deposit and any prior payments of instalments being forfeited to Government, and the Government shall be at liberty to resell the land on its own account.

VII. The Government reserves to itself the right of making and constructing such roads and bridges as may be necessary for public purposes in all lands purchased as above, and also to such indigenous timber, stone, and other materials, as may be required for making and keeping the said roads and bridges in repair. Lands taken for these purposes shall be paid for at the rates at which it was purchased, by refund of the money paid for it, and compensation shall be granted when claimed for any damage done to the plantation in the construction of the works.

VIII. The sale shall convey a title to all mines and minerals within the limits of the grant sold. But a tax not exceeding ten per cent. of the gross produce of such mines and minerals shall be leviable by the Government, in such manner and under such rules as may hereafter, from time to time, be determined on.

IX. Existing grants may be commuted under these rules, at the option of the grantees.

SUPREME COURT.—MAY 9, 1859.
BEFORE MR. JUSTICE JACKSON AND MR. JUSTICE WELLS.

In the matter of Act 43 of 1850 and the North Western Bank of India.

This was an application made on the petition of Colonel Cuthbert Davidson, the Resident at Hyderabad, a holder of a large number of shares in the North West Bank, for an order to enforce in a summary way, under Act XLIII. of 1850, the winding up of the bank, according to one of the clauses of the Deed of Settlement. That Clause provided that in case the company should at any time happen to lose one-third of the paid up capital, the business of the company should immediately, upon such event, cease, and its affairs should be wound up in such a manner as should be determined upon at an extraordinary general meeting, to be called as soon after the happening of such loss as practicable for the purpose.

Messrs. Cowie, Bell and Doyne appeared for the petitioner.

The Advocate General and Mr. Paul for the Bank.

It appeared from the statement of the case that the North Western Bank of India was established on the 1st of January, 1844, and originally carried on business at Mussooree, under the name of the Mussooree Bank, with only a nominal capital of Rs. 500,000, in 1,000 shares of Rs. 500 each. On several occasions the capital was increased, and amounted at one time to Rs. 3,000,000, but in consequence of losses sustained by the Bank, after a general meeting of the shareholders in 1851, the nominal value of the shares was reduced from Rs. 500 to Rs. 400, and the capital was decreased to the nominal sum of Rs. 400, and 22,05,000, at which it remained till the present time. This was divided into 5,514 shares of Rs. 400 each. In April, 1852, the bank was registered as a joint-stock company, under Act XLIII. of 1852, and from the petition filed on that occasion it appeared that the paid-up capital was only Rs. 17,89,000. The business of the bank was then carried on in Calcutta, with branches at Mussooree and Singapore, and an agency in London. Towards the close of 1857, the affairs of the bank appearing to be in no satisfactory condition, two auditors (for whose appointment in such cases Act XLIII. of 1850 provides), who were engaged in auditing the bank accounts, were instructed to make an estimate of all the assets and liabilities of the bank. The auditors were Messrs. Lloyd and Blechynden, and as they did not agree in all points, on the 25th February, 1858, they sent in separate reports. Mr. Lloyd reported that by the 1st losses in China, 2ndly, losses on Government paper, 3rd on discounted bills, 4th on loans, 5th on bad debts secured only by policies of insurance, 6th on dishonored bills, and 7th on the profit and loss account up to the 31st May, 1857, there had been a total loss to the Bank of Rs. 9,88,000. At the time the audit was made the Bank had about 11 lakhs invested in Government paper, and Mr. Lloyd, taking the discount upon it that existed on the 31st December, 1857, estimated the loss on that item alone at about Rs. 2,76,000. Mr. Blechynden reported the total loss at about Rs. 7,88,000; the difference in the calculations of the two auditors arising chiefly from Mr. Lloyd's having taken the discount at which the paper was on the last day of the year, while Mr. Blechynden had taken that existing at the date of the closing of his report, at which time it was less than it had been, the loan having risen to 18 per cent. discount. There was also some difference between them as to the loss on bills discounted, but both had come to the same conclusion,—that the loss was at least one-third of the capital. The directors of the Bank then made a short report, in which they differed from the auditors in the view they took of the value of some of the assets.

The Advocate General said that the only issue was to the loss of one-third of the capital; upon the view taken by the directors that amount had not been lost. He waived the question as to whether the Court would exercise its discretion to interfere.

The auditors reported again on the 5th of March as to the loans upon Indigo concerns, and upon this point there was some difference between them, Mr. Lloyd holding that the indigo securities were only sufficient to cover Rs. 2,07,000 instead of Rs. 3,05,000. The directors again met, and in their report there appeared to be little difference between them and the auditors, except as to the value of the Government paper. That difference in the estimate was not more than Rs. 60,000. The loss in their own admission was Rs. 6,07,000, more than one-third of the paid-up capital. In the report, 1858, the directors proposed a reduction of the value of the shares from

Rs. 400 to Rs. 300; and upon this point it was contended that the successive reduction in the value of the shares, coupled with the actual loss shown, in default of any explanation of the grounds for reducing the shares, was a strong evidence to show that more than one-third of the capital was gone. Since December, 1856, there had been no dividend declared. At an extraordinary general meeting of the shareholders, in March, 1858, a motion for the winding-up of the affairs of the bank was lost, and shortly after Colonel Davidson wrote to the secretary, Mr. MacLachlan, making proposals to the same effect; and in July, 1858, the Bombay shareholders communicated their wish to the directors that the bank should be wound up.

After the next half-yearly general meeting, held on the 30th of August, the directors made a further report, and stated their intention of "concentrating" the business of the bank. The amount as assets, according to their statement, was at this time Rs. 21,76,000; and their liabilities were Rs. 4,66,000; thus showing a balance of Rs. 17,10,000. The learned counsel contended that a comparison of the accounts closed on the 31st December, 1857, with those appended to the directors report of the 26th February, 1859, would show that the result of concentrating the business of the bank had not been favourable. In 1857 the cash balance was Rs. 38,000, and on the 26th February, 1859, it was Rs. 1,17,000; and in 1857 the Government securities belonging to the bank represented Rs. 11,43,000; the loans on deposit of these amounting to Rs. 6,39,000; so that at that time a surplus of about Rs. 2,18,275 existed. In 1859 the Government securities were to the amount of about Rs. 11,33,000; the loans on deposit thereof being about Rs. 8,27,000; the difference between the par value of the paper and the amount for which it was pledged was Rs. 3,05,700, but taken at its market value, that is, at a discount of 25 per cent., the paper could not be estimated at more than eight lakhs. Consequently, there was no surplus, and the security was used for its utmost worth. The directors, however, had carried this difference to credit, and had made it an asset as if the Government paper were at par. Taking other items of the accounts, the discounted bills on 1857 were to the amount of Rs. 3,05,000; in 1859 this had fallen off to Rs. 56,900, and there was thus a very considerable diminution, unless some notes of the London and Eastern Banks, stated to represent Rs. 2,92,000, were carried to credit. On this the auditors had estimated the loss at Rs. 92,000, and the directors themselves at Rs. 80,000. In respect of the Government securities, it was contended on behalf of the petitioner that Rs. 3,05,700, the amount to which they were depreciated, should be taken off the account of assets presented by the bank. There was also to be deducted the sum of Rs. 80,000 on account of the London and Eastern Bank, and a further sum of Rs. 11,000 in respect of dishonoured bills of Leach, Rawson and Co., put down at Rs. 21,000, but which could not be estimated at more than Rs. 10,000. Another disputed asset was Rs. 70,000, the alleged value of some policies of insurance, which, as it was explained, had been taken over by the late manager of the bank, Mr. Tandy, to cover loans for which they had originally been given as security. With respect to these it was contended that instead of the bank valuation, the actuaries' estimate ought to be put upon them. Another doubtful asset had originated in the following way. At the time of the failure of Larpent, Saunders, and Co., that firm was indebted to the bank in about Rs. 5,30,000 (or about a quarter of its capital). Out of that sum Rs. 1,71,000, was said to be accounted for, but the bank could not realise upon two factories, upon which the loan had been secured, and there remained a sum of Rs. 3,59,000, which was estimated to be satisfied by Sir A. Larpent's shares in the bank, were taken at Rs. 300, a share, and the assignment of a claim upon the Government for compensation for losses during the mutiny, amounting to Rs. 3,06,000. The shares, it was contended, ought to have been valued at Rs. 120 each, and the claim upon the Government for compensation was said to be a matter of mere speculation, which at all events ought not to stand for more than half the amount set down. Altogether the petitioner's case was that about Rs. 3,05,000 ought to be deducted from the assets stated by the bank. The amount to be struck off in respect of Government paper above, namely, Rs. 3,05,000, from the balance of Rs. 17,10,000 was sufficient to reduce it to below two-thirds of the original capital.

The total amount of deductions are the following:—

On Company's paper .. .. .	3,05,700
Value of London and E. Bank notes ..	80,000
Leach, Rawson and Co.'s debt ..	11,000
Larpent, Saunders, and Co.'s debts ..	2,08,800
Total to be deducted.. ..	6,05,500
Total assets according to directors' report were .. .. .	21,76,000
Liabilities .. .. .	4,66,000
	17,10,000
Deducting from this the loss on Company's paper alone at 25 per cent. . .	3,05,000

Thus total amount of assets would be 14,05,000

Ex parte Plumer; Re the British and Foreign Smelting Company, 32 Law Times, 323 was cited.

The Advocate-General contended that the bank being under no compulsion to sell the Government paper, it could not be valued at the current rate of discount at a particular date; and that it was worth to the bank much more than its value in the market on the 31st December, 1859.

Mr. Justice Jackson said that the question was reduced to a very narrow point. It had been concluded for the bank that the agreement in support of the application was founded on a miscalculation of the value of Government paper, but the Court could apply no other criterion than the market value of the paper.

Mr. Justice Wells, in concurring with Mr. Justice Jackson, said that the event contemplated in the deed of settlement had clearly taken place. The bank were unable to answer the case made by a shareholder, a party to the deed, to the effect that its requisitions were not complied with, unless a value different from the market value of Government paper were put upon their securities. Such securities might, according to their nature, be superior or not to private, but their value in public estimation was the only guide as to what they were worth. The evidence of Mr. Mackinly had left no doubt as to the extent of the depreciation of the securities, and the bank was clearly brought within the provisions of the deed relating to the winding up of its affairs.

Mr. Justice Jackson then intimated that the costs of this application would form a charge on the assets next after the debts of the bank, and that the order would be generally to wind up, as from the present day.—Bengal Hurkaru, May 11.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LORD CANNING AND THE CLERGY.—On the same day the Governor General held a levée at Government House, which was well attended. The Bishop of Calcutta, with his clergy, read an address to Her Majesty, which he requested his lordship to convey to the foot of the throne. It contained a reference to the rebellion and the sufferings of our countrymen, and congratulated Her Majesty on the pacification of the country, and Lord Canning on his recent honours. It particularly adverted to the propriety of leaving trusts for idolatrous purposes to the strict construction of the law, instead of having them, as heretofore, carried out in certain cases by an appointed officer. In his reply Lord Canning said, "While fully acknowledging the principles contained in your address, it is to be recollected that the truly Christian spirit of forbearance in things spiritual as well as in things temporal, expressed in Her Majesty's proclamation, is the cardinal policy of her rule in India."

MR. WM. TAYLER.—The Calcutta papers contain an advertisement by Mr. William Tayler, late Commissioner of Patna. Having resigned the service he has resolved to establish a Mofussil legal agency at Patna, where he will give legal advice on all cases to be brought before the courts, manage such cases, draft petitions in English or the vernacular, and act in general as counsel and attorney.

FORT WILLIAM.—The Phoenix informs us that Fort William is shortly to cease to be the headquarters of a brigade of troops. The brigadier is to reside for the future at Dum-Dum. As soon as the office of town major is abolished, the fort adjutant will discharge the duties of that office and receive charge of Fort William.

NAWAB OF RAMPORE.—The Hurkaru states that the European residents of Kumaon are about to present a testimonial to Yusuf Ally Khan, the Nawab of Rampore, "to mark the friendship displayed to them by his highness in 1857." The Nawab was actively loyal throughout the rebellion, and aided some of the fugitives from Rohilkund to the hills.

THE UNCOVENANTED SERVICE.—We see from the Calcutta papers that the Calcutta Uncovenanted officials have appointed a committee to co-operate with the Surat memorialists. The committee consists of representatives of the natives and East Indians as well as Europeans, and have resolved to claim the same privileges alike for all. They defeat their own end. They propose to petition for pension after 25 years' service without the production of a medical certificate, to the extent of half the monthly salary of the previous three years, or with it after 22 years' service; for one-third salary after 15 years' service with medical certificate. They ask for one year's furlough on half pay after ten, or two years after fifteen years' service; for three years' leave on medical certificate, the absentee drawing half salary for two years, and one-third for the third year. Leave is not to count towards pension, the rules respecting privilege and casual leave are to stand as at present, and no service before the age of 21 years is to count.

TANTIA TOPEE.—We must, after all, divest Tania Topee of anything like the noble or heroic. The Delhi Gazette states that ample evidence is in possession of Government that Tania Topee, under the orders of the Nana, was most conspicuous in the Cawnpore massacre. One witness was close by him at the ghāt when he gave the order for the bugle to be sounded which was the signal for the onslaught. Tania was also with the Nana in a house close to the slaughter-house. The latter with Teeka Sing, Jwala Pershad, Bala Rao and others, gave the orders, and induced their followers to commit the murders. The worst of all, however, was Bala Rao the Nana's brother."

BENGAL ENGINEERS.—The Engineer's Journal gives an account of the examination of the Civil Engineering College held so late as a month ago. It has produced its first-fruits in the shape of eleven students, out of a class of nineteen, who obtained certificates of qualification as Probationary Assistant Engineers. They joined the College on its establishment in 1856, and are the first Bengalees who have been educated in this country as engineers.

DR. WALKER.—The Englishman is informed that Dr. Walker, the Superintendent of Port Blair in the Andaman Islands, has sent in his resignation. We do not wonder at it. More than six months of such a post must be intolerable, while three months of the duties might be an agreeable change to wearied or invalid officials on the continent. The late outbreak must have made the post still more unpleasant, but it is work that must be done, and done well.

NATIVE HOLIDAYS.—The Government have at last begun to act sensibly on the question of native holidays, at least in the one Department of Public Works. In that office holidays are reduced by one-half, when two fall together, and only two days are allowed when the full number is three. These rules obtained the sanction of Government, but the native writers, disappointed in their first remonstrance, memorialised Lord Stanley on the subject, asserting that the deprivation of their holiday is interfering with the free exercise of their religion. A copy of the memorial was formally sent to the Indian Government for transmission, and also a duplicate copy direct. The Government have refused to forward it, demand that the memorialists shall retract their plaint as to interference with their religion, and threaten their dismissal, if this is not done by the 16th May. The Phenix informs us that the Baboos have resolved to retract, but to intimate that the concession is made through deference to the wishes of the Governor General. The Baboos should have been dismissed at once. This affair will, we hope, lead to the whole question of native holidays being taken up, and settled in a manner consistent with the character of a Christian Government, and the necessities of the public service.

LUCKNOW TREASURE.—The Lucknow Herald gives a detailed account of the preservation of the Lucknow treasure during the mutiny. Before the outbreak half of it was kept in the Baily Guard as a reserve store, and half for current uses in the Tara Kotee. When the excitement arose, Sir Henry Lawrence desired Mr. Williams, the officer in charge, to remove the latter to the residency, where with great difficulty the whole, amounting to 27 lakhs, was buried. But it was discovered that in the hurry, the Government securities, amounting to nearly a crore of rupees, had been left in the Tara Kotee. A day before the battle of Chinhut, Mr. Williams rode up to it, was with much difficulty allowed by the sepoys to enter, and placed the papers in a silk waist-band. The guards would not allow him, however, to leave, and so he escaped by a window, was fired on, but reached the residency in safety. It was still more difficult to exhume the treasure on relief. It was buried in a very exposed place, and most of the party engaged in digging it up were shot, but it was at last secured and conveyed on carts with the state jewels to Cawnpore.

THE SANTHAL DISTRICT.—The Revenue Settlements recently made by the Deputy Commissioner of the Santal Pergunnahs, during his recent tour of inspection into the interior, seem to have given general satisfaction to the Santals, who are now as quiet and docile as could be. The abovementioned officer, after an absence of six months, has returned to his head-quarters at Sahebgunge.

CAZEE RAMJAN ALLEE, and Nusseemooddeen, were by a special act of grace on the Queen's birthday released from prison by the Governor General, in consideration of the valuable services rendered by them to the state, subsequently to the committing of the offence of which they were found guilty, and for which they were sentenced to fine and imprisonment. The payment of the fines has, however, been enforced, the act of grace extending only so far as to set the prisoners free.

LORD CANNING AND THE MISSIONARIES.—We are informed that H.E. the Governor General in Council, has refused to accede to a request on the part of some missionaries, to allow them admission at stated hours for evangelical purposes into the gaols where natives are confined. Lord Canning "considers so doing would be turning the machinery of justice and civil government to religious purposes;" and says that "it is still firmly believed that we have made men soldiers, and have ordered them to bite cartridges in order to convert them; and he is of opinion that in allowing these gentlemen to attempt to gain converts in this way it will be said that we have, 'under the pretence of administering justice, made it a method of conversion.' Any native, however, desirous of receiving aid from missionaries will be allowed to do so. His Excellency has also given a pretty severe rub to those subordinate officers who have presumed to doubt the justice, or disagree with the views of the Supreme Government on this point.—Englishman.

WOODEN GUNS.—At the May meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, Mr. Samuells read a note on two wooden guns, taken at the battle of Berhampore, by Col. Dunsford, in October, 1858.

Berhampore is a place between Buxar and Arrah, at which the rebels had laid these guns on low beds of earth so as to command the road. The maker, a Nepalese, had guaranteed that they should stand three discharges without bursting, but in fact they burst at the first discharge. They are fashioned out of solid blocks of Saul timber, being bored, when suspended from one end, from beneath, with the augur and common native bow. They are six feet in length with a bore of four and a half inches to nine at the muzzle, and twelve at the breech. A copper cylinder is inserted as a lining, and the whole covered with leather. Several balls of hammered iron were taken with them. The rebels had completed only these two, but several were found in all stages of preparation at Judgispore. This is the first instance of wooden guns being employed in warfare in India, though they are often used in Burmah and China.

CALCUTTA UNION CLUB.—The inauguration meeting of the new Union Club was held on Wednesday evening, 1st of June, at the club house, No. 12, Esplanade-row, when Sir James Outram was elected to be the first president. We understand that it has already more than 90 members, of whom about half are Europeans. The subscription is six rupees a month, besides an entrance fee of 100 rupees. A code of rules has been framed much the same as those of the Bengal Club, and rooms are to be opened at once for billiards, chess, and cards, with all the usual appliances of a club.

YOUNG CIVILIANS.—Mr. Halliday, in a minute on the evils of the present system, or rather no-system, of training for civil officers, written a few days previous to his leaving the Administration of Bengal, recommended that some of the junior civilians, now employed as assistants to magistrates and collectors, should be also appointed as assistants to judges. The judges should use their services in the manner best fitted to afford them a gradual insight into the duties of a Civil and Sessions Judge, and should from time to time report on their progress. The Governor General has sanctioned an arrangement of this kind.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, June 3).—The produce market has assumed a more favourable turn since the last mail. Corals have been in active request for Great Britain at full former prices. Sugar date Gupatta and Dulloah has been purchased to a fair extent at somewhat better prices. Saltpetre has lately engaged active inquiry for Europe at an advance of fully one rupee per maund. Rice has just commenced to draw the attention of English buyers, at rather better price. Linseed has also engaged attention. Jute has been in better inquiry at steady prices. Raw Silk has been in limited operation. Hides are in good demand, but scarce.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, June 3).—This is the dulllest season of the year for all sorts of Piece Goods, and the continued tightness of money during the last fortnight has caused an additional check to business. Prices of all Grey Goods of which stocks in first hands are very small, and are sold to arrive, have further receded; but since last Wednesday the market has assumed a better aspect for Shirtings and Jaconets, owing to the very light stocks in second-hands. White Cottons of all descriptions are in very moderate request, and stocks in first hands being very tight have prevented prices from receding much. Mule Twist has improved both in demand and price, owing to the market being almost bare of stocks in first hands and very tight in second hands. The inquiry has been principally for Nos. 40 and 50, at an advance of three pice per morah. Woolens are still without improvement; but the season for operation is approaching, July being the month for it. Metals are without any sensible change in value. Importers are firm, and business limited, owing to the tightness of money.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

PUBLIC WORKS.—The Madras Government has authorised the district engineers of Tinnevely, Canara, and Nellore, to spend such small sums as may be necessary to keep the ancient pagodas and buildings in these districts from entire ruin. They embrace an old palace at Streevelloppoor built by the famous Trimul Naik of Madura, with a roof consisting of a dome ninety feet in diameter, said to have been painted with figures resembling angels at the suggestion of the Jesuit, Robert de Nobili; pagodas cut out of the solid rock with short inscriptions and carvings on them; and the ruins of the ancient city of Gair-suppah in Canara. Government empower the engineers to remove small images from such ruins to the Presidency Museum, when the collector certifies that such removal will not be obnoxious to the Brahmans.

THE MERIAH AGENCY.—The Englishman publishes a list of Khonds implicated in the Meriah sacrifices in 1858, and recommended for punishment. They were ten in number, all kidnappers, and all pointed out by the Khonds as men who urged them to the horrible rite. The victims are five, a lad of twenty, an old woman, her son, daughter and infant child. Two others, girls, purchased for sacrifice, were rescued. Were these the only achievements of the agency during the year, they would furnish a sufficient answer to those who are arguing for the fiftieth time that it is useless. The fact, however, is that the habit of offering human sacrifice, like the habit of Suttee, is only suspended by the repressive force at work, and would revive the moment the pressure was withdrawn. The occurrence of even one case a year is sufficient to prove that the habit is not extinct, that public opinion does not yet pronounce human sacrifice a crime to be put down by the voice of the community. The cost of the agency certainly appears a little excessive, but that is no reason for its abolition. The agent draws Rs. 2,000 a month, and Rs. 500 more for residing in Russellkondah, a place which though technically "camp" is really a large station. His deputy is to have Rs. 800 a month, and the staff and force of Subedaries attached to the department bring the total cost up to a considerable sum. The total, however, does not amount to the salary of a member of council, and may well be spared on a department which only appears inefficient because of its complete success. To reduce the agency because sacrifices are few would be as wise as to fine an English judge for a maiden assize.

PUNCTUATION.—The Governor of Madras has issued rules to be adhered to in correspondence between Government and the heads of subordinate offices. Henceforth official communications are not to refer to enclosures, but to state all the facts and arguments so as to be complete in themselves, and to admit of immediate decision. Letters "should be written in a clear, bold hand, without erasure, in dark-coloured ink, and properly punctuated." The last, even the most perfect examination system will not secure. Experience leads us to the conclusion that the ability to punctuate properly is almost as rare as a good style. Francis Jeffrey prided himself more on his punctuation in the Edinburgh Review than on any other gift.

THE NORTHERN CANAL.—In considering the question of deepening and widening the Madras Northern Canal at an expense of seven lakhs of rupees, the Governor of Madras in Council expressed his concurrence in the opinion of Col. A. Cotton that, in the present state of India and with the very limited means at command, it is more beneficial to make efficient though imperfect works over a large extent of country, than to make perfect works of a limited character. The Northern Canal conveys 120,000 tons over its extent of seventy miles, at three pice a ton per mile. Its tolls produce the yearly sum of Rs. 32,000, which is more than sufficient to pay expenses and keep the canal in repair. Government have resolved to improve the canal at a comparatively small cost.

DENTAL SURGERY.—Sir Charles Trevelyan attends to all abuses, small as well as great, in the Madras Presidency. His last minute embodies a proposition "for affording dental aid to European soldiers." Considering that it is not enough that those who suffer from toothache should have the means of having the tooth extracted, but that the incipient decay of teeth should be prevented, Sir Charles recommends that a medical officer in every European regiment be instructed in dental surgery, that the teeth of all the soldiers in such regiments be examined, and operative assistance rendered to such as require it. An amalgam of one part of pure gold, three parts of silver, and two of tin, to be prepared at the mint, is recommended, and gold-leaf for filling partly-decayed teeth. The energy that attends to soldiers' teeth will not, it is to be hoped, allow their barracks, morals, and general comfort to be neglected.

THE LATE CAPTAIN DOUGLAS.—A Banda correspondent of the Madras Times says:—"A memorial has lately been raised at Buxar, over the remains of the late Captain James Sholto Douglas of the 4th regiment Madras light cavalry, bearing the following inscription. Sacred to the memory of Captain James Sholto Douglas, 4th regiment Madras light cavalry, who died here on the 8th of October, 1858, of a wound received in action with the rebels at Kheree, the previous day. An affectionate son—a staunch friend—a most gallant officer, and a good Christian—he died a soldier's death, beloved and lamented by all who knew him. Those who have known him longest and best, can alone feel the utter bereavement his departure to a better world has occasioned. This feeble token of love and respect is erected by his brother officers."

1ST MADRAS FUSILIERS.—It is with great regret we (Athenaeum) have to notice the fact that the gallant 1st Madras fusiliers, of whom every one in this Presidency is so justly proud, have not escaped the prevailing taint. They are now at Bangalore, and on the Queen's birthday, at the usual parade of all the troops in garrison, while Her Majesty's regiments gave the usual three cheers, the fusiliers preserved a sullen silence. This we learn from a local contemporary, the Madras Examiner, which has inserted two letters from men belonging to the regiment. These letters only confirm what has been rumoured for several days past. Col. Fischer, the commanding officer of the regiment, rode up to the men and charged them with disloyalty; and it is added that, when the parade was over, the fusiliers were formed up in their barrack square, for the purpose, so it is said, of having the Mutiny Act read out to them. Brigadier Pole was however, so goes the account, dissuaded by some officers from taking this step. It is but just to our renowned regiment to say, and we do so with the utmost pleasure, that there may after all have been some mistake in the cheers not having been given when called for, seeing that it is stated by one correspondent that the matter was not preconcerted, and that the men when called upon "afterwards" by Brigadier Pole cheered heartily.

RECRUIT BOYS.—The Phoenix informs us that the Commander in Chief of Madras has ordered the discontinuance of recruiting for the native army of that Presidency. This is in consequence of the resolution to reduce the maximum strength of each regiment to 700 men. Eligible "recruit boys," however, are, as heretofore, to be transferred to the ranks. The "recruit boy" system is exactly that adopted in the Russian army. The male children of the sepoys are enlisted at an early age. They receive Rs. 3½ a month, and act as orderlies in cantonments till the age of fifteen. They are then drilled with arms, and transferred, as required, to the different native regiments. The head quarters of the embryo army are at Palaveram, twelve miles from Madras, and at Royapooram, in Madras. As many as 2,000 of them have been sometimes seen congregated.

HYDERABAD.—The Madras Spectator notices the prevalence of cholera of a very violent description in the city of Hyderabad. Already upwards of 700 have fallen victims to it. The unsettled state of the country and the fanatic spirit of the population still continue evident. Sir Patrick Grant has recommended that one full European cavalry corps and two regiments of European infantry be permanently stationed at Secunderabad.

Our Shanghai correspondent notices a report that the Chinese authorities are also determined to oppose the admission of English travellers into the interior of the country. Both the Chinese and our own authorities have been making preparations for a misunderstanding, should such unhappily occur.

At Pekin the tampering with the papers given in at the literary examinations continues to give trouble, and some more Mandarins have been punished on that account. Everywhere over China there has been a great want of rain this season, and serious distress is apprehended in consequence. At the capital and its neighbourhood the drought has been so great, that the Emperor has in person gone to pray for his kingdom in the temple of the Black Dragon.

The rebels in the north and the south have been progressing of late. In Kwangtung they are said to threaten even Hwang, the Governor General; and on the Yangtze the Imperialist troops raised the siege of Nanking, and proceeded against some rebels further up the river, only to meet with defeat and the loss of many of their followers and guns.

The Governor of Macao has received instructions from Lisbon to form, if possible, a treaty between Portugal and China, and also a treaty with Japan. In order to effect these purposes he goes soon to Shanghai, and from thence will pass over to Japan. The complaints of the Chinese in regard to the kidnapping of coolies for the Havana have somewhat abated; and the stringency with which the Macao regulations for the control of the traffic have been carried out, has resulted in the worst portion of it being removed to the Canton river, where vessels can receive coolies very much as they please. A small steamer, chartered by the Chinese, on its way from Macao up the west river, was lately seized by some of the passengers on board, while others were robbed of all their wealth. Some of the perpetrators of this outrage have, however, been discovered in Macao, and handed over to the Chinese authorities.

At Swatow, on the 11th May, there was a desperate fight between two classes of Chinamen; and the foreign residents had been obliged to interfere for their own protection, and drive one of the parties off the island.

A large expedition, composed of several gunboats and a transport steamer, with a body of marines on board, has gone up the Broadway on a visit to the town of Heang-shan, from whence most of our servants come. There was some expectation of a fight up at that place; for though the Mandarins were ready to receive it in a friendly manner, the rabble were incensed, and had destroyed the preparations being made for the honourable reception of the visitors.

Our export of Tea to Great Britain remains as last reported, viz. 55,602,100 lbs.,—there having been no departure since last mail. To the United States, the Egeria and Arthur have sailed from Shanghai, with 828,700 lbs., and 352,500 lbs. respectively, and the Houqua from Fuchau, with 328,100 lbs. The total export amounts to 30,056,700 lbs.—Three vessels have also sailed for the Colonies, viz., from Shanghai, the Kate, with 55,600 lbs.; from Fuchau, the India, with 188,200, and the Cornubia, with 431,000.

Of Silk, the Pekin took 2,559 bales for Southampton, making the total export to Great Britain to date 67,787 bales. To Marseilles the Pekin took 273,—making a total to date of 8,032. The Ganges takes upwards of 1,777 bales for Southampton, and 296 for Marseilles.—Overland China Mail.

CHINESE ARCHEOLOGY.—At the April meeting of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, Dr. Macgowan communicated a note, describing an asylum at Hangchan for domestic animals, resembling the Bombay Pinjrapole. Hitherto it has been supposed that such institutions were confined to India. In a discussion on the Great Yu, the Noah of China, and the founder of Hia, its first dynasty of kings, forty-six centuries ago, Dr. Macgowan stated his belief "that research and excavations in Western China and Mid-Asia would yield some valuable contributions to the ancient history of the human family; and instanced the city of Ching-tu, the capital of Szechuen, as a place worthy of the visit of a Layard. In the second century before Christ, a magnificent Jewish temple was destroyed by fire in that city, and ages subsequently, after heavy rains, pearls were washed from the mound—the site of the temple:—these pearls being, probably, a portion of the veil which divided off the Holy of Holies."

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, June 11th.—Notwithstanding some stormy weather (resulting in the wreck of several native craft at Colombo, the grounding of the Pearl near Point Pedro, and a serious accident to the Bengal mail steamer at Galle), a good deal of coffee has gone forward. Three vessels to London have taken 11,089 cwt. plantation and 5,337 native, while a vessel has sailed for Amsterdam with 7,042 plantation. The aggregate exports of the fortnight are 23,468 cwt. in the proportion of 18,131 plantation to 5,337 native. Our total exports for the expired portion of the season are thus brought up to 500,197 cwt., a figure never before reached in the month of June. At this moment not only is native largely in excess of any previous season at the same date, but plantation is also in excess. The fine weather in the early part of the south-west monsoon has, of course, contributed largely to this result; but we suspect the out-turn will be greater than was calculated on.

Mr. Justice Temple has sailed for England, and Mr. Morgan has succeeded him on the bench of the Supreme Court. Dr. Charsley has come down from Kandy as acting head of the Civil Medical Department. The Governor has recommended that he should be confirmed, and that Assistant surgeon Dickman should be appointed Colonial surgeon.

We regret to say that the state of general health in Colombo is unsatisfactory. A severe form of fever prevails among the native population. Diarrhoea and dysentery have attacked all classes, whilst isolated cases of cholera are reported in all parts of the town, nearly all cases proving fatal.—Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

TORTURE.—The Straits Times records a case of barbarous cruelty. Ung ah Qui was indebted to Go ah Jee about thirty dollars for wages. Unable to pay him, Ung accused his creditor of theft, and accompanied by three others, seized him, dragged him out of the house, and tied him by the touchang or tail to a tree, put a gag in his mouth, and beat him severely with poles, leaving him still suspended by the tail. After eating they returned to their victim, passed a rattan over his forehead to secure his head to the tree, gouged out his eyes, and severed them from their sockets by an iron nail. They then cast him into a swamp and left him. On recovering his consciousness, he crawled for a day and a half to reach some hut, and at last was conducted to the police station where he told his story. He was sent to the hospital, and the maggots were cleaned out of his eye-sockets. The scoundrels were apprehended and tried in the Singapore court. A pair of human eyes, found wrapped in cloth and concealed in the roof of one of the prisoners' huts, were produced in court preserved in spirits. The prisoners confessed and attempted to justify the deed. Ung ah Qui was hanged, and the others transported for life.

Medals for the Suppression of the Mutinies.

No. 733.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council publishes for general information the following paragraphs of a military letter from the rt. hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 127, dated April 7, 1859, conveying the commands of her Most Gracious Majesty regarding Medals to be granted for the Suppression of the late Mutinies in India:—

Para. 1. Referring to the despatches to the Government of India of the dates noted on the margin,* on the subject of the grant of medals to the troops employed in the suppression of the late mutinies in India, I have now to inform you that her Majesty has been pleased to reconsider the directions already given by her on this subject.

2. It appears to her Majesty that when a medal is given for a campaign, clasps should be added very sparingly, and only for great general actions, or for such conspicuous operations as materially influence the successful termination of the war.

3. On this principle her Majesty has decided that the following is the most just, and, therefore, the most desirable arrangement:—

1st. That the medal be granted to all engaged in operations against the rebels or mutineers.

2nd. That the clasp which H.M. has already sanctioned for Delhi, be granted to those employed in the operations against, and at the assault of, Delhi.

3rd. That the clasp which H.M. has already sanctioned for the "Defence of Lucknow," be granted to all of the original garrison under Maj. gen. Sir John Inglis, and to those who succeeded them, and continued the defence under Maj. gens. Havelock and Outram, until relieved by Lord Clyde.

4th. That in lieu of the clasps which H.M. has already sanctioned for the "Relief" and "Capture" of Lucknow, as previously notified a clasp for "Lucknow," be granted to all the troops engaged in the several operations against Lucknow, under the immediate command of Lord Clyde, in Nov., 1857, and March, 1858.

5th. That a clasp for Central India be granted to the troops of the column under Maj. gen. Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B., engaged in the operations against Jhansi, Calpee, and Gwalior, and also to the troops which, under the command of Maj. gens. Roberts and Whitlock, respectively performed such important service in Central India.

4. H.M. has also been pleased to signify her gracious intention to bestow the medals and clasps on persons not in the military service who have borne arms against the mutineers, and who may be considered to have earned the distinction.

* 9th June, 1858, No. 153. 1st Sept., 1858, No. 258. See G.O. 9.G., Nos. 363 and 544 of 1858.

5. You will give instructions for the due announcement of H.M.'s decision.

6. In order to enable me to give effect to H.M.'s gracious intentions, you will instruct the C. in C. in India to give directions for the preparation and transmission with the least possible delay of nominal lists of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of H.M.'s army and Indian European military forces, and numerical returns of the officers, non-commissioned officers, and soldiers of H.M.'s Indian native armies, as may be entitled to receive the medals and clasps which it is H.M.'s gracious intention to bestow upon them, including those non-military persons who have borne arms as volunteers against the mutineers, both at Lucknow and elsewhere, who may be considered by the C. in C. and your Government to be entitled to the decoration, and to cause such other steps to be taken as may appear to you to be necessary to give effect to H.M.'s decision.

With reference to the sixth paragraph of the above letter, the Governments of Madras and Bombay, and the rt. hon. the C. in C. in India, are requested to adopt immediate measures to furnish the Government of India with rolls of the persons entitled to the medals and clasps now authorised by her Majesty.

Staff Appointments.—Examination in Native Languages.

Fort William, May 18.—No. 731 of 1859.—Under the exigencies of the service during the last two years, many officers have been made available for employment on the staff and in various situations, who have not passed the examinations in the native languages, laid down by General Order by the Gov. gen. of the 25th June, 1850; but tranquillity having now been generally restored, H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to announce that the provisions of that Order will in future be strictly enforced, and no officer will hereafter be appointed to any situation on the staff, or to any civil or other detached employment, who has not passed the prescribed examination.

Every officer who has been removed from his regiment for staff, civil, or other employment, who has not already passed the prescribed examination, or shall not pass it within six months from the date of this Order, will be remanded to his corps.

New Regulations in the Medical Service.

Military Dept., Fort William, May 20, 1859.
No. 741 of 1859.—His Excellency the Gov. Gen. in Council is pleased to direct that an examination shall be held, as soon as practicable after the respect of the order, in each of the stations of the Bengal presidency to which superintending surgeons are attached, for the purpose of filling up vacancies in the military class of the Medical College. The college session commences on June 15.

2. All candidates will be required to possess a knowledge of the Hindoostanee lang., sufficient to enable them to read and write common letters and petitions, and hospital registers of sick, in the Devanagiri of Persian character, and to converse with a sepoy in the Hindoostanee language.

3. Although a knowledge of English will not be insisted on in all cases, a preference in selection is to be given to those candidates who possess a competent knowledge of English, in addition to Hindoostanee.

4. The preference in selection, attainments being equal, will also be given to those who have already been attached to or served in civil or regimental hospitals. Beyond this, preference will not be given to men of any particular class; but respectable young men, especially those educated in the schools of Behar, the North-Western Provinces, and the Punjab, are encouraged to offer themselves, bringing certificates of character and acquirements from the inspectors or head masters of the schools.

5. Those holding such recommendations from the school authorities, and certificates of physical fitness from the nearest medical officers, will not be required to appear before the committees. As, however, the number who can be admitted to the college from each division is very limited, it is necessary that the school authorities should send the papers of all candidates, as soon as possible after the promulgation of this order, to the superintending surgeon of the division, who, the recommendations being equal, will select, in preference, those whose nominations are earliest received.

6. The examination is equally open to the sons of soldiers, and persons engaged in civil occupations.

7. The candidates must be between the ages of fifteen and twenty years.

8. No candidate will be allowed to present himself for examination who is physically unfit for the duties of a soldier, and who cannot produce a written testimonial of his conduct and character. The strictest care and attention are to be exercised in examining the credentials of all candidates who will, in addition, be required to bring regular descriptive rolls, in order that they may be identified.

9. The superintending surgeon is to prepare a general roll in the form hereafter given of all candidates to be laid before the committee, the qualification columns being left blank, for the committee to fill up.

10. Committees for the examination of candidates will be convened by the officer commanding the station, upon the requisition of the superintending surgeon, and will consist of two medical officers and an interpreter.

11. These examinations will, in future, be final as regards the admission of the candidates into the medical college, no subsequent examination in the college of Fort William being required.

12. Each passed candidate is to be furnished by the superintending surgeon with a descriptive roll in the subjoined form which he is to present to the principal of the college, and which will be his warrant for admission as student.

[Here follows the form prescribed.]

(Signed)

A. B. Surgeon, President.

C. D. Surgeon, Member.

E. F. Lieut. and Interpreter.

G. H. Subdy, Surgeon.

Division or Circle.

13. All pupils must, as a condition of their appt., reside within the college premises at all times, and never be absent from morning and evening muster without special leave.

14. All students of the military classes who, on leaving college, after having passed through their studies with credit, shall be certified to possess a competent knowledge of the English language including orthography, the meaning of words, writing from dictation, and simple arithmetic as far as the Rule of Three, shall, until further notice, be allowed a bonus of Company's Rupees (250) two hundred and fifty.

15. All students of the military class are amenable to the Articles of War, and regularly enlisted as soldiers.

16. Successful candidates will be allowed free passage down on Government steamers.

17. Military class students, while at the College, will receive a stipend or allowance of Rupees (6) six per mensem.

18. No deduction for uniform will in future be made.

19. The pay of military class native doctors, on appointment to the service, is fixed at Rs. 20 a month in garrison or at a civil station, and Rs. 25 a month in the field, of which sums Rs. 5 are to be considered as batta, and deducted when on leave of absence from corps and civil stations.

20. Upon their admission they are to enter into an engagement to serve the Government as native doctors, as vacancies may occur, for a period of not less than seven years from the time of their leaving the medical college in that capacity, unless prevented serving that period by physical inability proved before a medical committee, and certified accordingly. After a service of seven years they may demand their discharge in time of peace.

21. In the event of their continuing to serve, their allowances will, after seven years, and upon undergoing a successful examination, be advanced to Rs. 25 in garrison or at a civil station, and Rs. 30 in the field.

[Here follow some directions regarding native doctors.]

This Order is in supercession of all previous orders on the subject.

Furlough to Native Army.

Id. Qrs., Camp, Saidabad, March 26, 1859.

With the sanction of Government, the Commander in Chief is pleased to grant furlough to the whole of the armed portion of the Bengal Native Army, to whom it has not already been opened, including the Punjab corps that are now under his Excellency's control, and those corps under the orders of the Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab that are serving out of that province.

2. The furlough will commence on the 10th proximo, and terminate on the 31st October next.

3. Leave will be given, where practicable, to the extent of one-fourth of the Native commissioned and non-commissioned grades, and to fifteen per cent. of the effective strength of the private soldiers. In all cases where divisional guards may find it necessary to withhold the indulgence altogether or in part, a special report of the circumstance is to be made for his Excellency's information.

4. Leave of absence is to be given with a strict regard to the priority of claims; and the period of leave is to be limited with reference to the men's homes, and in the nature of their business, so as to admit of as general a participation in the indulgence as possible.

5. Furlough will not be given, as a rule, to the men of the new levies now forming under the Commander in Chief's orders; but special exceptions may be made, under the orders of officers commanding divisions, in the cases of old soldiers who have been transferred or may be attached to levies, or in cases of young soldiers who have urgent business.

6. All Government or regimental arms are to be left with the regiments; but men of the Mooltanee, Pathan, or Towanna horse, are permitted to take their private weapons with them.

7. Irregular cavalry soldiers are to be allowed to take their horses with them.

8. The leave certificates granted upon this occasion will contain, in addition to the usual particulars, a descriptive roll of the holders.

9. Men going on furlough are to be reminded of the penalties they are liable to incur from overstaying their leave, and they are to be warned to send notice to their regiments, should sickness detain them at their homes.

Opening of the Baree Doab Canal.

Public Works Department, Fort William, May 23, 1859.

Notification.—The Hon. Lieutenant Governor of the Punjab having officially announced the first admission of water into the Baree Doab Canal on the 11th of April, his Excellency the Governor General in Council is unwilling to let this event pass without public notice.

It is true that the project is still far from complete. But the mass of the heavier works having been constructed, all the chief difficulties having been overcome; and so notable a point in the history of the undertaking having been attained, his excellency considers that the recognition merited by the officers who have contributed to these results should not be deterred.

And these considerations are enforced by his Excellency's desire that this recognition should reach Captains Dyas and Crofton, the two officers who have been the leading spirits in this enterprise from its commencement, before they quit India. For failure of health, under the unflagging exertions of nine years, compels both now to visit Europe.

It is with rare satisfaction that the Governor General in Council turns from the anxieties that have lately weighed so heavily on the Government of India, to contemplate the progress of a great work of peace and amelioration.

The initiation of this enterprise connects itself with the honoured name of Sir Henry Lawrence, and the first rough surveys were made at his instance under the direction of Sir Robert Napier.

The Punjab war of 1848 cut short these beginnings, but soon after its termination the scheme was taken up again with a more defined and larger scope.

The project was sanctioned by Lord Dalhousie's Government in 1851, and in September of that year the canal was commenced.

From the first the charge and responsibility of the work, as regarded both design and execution, fell on Captain (then Lieutenant) Dyas, aided by Lieutenant Crofton.

First to Capt. Dyas on this occasion are therefore due the thanks of the Government in whose estimation he holds so high a place. With eminent sagacity, zeal, and constancy, through years of indifferent health, he has directed the work, and H. E. in Council heartily congratulates him on having been permitted to see, so far, the successful result of his designs and toil. All who have seen the works bear testimony to their excellence. The regularity and method with which the accounts have been furnished are no less exemplary and perhaps more rare.

Capt. Crofton is entitled to share very largely in these acknowledgments, as he has shared from the commencement in the labours of survey, of design, of organization, and of superintendence.

The only other engineer, employed since the commencement of the canal, who has been allowed to see it reach its present advanced stage, is Mr. J. D. Smithe, now superintendent of the canal workshops at Madhopoor. The Gov. Gen. in Council desires specially to recognise this gentleman's merits.

To the services of these officers his Excellency has pleasure in adding, as deserving of acknowledgment on this occasion, those of Capt. Gulliver and Fulton, of Mr. A. G. Crommelin, of Mr. J. Kelly, Mr. E. C. Palmer, Mr. H. Garbett, Mr. S. G. Hanna, and of Lieut. R. Home.

Two engineers who did excellent service on the works are not now living. Lieut. Paton, an officer of much promise, was cut off early. The name of Lieut. Duncan Home, whom Capt. Dyas pronounces to have been "the best executive engineer he ever had," will live as that of him who led the heroes of the Cashmere gate.

Two others who survive, though no longer connected with the canal, his Excellency in Council desires to tender his approval and thanks. Of these the first place is assigned to Mr. W. Lloyd, whose aid for several years was most valuable. Major Macleod Innes, Lieut. Earle, Messrs. J. G. Anderson, G. N. Dodd, and Lieut. Swetenham, also merit commendation.

Of the subordinate officers employed, Captain Dyas has named, as worthy of prominent mention, Butler, Sparling, DeBacker and Marshall, Gerson, Duggan, Cox, Robinson, Taylor, Baness, McGuffin, Lester, Robson, and Conolly.

In conclusion, his Excellency in Council congratulates the Lieutenant governor on the event which his honour justly regards with so much interest, and wishes this great work God speed for the future. In a few months, it is confidently hoped, the new channel will bear water to Lahore. But his Excellency trusts also that not many years may pass before the whole project shall have been realised, and the canal and the railway shall run side by side down the ridge of the Doab, desert no longer.

H. YULE, lieut. col. Sec. to the Govt. of India.

MADRAS.

BY THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL.

Fort St. George, May 27.

Leave of absence:—

Major general Roberts.

Bombay Castle, May 23.

No. 471 of 1859.—In notifying the resignation of the command of the Northern Division of the army by Major general Roberts, on his intended return to England, his lordship in Council desires to express his great regret at losing this distinguished officer's services.

His lordship in Council has had the pleasure to receive from his Excellency the Commander in Chief the following testimony to the value of Major general Roberts's services:—

"Specially appointed to the command of the Northern Division at the commencement of the disturbances in this presidency, and invested by his lordship in Council with high political duties, the major general held his command in Guzerat with a temper and firmness which speedily put down a partial emeute among a portion of the native troops at Ahmedabad, and restored a confidence among all ranks and classes which Sir Henry Somerset had anticipated from Major general Roberts's high reputation established by a long career of honourable and important political and military duty.

"The siege and capture by storm of the important city of Kotah again caused the Commander in Chief to reflect with satisfaction upon the selection which had been made in Major general Roberts's appointment to the command of the field division in Rajpoortana. The subsequent pursuit of the rebel army and their defeats at Sanganer and Kotaree, only attained by extraordinary exertions during the great heat and an almost unexampled burst of the monsoon, enhanced the value of the major general's services; and he now closes them, after forty years of duty so valuable and important, that the Commander in Chief solicits from the rt. hon. the Governor in Council a special recognition of the claims of Major general Roberts to be brought under the notice of the rt. hon. the Secretary of State for India."

In these expressions his lordship in Council cordially concurs, and has the pleasure to add that his excellency's recommendation has been anticipated.

Major general Roberts is allowed to return to Europe on furlough, according to the regulations.

TRANSMIGRATION OF SOULS.—The soul of a woman may, as a reward for virtue, on entering the world a second time, inhabit the body of a man. Chinese women frequently pray for this. A wicked man may become, as a punishment, a sheep, or an ant, or a bird. The retribution is decreed by a sure, but invisible and impersonal fate, the same law of fate that regulates the succession of worlds, which are constantly being created and destroyed afresh in the order of the ever-revolving Kalpas. According to this view, the region through which the soul may wander during the interminable series of lives through which it must pass, includes all the palaces of the gods, and of other beings possessing a different nature from that of man, as also the abodes of punishment for the wicked.—Edkins' Religion in China.

Colonel Cormick at Gondah.

No. 708 of 1859.—H. E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following report from Lieut. col. J. Cormick, H.M.'s 20th regt., comdg. a detach. on service, of operations against a body of rebels near Gondah.

2. H. E. in Council concurs with the C. in C. in the approbation expressed by his lordship regarding these operations.

From Lieut. col. J. Cormick, 20th regt., comdg. column, to Brigdr. A. Horsford, comdg. Trans-Gogra.

Gondah, 15th April, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that in consequence of information received respecting the rebels destroying the village of Authona, I on the morning of the 7th inst. proceeded to Maharajah-gunge with a force (strength as per margin)* accompanied by Mr. Ross, assist. commissioner. On arrival the intelligence given was of so unsatisfactory and doubtful a nature with respect to the movements of the rebels, that I remained there until the evening of the 9th, during which time I received a note from Lieut. col. Hill, rifle brig., stating that the rebels had left Authona, and were proceeding westwards. The 1st Sikh cav. having likewise scoured the country, without seeing any signs of them (with the exception of one man taken prisoner, who stated that they left that neighbourhood on the morning of our arrival) I returned to Gondah on the evening of the 9th April.

The following evening (10th inst.), I left again (force as per margin),* with Mr. Eckford, assistant commissioner. At our first halting station, Chontgettee Ghat, I heard that the rebels were at Muchlee Goan, a distance of about five miles from us. I marched there on the morning of the 11th, and found them collected in force in an extensive jungle; any operations against them in the jungle was almost out of the question; but Mr. Eckford, who always obtained reliable intelligence, having heard that a portion of them were in a ravine, not far in the interior of the jungle, I immediately proceeded there with 200 men of the 20th regt. under the command of Capt. Edridge, two guns under Lieut. St. George, (in hopes that an opportunity might offer of bringing them into play,) and a portion of the 1st Sikh cav. commanded by Capt. Jones. We advanced the 20th in skirmishing order, and completely surprised the rebels at the ravine, who, after an ineffectual fire, took to the dense jungle, followed by Captain Edridge with his men; evening coming on, I was compelled to recall the skirmishers, and returned to camp. The rebels lost about twenty killed and a number of horses. No casualties on our side. On the morning of the 12th we left about 10 a.m. for Wuzeergung, Mr. Eckford having heard that the communication between Geondah and Fyzabad had been stopped; we deemed it advisable to take that route and disperse the rebels. On the morning of the 13th we advanced towards Gondah via Kaerber jungle, and the village of Magowa. The rebels were reported to be in the Kaerber jungle, on approaching which, we saw them at a distance rapidly retreating. I immediately ordered the art. to the front, who soon got within range, and opened a most destructive fire; for nearly three hours after this it was nothing but one rapid advance, unlimbering, and opening fire with fearful effect on them, the Sikhs, under Capt. Jones, and Hodson's Horse, under Lieut. Meecham, charging when opportunities offered; the rebels were at last driven into a large expanse of water, skirting their rear; they were now entirely at our mercy: Capt. Jones crossed with his Sikhs, and charged amongst them, and they were completely routed, very few indeed escaped. A very large number remained in the water, and on Mr. Eckford offering them their lives, four-and-twenty gave themselves up as prisoners, the remainder were shot. The rebels consisted of sepoy from the 1st, 53rd, and 54th regts., having with them the colours of the 53rd regt., which were captured by the Sikhs, together with an elephant and some camels. The loss of the rebels killed was at least between three and four hundred; their strength at the commencement of the action I should think was about seven or eight hundred. I have now only to state that the conduct of all concerned has been everything that one could desire. To Capt. Edridge and the men of H.M.'s 20th Regt. great praise is due, for their conduct in action, and cheerfulness in the performance of all their arduous duties. To Lieut. Franks, comd. the Bengal H.A., and his men, too much credit cannot be given, for the steady manner they went into action, and the precision of their fire. To Capt. Jones I am likewise much indebted, for his advice, energy, and the gallant manner in which he led his Sikhs into action, who followed him gallantly. Lieut. the Hon. J. Vereker, H.M.'s 20th Regt., acted as my Orderly Officer during the time I was out, and was of great assistance; but to none is greater praise due than to Mr. Eckford. I must, in justice to him, state that the result of our great success is due principally to him, on account of the very good information he always obtained.

Army Hd. Qrs., Camp near Bootwul, Nepaul,
March 26, 1859.

Sir,—With reference to my letter No. 156, of 24th inst., to the Qr. mr. gen. of the army, I have now the honour to report, for the information of his lordship the C. in C., that I left Karjooreah at four a.m. on the 25th inst., for the purpose of attacking the rebels, said to be in force at a place called Jouraha, in the heart of the Terai, with the force named as detailed below.*

2. At Beturhee I halted the column for about an hour whilst I went forward with a troop of cav. to reconnoitre the jungle about three miles in our front, but could see nothing of the enemy's outposts, although the villagers told us they had been there early that morning.

3. I accordingly advanced the column, and covered by a strong line of skirmishers of the 3rd Sikh inf., we proceeded through a thick jungle with occasional open spaces, where a resolute enemy might have occasioned us heavy loss.

4. On reaching Jouraha we learnt that some of the rebels had proceeded west, while others had gone on towards Bootwul, I determined to continue my march towards that place, being of opinion that the majority of them would try to escape by a road running west from Bootwul through the jungle under the first range of hills, being the same by which they entered Nepaul.

5. Here I was obliged to leave the detach. of H.M.'s 13th L.I., as by some misapprehension they had not brought cooked rations with them, and had to halt to give the men a meal, and I considered the force with me sufficiently strong for pursuit, and was anxious to lose no time.

6. When within two or three miles of Bootwul, about four p.m., the cav. flankers on our left reported the enemy as being in force in some topes in the open country on our left skirting the jungle.

7. I immediately desired Capt. Rennie to cover our advance in that direction with the 3rd Sikhs, thrown out in skirmishing order. I formed the rest of the column in line to the left; the four guns of the J. field batt. R.A., being on the left of the 7th Punj. inf., and the squad of Murray's Jat horse on each flank on the line, and in that order proceeded towards the enemy.

8. I left the baggage in rear in charge of two cos. 7th Punj. inf., and one trp. Jat horse. I also sent an express to Jouraha to bring up the detachment 13th Lt. inf., who, although they used every exertion, were not able to arrive till after the affair was over, much to the regret of Lieut. Col. King, his officers, and men.

9. After proceeding about half a mile we came on the enemy, posted in a good position, his right resting on an elevated ridge, and his line extending through topes strongly occupied by inf. to the jungle, on which their left rested, and in which they had large bodies of men. They had guns on both flanks, which were also covered by strong bodies of cav., of whom they had at least 1,200 in the field, with about 4,000 inf. visible. Indeed, prisoners have since informed us that the whole of the rebel army was on the ground, under the command of Bala Roa. The ground in their front was intersected by nullahs and deep irrigation channels, which offered great obstacles to the rapid progress of the guns.

10. The skirmishers of the 3rd Sikhs, ably directed by Capt. Rennie, soon drove the left of the enemy into the jungle, while the sharp fire of Maj. Henry's guns made them leave the topes. Their cav. on each flank made an attempt to turn our flanks, and get at the baggage in the rear, but were promptly stopped on our right by the fire of two comps. of 7th Punj. inf., under the com. of Lieut. Gordon, H.M. 61st regt., the second in com., whom Capt. Stafford had most judiciously ordered to change front to the right, and by a dashing charge made on them by Maj. Murray with a squad. Jat horse.

11. The rebel cav. on the left were similarly dispersed by a charge which I directed Lieut. Chalmers, second in command, Jat horse, to make on them with his squad, which he led most gallantly, killing two men with his own hand. The squad then wheeled to the right and took a gun on the ridge, and a general advance of the whole line and guns drove the enemy across the nullah into the jungle, several of them being cut down in the open plain by our cav.

12. On the edge of the jungle, the sepoys made a stand for some time, and their fire, I regret to say, caused several casualties among men and horses of our cav. who were then in advance, but the skirmishers of the 3rd Sikhs and 7th Punj. inf., and the discharge of some rounds of case from the guns which rapidly came up, inflicted heavy loss on them, and put them to flight.

13. It was now nearly six o'clock, and would soon be too dark to act in the jungle: the men and horses had been out since four a.m., and had marched from eighteen to twenty miles, mostly under a burning sun, besides being engaged for two hours. We had taken four guns on the field, besides two which were found the following day abandoned by the enemy, together with fifteen cart-loads of ammunition and a gilded howdah, supposed, from the royal fish of Oude carved on it, to have belonged to the Begum.

14. I accordingly pitched my camp, having previously sent patrols of cav. along the road leading west. The rebels retired through the jungle into the hills, where we saw their fires burning at a considerable elevation. Their loss must have been severe in killed and wounded, judging from the bodies found in the open plain, and the number stated by native reports to be in the jungle. Our casualties amounted to thirty-six.

15. It only remains for me to draw the attention of H.E. to the admirable manner in which officers and soldiers of all ranks, both British and native, behaved in their steadiness under fire, and their patient endurance of heat and fatigue, and to bring to the favourable notice of Lord Clyde the names of Maj. Henry, R.A., comdg. J. Field Batt.; Major Murray, comdg. Jat Horse to whom I am particularly indebted, not only for the able manner in which he commanded his corps on this occasion, but also for the zeal and readiness which he has invariably displayed since he has been under my command in reconnoitring and procuring intelligence; Capt. Rennie, comdg. 3rd Sikh Inf., a most admirable L.I. corps; and Capt. Stafford, comdg. 7th Punj. Inf.; Lieut. Cochrane, H.M. 34th regt., my staff officer, who is always most indefatigable in the discharge of his duty; Lieut. Fitzgerald, H.M.'s 13th L.I., who acted as my orderly officer.

16. I have also to express my sense of the exertions of all the medical officers of the corps in their attention to the wounded, particularly to Assist. surg. McKellar, Jat Horse, the senior present, and whose corps had by far the greatest number wounded. Maj. Murray also mentioned his being most useful and active in carrying orders for him during the action. I must also mention the name of Ensign Hennessy, H.M.'s 24th regt., Adj. of the Jat Horse, a most promising young officer, and who by remaining on picket for three days watching the enemies' outposts before I entered the Terai, was able to furnish me with reliable intelligence and a sketch of the country.

I am also much indebted to Mr. Pipe, deputy magistrate, who accompanied me into Nepaul, for the very useful information he has afforded me respecting this part of the country. Sheikh Khyyroodeen Ahmud, deputy magistrate, attached to this force, has also been most useful in procuring intelligence.

From Col. R. D. KELLY, comdg. F.F.

To the Qr. mr. Genl. of the Army, Army Hd. Qrs.
Camp, near Bootwul, March 28, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour to report to you for the information of H. E. the C. in C., that the force under Lieut. col. Simpson having joined me yesterday, I carried out my plan of attacking the rebels in the first range of hills whither they had retreated after their defeat on the 25th.

2. At daylight this morning, having established a chain of pickets of inf., cav., and art., skirting the jungle in order to cut off their retreat, I formed two columns, composed of the 3rd Sikhs and 7th Punj. inf. respectively, one hundred r. and f. of H.M.'s 13th reg. L.I. being attached to each, which ascended the hills at different points, and beat the jungle to the summit of the ridge, driving the mass of the rebels completely over the first range of hills, killing from three to four hundred of them, and taking a quantity of arms of all sorts, six elephants, and about twenty-five camels, and three hundred horses and ponies.

The columns were most ably led by Capt. Rennie and Stafford, comdg. respectively the 3rd Sikhs and 7th Punjab inf., and they deserve the greatest credit for the manner in which they so successfully carried out my instructions. All officers and men engaged were animated with the greatest ardour, and seemed entirely to disregard the toil of fighting their way up a steep hill side covered with dense jungle, under a burning sun, and opposed by a numerous if not a resolute foe, who had also the advantage of a superior position. I trust soon to be able to transmit for H.E.'s information a report of their proceedings from Capt. Stafford and Rennie. Our casualties amounted to, I regret to say, five killed and nine wounded; among the latter was Lieut. and adj. Baillie, 7th Punjab inf., a most excellent officer. He received a severe scalp wound on the back of his head from a musket-ball. The wound I am happy to say is not considered dangerous, and he is going on well. The mass of the rebels are I hear now between the first and second ranges of hills, where they will find it difficult to get food, which I hope will soon oblige them to surrender. The Nawab Mirza Nadir of Lucknow gave himself up to-day, with about fifty followers; and Mahomed Hussein has sent in to ask for terms. The health of the troops continues very good.

Operations in the Nepaul Hills.

Fort William, May 3, 1859, No. 609, of 1859.

H. E. the Gov. gen. in Council has much satisfaction in publishing the following letter from the Off. Adj. gen. of the Army, No. 132, of the 17th April, 1859, forwarding detailed reports of the attack made on the insurgents in the first range of the Nepal Hills, on the 28th ult., by the troops under Col. Kelly, c.b.

H. E. in Council while concurring with the C.-in-C. in the approbation expressed by his lordship, desires to record his thanks to Col. Kelly, and Capts. Renny and Stafford in command of columns, and the officers and troops employed on this occasion.

From the Offg. Adj. gen. of the Army, to the Sec. to the Gov. of India, Mily. Depart.

Sir,—In continuation of my letter of the 6th inst., No. 93, I have the honour, by direction of the C.-in-C., to transmit, for the information of H. E. the Gov. gen. in Council, detailed reports of the attack made on the insurgents in the first range of the Nepal Hills, on the 28th ult., by the troops under Col. R. D. Kelly, c.b., of H.M.'s 34th foot.

2. Lord Clyde desires to record his approval of Col. Kelly's arrangements, and to recommend to the favourable notice of the Gov. gen., Capts. Renny and Stafford in command of columns, and the officers and troops employed.

H. W. NORMAN,
Offg. Adj. gen. of the Army.

Hd. Qrs., Camp Bootana, April 17, 1859.

From Col. R. D. Kelly, comdg. F.F., to the Dep. Asst. Adj. gen., Oude div. Lucknow.

Camp near Bootwul, the 30th March, 1859.

Sir,—In my letter No. 186, of 28th inst., to the address of the qr. mr. gen. of the army, I gave a short statement of the successful attack made on the morning of the 28th inst. by a portion of the force under my command on the rebels posted in the first range of the Nepal Hills; and I have now the honour to forward for the information of Maj. gen. Sir Hope Grant, k.c.b., a more detailed account of the affair, which I request he will have the goodness to transmit for submission to his lordship the C.-in-C.

2. The force intended for the attack was divided into two columns, that on the right, commanded by Capt. Stafford, 7th Punj. inf., consisted of that regt., and a detach. of ninety-two men of H.M.'s 13th L.I., commanded by Lieut. Gilbert. The left, under Capt. Renny, of his own regt., the 3rd Sikh inf., and a detach. of ninety-two men of H.M.'s 13th L.I., under Capt. Peel.

3. The remainder of the force, consisting of the F. Batt. R. A., under Maj. Henry; the remainder of the wing H.M.'s 13th L.I., under Lieut. col. King; H.M.'s 34th regt., under Lieut. col. Simpson; the Jat Horse under Maj. Murray; Lahore Light Horse, under Capt. Jackson, H.M.'s 70th regt.; and Pathan horse, under Lieut. Vivian, were distributed in a chain of pickets skirting the jungle to cut off the escape of the enemy should they attempt it from the direction of the base of the hills; three companies of H.M.'s 34th regt., under Maj. Maxwell, were left to guard our camps, which were left standing.

4. At day-break the attacking columns left the camp, and pushing through the dense belt of jungle skirting the base of the hills, commenced their steep ascent at the points selected by me the previous evening; and skilfully led by Capts. Stafford and Renny, they ascended the spurs of the hills, by which they commanded the gorges on either side, and notwithstanding the opposition made by the rebels, greatly superior to them in numbers, with all the advantages of position in their favour, fairly drove them from ridge to ridge completely over the crest of the range, inflicting on them a loss of at least four hundred in killed alone, and a quantity of arms of all sorts thrown away by them; six elephants and about twenty-five camels and three hundred horses and ponies were also captured.

5. Our loss amounted to five men killed and one European officer, Lieut. and Adj. Baillie, 7th Punj. Inf. (who although severely wounded is I am glad doing well), one native officer and eight men wounded; total, five killed and ten wounded, which although to be regretted, will not I hope be considered out of proportion to the advantage gained.

6. I enclose for the information of the Maj.

gen. the reports of their operations made to me by Capts. Renny and Stafford, and I trust that he will support my recommendation that their valuable services on this occasion as well as on that of the affair of 25th inst., may receive some recognition. The conduct of all engaged, both officers and men, was admirable.

7. The difficulties of a steep ascent through a thick jungle, and under a burning sun, and exposed to a heavy fire, were overcome with cheerfulness and with a resolution which overcame all opposition, and left the enemy no resource but to fight, and I beg to recommend to the notice of Sir Hope Grant the names of the officers and men mentioned by Capts. Renny and Stafford, viz., Capt. Peel and Lieut. Gilbert, H.M.'s 13th Lt. inf.; Lieut. Roberts, H.M.'s 87th regt., 2nd in command 3rd Sikh Inf.; Lieut. Gordon, H.M.'s 61st regt., 2nd in command 7th Punj. Inf.; Lieut. and Adj. Baillie, of the same corps (severely wounded).

8. The enemy made some attempts to escape on our right and left flanks through the jungle, but a fire being opened on them by the pickets of H.M.'s 13th and 34th regts. stationed there, about twenty were killed, and I think few escaped.

In addition to the officers comdg. corps and detachments I have already mentioned, I beg to express my sense of the services rendered by Lieut. col. Gwilt and Maj. Maxwell, who commanded post on this occasion, and Lieut. Cochrane, the staff officer to the column. I have also to thank Capt. Haig, the commissariat officer with the column, for his indefatigable exertions to feed the troops, which has been attended with unusual difficulty, on account of our being at present in a foreign State.

R. D. KELLY, Col. comdg. F.F.

Camp F. F., March 29, 1859.

Sir,—For the information of Col. Kelly, c.b., comdg. the F.F., I have the honour to report that agreeably to instructions received from him on the previous evening, I marched yesterday morning at four o'clock A.M. with the troops noted in the margin, * for the purpose of attacking the enemy's position in the hills north of Camp.

On reaching the edge of the jungle a little to the westward I drew up the troops in the following order:—

One co. of the 3rd Sikh inf. extended as skirmishers in front with the sub-div. in the same order on either flank. The detach. of H. M.'s 13th Lt. inf., and another co. of 3rd Sikhs in support.

In this order we advanced through the heavy jungle and ascended the ridge of the steep hill to the north-west.

When half way up the hill I was enabled to reconnoitre the position of the enemy and determine my plan of attack.

Two columns, consisting of two companies of the 3rd Sikh inf., with a section of H. M.'s 13th Lt. inf. attached to each were detached to the right, with orders to proceed along the spur of the hill running out to the N.E. These detach. were commanded by Capt. Peel, of H. M.'s 13th Lt. inf., and Lieut. Roberts, second in command, 3rd Sikh inf.

I advanced with the remainder of the column along the ridge to the top of the hill, from whence two more parties were detached under Lieut. Harrison, Adj. 3rd Sikh inf., and Lieut. Sartorius, 72nd N.I., attached to H.M.'s 13th L.I.

The enemy were now completely surrounded, and the different columns commenced the descent simultaneously, and although we had to pass down the face of the hill through a most dense and difficult jungle, the enemy were driven from every position with great slaughter into the valley below. Owing to the nature of the ground, the few European officers were all employed in command of separate detachments. My thanks are due to all, but more particularly to Capt. Peel, of H.M.'s 13th L.I., and Lieut. Roberts, 3rd Sikh inf., on whose detachments fell the principal share of the fighting.

* H.M.'s 13th L.I.—3 officers, 4 sergts., 1 bugler, 87 privates. 3rd Sikh inf.—4 officers, 15 native officers, 44 havildars, 638 r. and f.

No troops could have behaved better than those entrusted to my command, both European and native.

The practice of the Enfield rifles of H.M.'s 13th L.I. was admirable; the duty was most arduous, over steep hills, precipices, and a heavy impenetrable jungle.

Our loss was small, owing, I believe, to the heights being occupied before commencing the action; that of the enemy could not have been under 350.

From Capt. J. F. Stafford, 7th Punj. inf., comdg. right column of attack, to Lieut. Cochrane, H.M.'s 34th regt, staff officer.

Camp F.F., the 28th March, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour to report for the information of Brigdr. Kelly, c.b., comdg. the frontier, that agreeably to his instructions, I marched from camp this morning at four o'clock with the troops marginally noted * for the purpose of attacking the rebels in the low range of the Nepal Hills.

2. I entered the belt of heavy jungle which here skirts the hill to a depth of about four miles at break of day, and having thrown out four companies of the 7th Punj. inf., two extended and two as supports, under Lieuts. Gordon and Baillie to cover the advance of the column, I pounced on through the dense jungle as rapidly as possible. After proceeding about four miles and reaching the foot of the hills, the skirmishers surprised and cut up the cav. piquet capturing their horses.

The rebels having then become aware of our approach, opened a heavy fire from the left front, from which, however, they were speedily dislodged; but finding that my skirmishers, though gradually forcing their way up the first range, were greatly outnumbered and exposed to an overwhelming fire, I determined upon occupying an elevated ridge on the right, from which, after a rapid but toilsome ascent, I was enabled materially to assist the skirmishers by a protecting fire from the rifles of the company of H.M.'s 13th L.I. under Lieut. Gilbert.

4. The rebel force fully numbered 5,000 fighting men well supplied with ammunition, as was apparent from the continued heavy fire which they kept up till driven over the highest range.

The bodies of the enemy killed, which lay directly in the path of the troops, amounted to about 30, but there can be no doubt but that in the dense jungle to the right and left of our advance, and into which the fire was chiefly directed many must have fallen.

5. No troops could have behaved better, and I am much indebted to Lieut. Gilbert, comdg. detach. H.M.'s 13th L.I., for his support. Also to Lieuts. Gordon and Baillie, 7th Punj. inf., for the gallant manner in which they led their respective detachments. I regret to say the latter officer was wounded in the head by a musket-ball.

No. 724 of 1859.

1. H.E. the Gov. Gen. in Council has the highest satisfaction in publishing the following report received from the Rt. Hon. the C. in C., of the military operations on the frontier of Nepal during the last three months, conducted under the immediate instructions of the C. in C.

2. H.E. in Council highly appreciates the good judgment of the officers, and the discipline of the troops, which marked the conduct of these troublesome and harassing operations.

Army Hd. Qrs., Simla, 3rd May, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour, by order of the C. in C., to bring to your notice for submission to H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen., the series of events, in a connected form, which have taken place in the Northern district of Oude in Goruckpore, and the Nepal frontier, since the rebels were driven across the border by H.E. at the end of last year.

2. It will be in the recollection of the Gov. gen. that, according to the orders of Govt., injunctions were given, forbidding the troops at that date to pursue their advantages beyond the limits of the British territory. The rebels had retreated en masse under their principal leaders, to the far side of the first range of hills, along which runs the frontier of Nepal. They took up a position near the Sitka Ghat, beyond the first pass, while Brigdr. Horsford remains encamped on the banks of the Raptée, within our own boundary. At the same time the enemy, who had been beaten in the neighbourhood of Toolseepore by Sir Hope Grant, had crossed the mountains opposite the latter place. They remained in the first valley in considerable numbers.

3. At the end of January, Maha Rajah Jung Bahadoor having expressed a wish that the British troops should operate in Nepal, Brigdr. Horsford was directed by the C. in C. to move forward and disperse the rebels, who were still encamped beyond the Sitka Ghat. On the 10th Feb. the Brigdr. gave execution to his orders, took all the guns possessed by the enemy (13) thirteen in number, and cleared the valley lying between the first two ranges of hills. He had been instructed not to pass the second range, to be most careful in his treatment of the Nepaulese authorities and people, to put an absolute stop to plunder, to forbid the slaughter of kine, even for the use of his British troops, and to cause the whole population to understand that his march in Nepal was merely for the purpose of securing tranquillity and safety for them. Brigdr. Horsford's measures were taken throughout in exact accordance with his instructions. Compensation was paid for damaged crops, no cattle were killed, the strictest discipline was preserved, and it is gratifying to know that the inhabitants of the valley testified their regret when the object of his mission having been accomplished, Brigdr. Horsford retraced his steps after a fortnight's occupation of the country.

4. Brigdr. Horsford's advance caused a great alarm among the followers of the Begum, the Nana, Bala Rao, Beni Madho, John Sing, Mahomed Hussein, and other rebel leaders, who still kept the remnant of the fugitive sepoys together. The numbers of these sepoys were largely stated by the Goorka authorities, much more so, indeed, than was guaranteed by fact. Nevertheless their numbers were considerable, and it is possible they may have amounted to 10,000 fighting men, exclusive of the very numerous followers in attendance on the Begum and the chiefs.

5. At this time Jung Bahadoor's plan to allow all the rebels who had retreated across the second range of hills to move eastward to the Gunduk was communicated to C in C. by Govt. Jung Bahadoor proposed to allow this body of people to get as far as the Gunduk, where they were to deliver up their arms to his troops. They were then—having been furnished with passes by the British resident at Nepal—to be led down in bodies of a thousand to Segowlie, for the purpose of being thence despatched to their homes, under the sanction of the British authorities. At the same time Jung Bahadoor manifested a wish, that a body of British troops should move eastward from Oudh, through the Goruckpore district to be ready to co-operate with his army, if the necessity should arise. There could be no doubt of the expediency of such a measure. It appeared extremely hazardous to the C in C to trust altogether to the likelihood of the sepoy disarmament, as proposed, and apparently hoped for by Jung Bahadoor. If the sepoy rabble had appeared at the passes of the Gunduk, without a sufficient body of British troops being ready in that neighbourhood, to bar their descent into our neighbouring provinces, the rich territory of Tirhoot would have been absolutely at their mercy. This being the case, no time was lost in organising, by order of the Government, a sufficient brigade of all the arms,* which was sent forward by corps, to take post at Ramnugger beyond the Gunduk, to the north of Segowlie. Col. Kelly, 34th foot, was placed in command of it, and was carefully instructed to meet the views of Jung Bahadoor, if his design of the sepoy disarmament should succeed; but, in any case, to be prepared to bar the progress of any rebels into the district of Tirhoot. At the same time H.M.'s 19th foot was held in readiness at Dinapore to be thrown across the Ganges, and advance to Tirhoot itself, if any contingency of the campaign should render the movement desirable. During this time all the posts were maintained along the border running to the north of Goruckpore and the Trans Gogra districts. The Moradabad lévy arrived in due course to reinforce the troops under Brigdr. Horsford. H.M.'s 53rd regt., and the Kemaoon battalion, were detained on the frontier, although destined for another quarter.

6. Reports reached H. E. at short intervals of the progress of the rebels through the country of Nepal, till at length, at the beginning of March, they appeared on the Gunduk. It soon became evident that Jung Bahadoor's expectations would not be fulfilled; and that so far from any disarmament of the sepoys taking place, either voluntarily, or in consequence of compulsion by the Goorka forces, there was reason to believe that sympathy for the rebels existed in the Goorka ranks. After a time, Jung Bahadoor again solicited the aid of British troops, and declared that the sepoys under the Begum and Nana, who had reached the Gunduk, were beyond his control. Thereupon Col. Kelly was immediately authorized by the C. in C., in anticipation of the orders of the Gov. Gen., which followed shortly afterwards, to pass the border in his front, and to break up the bodies of rebels which had moved eastward. He was also empowered by the C. in C. to make requisitions on all the officers comdg. troops along the Goruckpore frontier, that a combination among the various forces might be insured for the common object. Col. Kelly acted in accordance with his instructions and with great spirit. He advanced with rapidity, pressed the enemy home, and defeated him twice with considerable loss, taking (7) seven guns from him, and effectually turning the whole body to the westward.

7. The immediate result of these actions was the surrender of some chiefs of note, including Mahomed Hussein, and the Ranees of Toolseepore. The rebel sepoys fairly frightened, made rapidly to the westward, and in the second week of April authentic reports reached the C. in C., that although the Begum was believed to be still not far from Bootwall, she had but (150) one hundred and fifty followers with her. This was very important, as much alarm would seem to have previously prevailed in the Tirhoot district. At the request of the civil authorities in that quarter, H.M.'s 19th foot and some Sikh cav. had been pushed out in march to Tirhoot from Dinapore. This force did not encounter an enemy. In the course of his operations, Col. Kelly failed to meet with a friendly support from the Goorka generals, or other authorities. These latter persisted in their attempts to blacken the character of British troops in the Court of Nepal, ascribing all sorts of violence and outrage to them, and they actually asserted that villages, known to have been burnt and plundered by the rebels, had been destroyed by the British soldiery. This appears to have been met with great calmness, and H.E.

has much pleasure in assuring the Gov. gen. that Col. Kelly has been most explicit in his reports on the good discipline of the force under his command.

8. About the last week of march the rebels who had been driven westward began to show again in the mountains north of the Trans-Gogra district. They were starving, and in a most wretched condition. They had become satisfied that nothing was to be obtained in Nepal and the Terai but the most scanty subsistence, and a certainty of jungle fever. They seem to have quickly made up their minds, and after having been engaged with great success by Lieut. col. Gordon, of the 1st Sikh inf., who repulsed them with considerable loss, part of them succeeded in passing Maj. Ramsay's post under the hills, and made for the Raptée. The troops at Nawaungunge, Barabinkée, including the Queen's bays, a regt. of Hodson's horse, and a trp. of h. a., were pushed on immediately across the Gogra to Secroora, and Maj. gen. Sir Hope Grant, K.C.B., was directed to proceed himself, in person, to Fyzabad, to direct the operations which had now become necessary for the final destruction of the last remnant of the rebel army.

9. Sir Hope Grant moved rapidly out of Lucknow with another regt. of Hodson's horse, and (2) two H. A. guns. When passing through Durrabad, he made arrangements for the safeguard of the Gogra, and then proceeded to Gonda, by way of Fyzabad. He was instructed to infuse the utmost energy into the movements and actions of all the officers comdg. columns and posts in the district, and to desire that the rebels, who it was known were half-starved, worn-out, and utterly demoralised, should be attacked immediately, wherever they could be found, and under all circumstances. These orders have been acted up to, and several small affairs have taken place, all with signal success, with hardly any loss to ourselves, and giving the best practical proof of the abject state to which the rebels are reduced, and that the final and utter break up of the last remaining insurgents may be immediately looked for. The affairs to which allusion have been made are, one in which Maj. Cornick, of the 20th foot, commanded, two conducted by Maj. Vaughan, of the 5th Sikh inf., another by Major Murray, and a pursuit led by Col. Walker, of the 2nd dragoon guards, and a spirited skirmish under Capt. Rennie. Brigdr. Horsford having been in pursuit of the largest remaining body on the roads towards the Khyreeghur jungles, came up with them near Buneeapore on the 25th April, and inflicted heavy loss. It is represented that the unhappy enemy is only seeking to escape observation. Several parties have given themselves up, both infantry and cavalry, besides various leaders, of whom, perhaps, the most considerable is Jodh Sing, the Rajah of Churdab. The Nana lately wrote in to Brigdr. Rowcroft, attempting to excuse himself. In short, Lord Clyde would congratulate H. E. the Gov. Gen. on this irruption having taken place at a time when the arrangements made to meet such a contingency three months ago were still complete. Considering the temper of an influential portion of the Nepaulese, it is not impossible that the permanent residence of the rebel chiefs, and their sepoy followers in Nepal, might have caused considerable trouble hereafter with the government of that country, while at the same time even their presence on a frontier we were unwilling to cross, was a standing threat, and consequently not to be borne. It is, therefore, in Lord Clyde's opinion, a happy circumstance that these wretched people were urged to take the course they have pursued, and so to bring on the immediate crisis which cannot but prove the effectual termination of that great mutiny and rebellion which broke out exactly two years ago.

10. In conclusion, H. E. desires me to say, that as soon as it can be done with prudence, no time shall be lost in sending the troops into quarters.

Chief of the Staff.

THE EUROPEAN MUTINY.

A VERY unfair attempt has been made in certain quarters to extract from the disaffection of the Company's European troops a conclusive argument against the enlistment of any corps for permanent local service. It would have been equally logical to assert that a Channel fleet was dangerous to the safety of England because, in the last great war, a mutiny took place at Spithead, followed by a still more formidable outbreak at the Nore. In both those cases, however, it was discovered that the seamen had just causes of complaint, and their grievances were patiently investigated and partially removed, notwithstanding the illegality of the means they had adopted to obtain redress. That rude, uneducated men, conscious of their power, should lack forbearance and discretion while chafing under wrongs, real or imaginary, is not a matter for much surprise. The most judicious course to pursue under such circumstances is that which was adopted on occasion of the naval mutinies alluded to, and which appears to have been repeated by the present Commander in Chief in India. It is certainly not wise to have recourse to violent remedies where a milder treatment will prove equally, and probably more, efficacious. Nor is it either just or dignified to pass sentence before the entire evidence has been duly weighed, or to condemn a system as a whole because of a casual and temporary defect. No man in his senses has ever questioned the loyalty of British seamen, or entertained the slightest doubts of their skill, efficiency and patriotism, because they gave way to bad impulses at Spithead and the Nore. Why, then, are the Company's European troops to be taunted for their assumed laxity of discipline, notwithstanding their recent exploits in the field, on no other ground than that they have listened to unwise counsels at a moment of very natural irritation? It was natural that they should feel indignant at being transferred, without a word of comment, from one service to another, like a body of home-born slaves, or serfs attached to the soil, or, in their own words, as if they were "a lot of horses." It is childish to talk of their officers, and the Civil Service, being treated in the same manner. Surely some allowance must be made for difference of education and enlightenment. Besides, these men, however ill-guided in the manner of stating their claims, have really very plausible reasons to offer in extenuation of their violent conduct.

In the first place, they were aware that, if an infantry soldier passed into the artillery, he was re-enlisted, although it was still the same service. They also knew that, when a Queen's regiment was ordered home, the men were invited to volunteer for continued service in India, and that those who enlisted into the Company's regiments received a bounty of thirty rupees, or £3. What wonder, then, that they should consider themselves entitled to equal consideration on being transferred bodily from the company to the Crown? They believed, moreover, that whatever a statesman in the position of Lord Palmerston uttered in the House of Commons might be regarded as authoritative and official. When, therefore, they read in the papers that his lordship had said in his place that those who objected to serve her Majesty would be offered their discharge, they fell into the natural error of considering his simple assertion as a sort of charter of rights. It is said that all they asked for, in the first instance, was this offer of a discharge, or a fresh enlistment, with a £2 bounty. Their demand, instead of being dealt with in a spirit of mingled firmness and conciliation, was coldly and unsympathisingly referred to the law officers, who, of course, pronounced it to be legally untenable. They could do no otherwise; but it is pitiable that they should ever have been consulted on such a point. A small donation and a flattering general order would have satisfied the amour propre of the men, and could never have been appealed to as a precedent until a new empire had been won for the British Crown by a Company of Merchant Adventurers. The argument that a local force is always liable to mutiny, would apply to the native army as well as to a European contingent, and Colonel Tulloch, in his evidence before the Royal Commissioners, pointedly alludes to the mutiny of the Madras officers in 1808-9 as a case in corroboration of this theory. We cannot imagine, however, that any sensible and dispassionate man is seriously of opinion that a local European corps, properly officered, cannot be maintained in as high a state of discipline and efficiency as a regiment of the line in the same climate. It is possible, indeed, that they may not be so smart in appearance, but history vouches for their courage, endurance, and fine soldierly conduct on active service.

REORGANISATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

In order to avoid tedious repetition we shall content ourselves with selecting the most striking points from the evidence of the remaining witnesses who appeared before the Committee.

Major general Sir Thomas Harte Franks, K.C.B., was opposed to the existence of a local European force; European regiments apt to deteriorate after a long residence in that enervating climate; there are, of course, rare exceptions, such as H.M.'s 10th and 40th foot, and the 16th lancers; five years' service in India quite long enough for the acquisition of local knowledge; officers of the Company's service superior to the Queen's as staff officers, because until very recently the latter had no encouragement to qualify themselves; reliefs ought to be sent out round the Cape of Good Hope, though in a case of emergency troops might be despatched through Egypt; twelve to thirteen years quite long enough for any regiment to remain in India, and of this period three years should be passed in the hills; the whole of the European force, troops of the line, and native troops ought to be on one system, like the Ceylon Rifles, for instance; officers should be allowed to exchange throughout the whole imperial army; if there must be a local European force, it should be recruited from home, and not kept up by volunteers from regiments leaving India; in answer to a very insidious question from the Duke of Cambridge, General Franks stated that, although he spoke the language very imperfectly, he never found any trouble in commanding native troops, but he omitted to add that the officers who really commanded those troops did understand the language, otherwise he himself would have found considerable difficulty in managing them.

Charles Renny, Esq., C.B., member of the medical board in Bengal, expressed himself in favour of a local European force, especially on sanitary grounds, and he also preferred the Cape route to that by way of Egypt, but his evidence generally was somewhat vague and uncertain.

James Ramsd Martin, Esq., F.R.S., proved from official returns that no advantage in the way of acclimation is derived from length of residence; the mortality among ensigns is 23 per 1,000, among lieutenants of 3 years' longer residence, 27, among captains of 12 years' longer residence, 34; in the civil service the mortality in the first year is 19.5 per 1,000, in the second, 23.5, in the third, 20, in the fourth, 22; in the plains the whole range of service is to the British soldier "one unbroken course of physical degradation;" deaths in newly-arrived regiments in India are numerous, but owing to causes other than climate, and might, by proper arrangement, be prevented; the European soldier must, at any cost, be frequently sent to the hills to invigorate his constitution; no barracks in the world can otherwise save his health; the diseases that tell upon him are, every one of them, diseases of the plains; some cases can never be cured except by return to Europe; good huts capable of accommodating ten or twelve men preferable to costly brick barracks; the air of the hill stations is "preservative against fevers," but not effective for restoration from chronic or structural diseases contracted on the plains; the present hill stations are probably too high; in Jamaica, 2,500 feet has been found a quite sufficient elevation; Europeans should never serve longer than one year at a time in the plains; the relief will not be difficult to effect, when railroads are completed; the whole mass of troops should be brought down from the hills during the cold season to practise and manœuvre in the plains; as a rule the barracks and hospitals throughout India are bad; all barracks in tropical climates should be built upon arches, two stories high, and the roof double; the head-dress should be white, made of a slow-conducting material, and admitting of a free current of air around the man's head—the weight is of less importance; the young soldier should have beer in preference to his spirit ration—a dram after dinner will do no harm; a quart of ale a day could not hurt a soldier, particularly if on work; convalescent hospitals a great desideratum; troops should be enlisted for permanent service in India, and when invalided be sent into the police force or encouraged to settle in the hills; a certain number of light infantry battalions of the line very advantageous as models; without competition, or rivalry, one and the same army scattered over Hindostan would be very likely to become listless and lax in discipline; competition more important than unity; one-half of the European force should be local, located chiefly on mountain ranges, and those in the plains relieved every year.

Colonel Sir Alex. Murray Tulloch, K.C.B., could not understand the advantage of having a local force; there was nothing it could do that troops of the line could not do as well, or even better; long residence in India is certain to deteriorate health; it is, therefore, advisable to send out regiments every ten years; if a European war broke out, second battalions could be raised at home and sent out to replace the veteran troops, who would be wanted at home; a local service must produce local interests, and be subject to local influence; "some question of pay, allowances, or coveted advantages granted to one branch of the service, but denied to another, may with such a force some day create another mutiny; on such questions both officers and men of the Indian army have before now been nearly, if not altogether, in that state; this danger becomes, of course, the greater the larger the army, as it must necessarily give confidence to the disaffected to know that they may make their own terms, from the utter impossibility of sending any adequate force against them;" great advantages likely to arise from allowing officers a facility of interchange, from the line to the native army, and vice versa; two years' service in India should count as three (in the West Indies also?); no objection to a small local European force as at present.

General Sir Willoughby Cotton, G.C.B., was of opinion that there should be only one Royal army, though the Company's Europeans have always behaved well, both in the field and in quarters; reliefs should decidedly be sent out round the Cape, and not by the Red Sea; the Government would do well to convert the seventy-fours lying in Hamoaze and Portsmouth Harbours into screw transports, or else build seven or eight steam transports like the Himalaya; there were great difficulties in the way of consolidating the services; if the Indian officers object to exchanging into the line, they must be supposed to be the best judges of what is to their real advantage.

Sir George Clark, K.C.B., was then further examined, and expressed his belief in the desirableness of having a local native army under the Governor-General, and a European force, furnished from the line, under the authority of the Horse Guards; the Act of Parliament guarantees to officers now in the Indian army their promotion on the old system, but prospective arrangements may fairly be introduced; in the event of a serious emergency, the Home Government would contrive to draw away even a local European force, if it was essential to the defence of this country; however, the Governor-General ought to have the power of a veto; if it be good for civilians and officers to come home frequently and get "Europeanized," it must be equally so for non-commissioned officers and privates, and therefore there can be no advantage in engaging officers or men for permanent and exclusive service in India; the scientific corps, in which there is no purchase system, might be amalgamated; engineer officers would acquire the native language if encouraged to do so; one advantage of reliefs would be in doing away with the idea of putting troops upon the mountains, and leaving the plains comparatively unguarded; with good barracks, the men will enjoy far better health in East India than in the West Indies; troops going out ought to be landed in the west and gradually moved down country, finally embarking in Bengal on their return to Europe; officers for the native army should all pass through Addiscombe, and hereafter have the power to exchange into the line; South Africa is healthy, though hot, and would make a good depot for the Indian service, that is, regiments might be stationed there two or three years to become acclimatised.

Colonel George Campbell, commanding H.M.'s 52nd Regiment, would prefer one united Royal army; if there must be a local force, it should not exceed one-fourth of the whole; the discipline of local European corps very slack, owing to the officers not understanding the management of their men; objects to the Cape as a depot, except for invalids; twelve years' service in India quite long enough, as men on foreign service begin then to long for home, though they certainly become reconciled to India after two or three years' service; not desirable for the local corps that there should be permission to exchange, because "the exchanges from the Queen's service would be principally made by men in embarrassed circumstances, and who were obliged to remain in the country on that account," and those are not "desirable individuals to have in a regiment."

Major-general Thos. Simson Pratt, C.B., would have only one Royal army; the native army should form an integral portion of this army; there should be only one C. in C. for all India, with lieutenant generals commanding under him in the different presidencies; there should be but one native army; interchanges between the native and European corps could only be effected in the subaltern ranks; the natives should be well armed and thoroughly drilled; after the restoration of tranquillity, 60,000 Europeans massed at different fortified points will suffice for all India with, perhaps, 180,000 natives, exclusive of police regularly organised as horse and foot, but not furnished with fire-arms; would not perpetuate the funds; the Government might take the capital and the liabilities of the different funds, and so get over that difficulty; for the future no officer should be compelled to subscribe to any fund; practically, there need be no difference of expense between a local European force and troops of the line, taking reliefs and every other consideration into account.

Brevet major Balcarres Dalrymple Wardlaw Ramsay complained strongly of the drunken habits of invalids from the Company's Europeans arriving in Calcutta on their way home; they were so bad that H.M.'s invalids were sent to Chinsurah to avoid contamination; undoubtedly there was an unpleasant feeling of jealousy between officers of the two services; would decidedly have but one Royal army.

CORRESPONDENCE.

BREACH OF FAITH.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—According to the subjoined paragraph, which I extract from a respectable old Indian journal, the Calcutta Mirror of 1810, faith has not been kept with the retired veterans of the late India Company's army, inasmuch as they have been made hitherto, volentes volentes, to pay the vexatious income tax, from which curtailment, as well as from every other, their scant subsistence means were, at the time of settlement, declared to be for ever exempt.

As I see the Observer mentions that it is expected the Chancellor of the Exchequer will, despite the decided tone in which the nation has already expressed itself against this iniquitous mode of raising the ways and means, propose a continuance of the income tax, I hope the Right Hon. gentleman, who, no doubt, is a subscriber to your liberal, independent, and enlightened journal, will bear in mind this crying injustice, contrary to compact, done to the Indian officers, and, as the only means by which amends for the same can now be made to them, not include them (should he contemplate further experimentalizing on the endurance of the country by proposing, as is expected, a continuance of the existing, and I was happy to think, expiring income tax), among the classes to be burdened with an impost, to which no free country can, or ought ever to be reconciled. Here is the paragraph alluded to:—

"In 1796, when the retiring pensions of the officers of the East India Company's army were fixed, it was proposed by one of the members of the committee that a declaration guaranteeing the subsistence stipends against future curtailment from liability to income, or other national taxation, should be recorded on the minutes; but the presiding East India Director, Mr. William Devoyne, said such declaration was unnecessary, the pensions being granted as subsistence money, and fixed on the lowest scale compatible with that object, which would be defeated were the rates of pension to be ever reduced."

ADVICE TO OFFICERS IN INDIA.

By JOHN MCCOSH, M.D., late of the Bengal Medical Staff.

"To young officers going out to India, Dr. McCosh tenders the most salutary advice."—Leader.

"He is well qualified to be a mentor to the uninitiated."—United Service Magazine.

"He is always a firm, friendly, and practical adviser."—Edinburgh Courant.

"On all matters handled in it, the young officer may gain some valuable hints."—Athenaeum.

"The work is a little encyclopedia of information on miscellaneous subjects."—Edinburgh Medical Journal.

London: W. H. ALLEN and Co., 7, Leadenhall-street.

Most Distressing Case.

AN EARNEST APPEAL is made to the Benevolent, and especially to East Indian Civil and Military Officers, on behalf of the only Son of the late Col. STEPHEN STONE GUMMER, of the Madras Army (late Brigadier commanding the Field Forces at Jaulnah), who, having lost his patrimony by the failure of a friend to whom he had lent it, is now left penniless, with a Wife (the daughter of a deceased Clergyman) and Ten little Children, the eldest only fifteen, wholly dependent on him.

It is hoped that this appeal to the sympathy of his father's brother officers may be the means of raising a moderate fund, sufficient to purchase a small working Junior Partnership in some Legal Firm for this unfortunate gentleman, and in the meantime to relieve the urgent pressing necessities of himself and his distressed family.

Lord John Manners, M.P., St. Katherine's Lodge, Regent's-park, and Alexander Baillie Cochran, Esq., M.P., 26, Wiltshire-crescent, London, will (if required) satisfy any inquirer that this is indeed a case well deserving the commiseration and sympathy of the charitable.

Messrs. Coutts and Co., Bankers, No. 59, Strand, London, have kindly consented to open a Subscription List for this unfortunate family. Donations will also be thankfully received and acknowledged by Mr. Stephen Henry Gummer, 27, Turvin-road, Chester.

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established DENTISTS, Patentees of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans.

In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established 1804; and at 121, Duke-street, Liverpool.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS

PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer,

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT AND PILLS.

—Scrofula, Skin Diseases.—In no disease is more early or constant vigilance required than in the treatment of scrofula. The nurse or parent must meet the first approach of the foe, or his defeat will be difficult. Enlarged glands about the neck, flying pains through the limbs, and irritable skin, warn us of the probable presence of this hereditary malady, and not a moment should be lost in the employment of Holloway's anti-scorbutic remedies, to throw out at once from the blood the morbid cause of all future disfigurements, leaving the system pure and vigorous, so thoroughly do they banish the poison, and remove from every organ, whether deep or superficial, its baneful and corroding influence.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT

from the Second Edition (page 185) of the Translation of the Pharmacopœia of the Royal College of Physicians of London, by Dr. G. F. Collier, published by Longman and Co.:—

"It is no small defect in this compilation (speaking of the Pharmacopœia) that we have no purgative mass but what contains aloes; yet we know that hæmorrhoidal persons cannot bear aloes, except it be in the form of COCKLE'S PILLS, which chiefly consist of aloes, scammony, and colocynth, which, I think, are formed in a sort of compound extract, the acidity of which is obviated, I suspect, by an alkaline process, and by a fourth ingredient (unknown to me) of an aromatic tonic nature. I think no better and no worse of it for its being a patent medicine. I look at it as an article of commerce and domestic convenience, and do not hesitate to say it is the best made pill in the kingdom; a muscular purge, a mucous purge, and a hydrogogue purge combined, and their effects properly controlled by a dirigent and corrigent. That it does not commonly produce hæmorrhoids, like most aloetic pills, I attribute to its being thoroughly soluble, so that no undissolved particles adhere to the mucous membrane."

From the Home News, March 3, 1859.

"Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. have just brought out the first number of a monthly periodical, called THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND SOCIAL SCIENCE. We confess that until we read this first number we had no very clear impression that we were in any need of any addition to our already heavily-laden monthly literature; but a careful examination of the contents of the work has satisfied us that its projectors are justified in the undertaking. If they cannot be said, in the slang of the book-market, to have supplied a want, there is little doubt that they will create an audience. The best brief notion we can give of the publication is to say that it promises to become to English readers what the Revue des deux Mondes is to French, with an indefinitely wider latitude of topics and freedom of opinion. The critical element predominates, but it admits of the essay in its pure form, and is sufficiently elastic in both departments to embrace every variety of subject of current or permanent interest. In politics it ranges with the progressive section of the Conservative party, which would preserve the constitution, by adapting it from time to time to the necessities of successive epochs. The soundness of its judgment on the question of Parliamentary Reform is displayed in the ablest and most thoroughly constitutional article that has yet appeared in any of our periodicals on the subject; an article which acquires additional value from the fact that it foreshadowed the whole scheme of the Government two days before the Reform Bill was brought forward. In social laws and morals, the object of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW will be to note the progress, and collect the results, of all movements tending towards the advancement or elucidation of those vague philosophical investigations which are clustered under the general head of social science. Good earnest is given of the resources at the command of the writers, and of the practical manner in which they are prepared to deal with them, in an excellent article on the 'Homeless Poor.' There are also capital papers upon 'Russia' and 'Indian Finance;' and some admirable literary articles. This last department is pervaded by a spirit of independence, and a high scholarly tone which, we trust, 'custom' may not impair. Let us have at least one English periodical, written with integrity and good taste, to which we may confidently look for fearless and honest opinions. The UNIVERSAL REVIEW promises to realise these expectations, and we heartily wish it the success it deserves."

From the Illustrated London News, April 9, 1859.

"The second number of this new candidate for public favour is, unquestionably, an improvement on the first. This is in itself a merit to be appreciated, as it augurs that the organisation on which the future of the review depends has within it the limits of that completeness which can alone ensure stability. We have only space to direct attention to the articles on 'Philosophy as an Element of Culture,' on 'Realistic Novelists,' and 'Christianity in India,' but we venture to say that the whole number is well worthy of thoughtful consideration. In this addition to our periodical literature there is every mark of careful conduct, and there is every reason in the present number for a prediction that it is destined not merely to an existence, but to a useful and enduring life."

From the Press, May 14, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW contains seven articles, which, some for one reason, some for another, merit the attention of the public. The article on Mr. Robertson derives virtue from the excellence of its subject, but is nicely written as well. 'Women—neither Nice nor Wise,' is a protest against the smoking-clubbed, shooting-galleried, red-trousered style of young lady, of whom it is very truly said that all 'their efforts for the emancipation of women are in reality intended for the enslavement of men.' 'The Resources of India, and its Colonization,' has only one fault—it is greatly too short; and we confess if it had been extended over the space which 'The Philosophy of Fabulous Ages' now occupies, we should not have regretted the exchange. 'Michelet on Love' is a review of which it is difficult to determine the merit without having read with great attention the book of which it treats. The writer seems so entirely to agree with his author as to have abandoned any idea of criticising him in the literal sense of the word, so he gives us instead a very compact and clever abstract of his theory, expressed with great felicity, and enlivened by occasional touches of real humour. The writer of 'French Dramatists and English Adapters' took a good grasp of his subject, but laid it down again before he had squeezed it dry. His article contains a good deal, but might have contained more. For instance, he takes up some half-dozen hypotheses to account for the decline of the drama turns them over, and leaves them, saying it is not his business to settle which is true. But we think this is just what his business was. The article is written in so agreeable a style, and evinces so much latent ability, that we regret more was not made of it. 'The Last of the Moguls,' though a little florid in diction, is well and strikingly executed. The article called 'How shall we vote?' after a summary of the policy of Lord Derby's Administration, proceeds to the delivery of a strong philippic against the Opposition leaders, and especially Lord John Russell. We observe this article has been reprinted in a separate form, and we trust may have contributed to blow away some of those delusions which the public mind has been carefully fed by the partisans of the 'Bedfords.' With the writer's remarks on Lord Palmerston we do not so fully agree. His lordship has performed great services, and what he may have done in a moment of irritation should not be too harshly criticised. The customary 'Session' and 'Books upon our Table,' conclude a very good number."

From the Globe, June 3, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW is, as usual, distinguished by discussing subjects of deeper and more permanent interest than are commonly entered on in monthly publications. The first article, on a book entitled 'Man and his Dwelling Place,' affords the writer an opportunity of professing his acceptance of the Idealistic theory of Bishop Berkeley, which, though supported by reasoning that it is admitted cannot be refuted, has hitherto made so little progress with mankind in general, chiefly on account of the misapprehension that has prevailed, or, perhaps, we may say, which does prevail, respecting it—a misapprehension that, doubtless, the writer is correct in ascribing to people picking up their notions of it at second hand, instead of resorting to the exposition of Berkeley himself. The article entitled 'A Reviewer's Parcel' is a lament over the degeneracy of the present age, especially made manifest by the vast number of new books published every month. Every one has a vague desire to go behind the scenes of a theatre, and by admitting, or pretending to admit the public behind the scenes of reviewing, the writer of the article in question has produced a taking and readable paper, with which those who know little or nothing about the subject of which it treats will probably be best pleased. 'The Story of Microscopical Discovery' is an interesting article in which the progress of microscopical science is traced from its commencement to now. 'The Resources of India and its Colonization,' an article the first part of which appeared last month, is continued in the present number by a writer who has evidently devoted to the subject considerable care, pains, and research. An article on the picture exhibitions, a political article entitled 'The French in Italy,' 'Austria and the Slavonians,' with other papers, fill up the number."

BENGAL.

PORTUGAL AND STEAM IN THE INDIAN OCEAN.

The Portuguese settlements on the East coast of Africa since the days of Alphonso Albuquerque have been seldom heard of except as the centre of a slave trade as iniquitous as it was profitable. They stretch for 1,400 miles from Delagoa Bay south to Cape Delgado, comprising several stations, of which Mozambique is the capital. In front of this long line of coast is the island of Madagascar, behind it part of the great Central African plateau with its mighty lakes and untold wealth, drained by the river Zambezi, which Livingstone contemplates as the future highway of commerce and civilisation for regenerated Africa. That line of coast has yet its part to play in the onward progress of material improvement which the British have introduced and are carrying out in the Indian Ocean, and which will yet make it to Asia and Australia what the Mediterranean is to Europe and Egypt. Since the days when Vasco de Gama first cast his longing eye on Mozambique, when Albuquerque made it a second Goa and enriched his country with slaves, ivory, and gold dust, it has fallen into obscurity. The curse of the race that ruled and the traffic that fattened it has been upon all enterprise. Though at the Congress of Vienna Portugal, Spain, and France engaged with Great Britain to discourage the slave trade, and though Great Britain paid Portugal £300,000 for its gradual discontinuance in all her colonies south as well as north of the Equator, she has never ceased to carry on the traffic to a modified extent. Our exertions have almost destroyed it, but still the merchants of Brazil and Arabia receive their small but regularly supplied cargoes of Monjores, each of whom has cost two dollars' worth of cloth or Birmingham goods.

But at last one gleam of light, one faint attempt at energy, has been manifested by the governor of this coast. Its settlements are to be connected with the civilised world and with the great net-work of steam communication that is fast covering the waters of the Indian Ocean. It may seem a trifling fact that the Chevalier du Prat, "the Commissioner of his Majesty the King of Portugal at the Cape of Good Hope," has been authorised to receive tenders for the conveyance of the mails from Natal to Delagoa Bay, thence to Quilimaine, and thence to Mozambique. But it is the beginning of a new state of things, of a new publicity, and of a new commerce, which will lead the East Coast Colonies to be influenced by the new ideas of the nineteenth century, and which, as it brings to their shores and takes from their markets the articles of a legitimate commerce, will elevate them above the necessity, and make them despise the practice, of an illicit trade in human beings. As on the Dutch in the Archipelago, so we trust on the Portuguese in Africa the breath of the new life of justice and mercy and Christian principle has been breathed, and will result in increased wealth and diminished tendency to crime. Natal once connected with Mozambique, that stagnant slave-mart will stretch out its arms to Madagascar, Bourbon, and the Mauritius, and thus be placed at once en rapport with the East and Australia by means of the P. and O. Company's steamers, and with the mother country and England by means of those from the Cape. When Livingstone's plans have borne their fruit the United States will drive a larger trade with the Mozambique coast than they dream of now, and England will enter upon a commerce that from its accursed character she has hitherto discouraged.

In the course of the last twenty years, civilisation, beginning at the Cape, has crept up the Eastern coast of Africa. From Cape Town to Mossel Bay, from Mossel Bay to Port Elizabeth, from Port Elizabeth to Graham's Town and its Port—the Kowie, and from the Kowie to Natal, silently but speedily have flourishing colonies of Anglo-Saxons been planted. And now Livingstone pictures the future of the coast on either side of the Zambezi; and even farther North, where barbarism still reigns supreme, our treaties with the Somalies, and the discoveries of Captains Burton and Speke, lead us to feel that time is but wanted to develop agencies already at work. The Cape is about to establish a steam communication with the Mauritius, and thus will have double intercourse with England. With the Mozambique line to the north and that to the south of Madagascar, with Bourbon under European influence and the Mauritius ours, with the growth of a vast trade around it and three nations knocking at its door, Madagascar, like Japan, must soon yield to Western influences, and unbosom her wealth to Europe.

Since the first steamer sailed from Calcutta to Suez the whole Indian Ocean has been covered by lines of communication, which are again sending forth branches between smaller ports, and repeat on even a larger scale as to distance the busy life of the waters of the Mediterranean. We have the first main line uniting Calcutta with Madras, Ceylon, Bombay, Arabia, and Egypt. From Bombay this trunk sends a shoot forth to Singapore, China, and thence to Japan and Manila, and from Calcutta there is the line to Penang and the same places. We have also the local lines from Calcutta to the Arracan and Madras coasts; from Singapore the Dutch steamer to Batavia, and from Bombay a local line to Kurrachee. We have the second great route between Suez, the Mauritius, and Australia, sending off its shoots to New Zealand and Tasmania. The two foci of this incomplete ellipse of commerce are Singapore and Port Louis, and the extreme north and south points, Australia and Suez. These various main and local lines draw off the more precious and perishable part of the produce of Asia and our Eastern colonies, which can afford to pay a comparatively heavy freight, while the great bulk of it is conveyed by the slower agency of sailing vessels round the Cape. By correspondence and speedy travelling, and soon, we trust, by a perfect telegraphic communication, they unite to England, the grand centre of the life and power of the world, the sons whom she has sent forth even to the antipodes to propagate her civilisation, and diffuse her Christianity.

Satisfactory as all this is, it is but the beginning of greater things. Between our sea frontiers, as it were, of Japan, the Archipelago, and Australia on the one side, and British Columbia on the other, are the countless isles of the Pacific, of some of which we have been asked to accept the sovereignty. Its waters will ere long be ploughed by our steamers, as they bear the tea of China, the spices of the Islands and the wool of Australia to the marts of Columbia and Canada. England is only in the infancy of her career in the East.—Friend of India.

THE OPENING OF THE BAREE DOAB CANAL IN THE PUNJAB.

The Calcutta Gazette of the 30th of May contained a Notification by the Governor general in the Public Works Department, on the opening of the Baree Doab Canal in the Punjab, and a well-merited eulogium on the officers through whose indefatigable exertions during the last ten years the more important parts of that great work have been brought to successful completion. It is indeed a work the importance of which, whether for commercial and military purposes, or for elevating the condition of the people through whose lands it flows, can scarcely be over-estimated. The Baree Doab signifies the tract of country between the Beas and Ravee rivers, which rise within a few miles of each other in the Himalaya, and running nearly south, unite below

Mooltan, the one having first mingled its water with the great Sutlej, and the other with the Chenab. In its upper part, while under the influence of the mountains, this Doab is a fertile district, and some partial irrigation having been established from the waters of the Ravee during the Sikh dynasty, there is good cultivation as far as Lahore; but below that city the face of the country rapidly changes, and, except on the immediate banks of the rivers which enclose it, the remainder of the Doab is a dreary waste, scattered at wide intervals with miserable villages, whose denizens with difficulty raise a scanty subsistence from the parched and barren soil. A less happy country in its physical circumstances, short of an actual desert, can nowhere be found, while the want of water throughout it forms at present a serious difficulty to constructing the railway between Lahore and Mooltan. But the new canal will change all this.

It commences at the point where the Ravee leaves the hills, at which part of its course it has well defined banks and a hard stony bottom. Here a dam is thrown across the river, and the waters are diverted into the canal, which, in fact, is a large artificial river, deep and swift, and which, running through the centre and highest part of the Doab, conveys the water, which hitherto has flowed useless to the sea, into the most convenient situation for utilising it. In the neighbourhood of Lahore the canal divides into two branches—one running down the western part of the Doab to fall into the Chenab at Mooltan, the other discharging its surplus waters into the Sutlej. At intervals of a mile or so branch canals are made from the main channel to the adjacent parts of the country, and from these again innumerable smaller branches distribute the water among the different villages, the whole forming a complete network of irrigating channels. In the upper part of the Doab the effect of the canal will be greatly to enhance the productiveness of the country, and to prevent the occurrence of those famines which, though they seldom occur, are so disastrous and horrible when they do come. But below Lahore the canal will create cultivated land where none now exists; with an Indian sun, only water is wanted to bring forth abundant crops from almost any soil, and this being now supplied, this sterile tract will soon be converted into a fertile one, smiling with fruitful crops, while the inhabitants, who are now chiefly lawless cattle-lifters, will speedily settle down into peaceful and contented cultivators. Nor must the enormous advantages of the navigation be forgotten. It will be readily understood that an irrigation canal is almost exactly the converse of a river, the latter increasing in volume from its source to its mouth, as it is fed by the other streams which run into it, while the former is continually diminished by the volume of the branches it sends off. In fact, an irrigation canal, constructed entirely as such, would have no definite end; the whole of its water would be taken up on the way. But here, as in the Ganges Canal, a sufficient quantity of water is retained to fill a good sized channel at its termination, which communicates with the river at Mooltan by double locks, so that from that city to the head of the canal there will be a navigation perfectly safe, of unvarying depth, and in every way superior to that of the adjacent rivers. We trust in a few years to see its water crowded with steamboats and barges conveying the produce of the country from the Himalaya to the sea.

The Baree Doab Canal, though considerably smaller than the Ganges Canal, of which it is in many respects the copy, is larger than any other similar undertaking in the world. The principal works are at the head, where the communication between the bed of the river and the central tract through which the canal runs is made by a cutting of great dimensions through the hilly ground that borders the canal. The other principal works are the bridges and the artificial waterfalls, down which the waters of the canal are made to fall, where the shape of the country necessitates such a contrivance, with the attached lock-channels and locks for passing vessels up and down. The works were begun in 1848, and, very much to the credit of the Indian Government, have been continued uninterruptedly through peace and war.

We gather from the Gazette that the charge of the upper works was under the lamented Lieut. Home, one of the heroes of the Cashmere gate. The next division was under Captain Gulliver, who, during the mutiny, raised a corps of pioneers from among the workmen of the canal, which under him did good service at Delhi and Lucknow. The two branches below Lahore have been chiefly under Mr. A. G. Crommelin and Major Innes, the latter one of our Lucknow heroes, and who has also won the Victoria Cross for distinguished gallantry while with General Franks' column in Oude. The superintendent of the canal has been, throughout, Captain Crofton; and the director of the works, upon whose designs they have been constructed, is Captain Dyas, whose protracted exertions during ten years have, we grieve to learn, seriously injured his health. He is known and respected in the profession as possessing talent and administrative ability of a very high order, and as one of the most distinguished of the distinguished school which has already produced a Cautley and a Baird Smith.

THE BIGGA BEGUM.—Though the story of the ex-Nawab of Furruckabad is grown old and tiresome, still it is believed that anything throwing light on the subject will not fail to interest those who are anxious to learn more about this fallen family. The ex-Nawab, it is well known, is gone to his exile, having left Bigga Begum, his wife, and a few children, and his old mother, Sooltan Alea. Bilkees Zumanee, commonly called Bigga Begum, was a widow of the late Nawab Tujum-mool Hossein Khan, and was afterwards married to the present ex-Nawab, who is now under sentence of banishment. She is a legitimate daughter of the late Nawab Zuhoor Ali Khan, of whose family Koodria Begum and Nujeeboonnissa Begum, the mother and grandmother of the present Begum, are still alive, the former being entirely out of her senses and the latter an old infirm lady. Bigga Begum is said to possess a peculiar quality not common to other Begums of the family, a fact of general notoriety, and therefore requires no explanation. The Begum survived her former husband, and has seen her present one banished. Her husbands have suffered greatly from her hands in one way or another; her paramours are comparatively in a far better position. The charges brought against her were just and right, for there is no doubt that she within the walls of her palace took an active part in instigating rebellion, although the prosecutor failed to produce creditable and satisfactory proof in support of the charges preferred against her. During the time of her husband's government she opened communications with officers of the rebel regiments. She went to the Futtehgurh fort to offer thanks to the tomb of a saint for the victory her husband had gained over the British subjects. She sent her people to invite the 41st N.I. and the 10th Oude locals on their way to Delhi. She heartily welcomed their arrival in the city, and celebrated it by a grand party and feast. Notwithstanding her crime being of so dark a dye, she was pronounced "not guilty," and, therefore, she was acquitted and released. Sooltan Alea, her mother-in-law, in absence of strong proof against her, will not be prosecuted. Her guilt is not of course of so deep a colour as that of her daughter-in-law. Though their crimes have not been considered sufficient to deprive them of the benefits of the royal amnesty, yet they will not be restored to the possession of their property. They are more happy to remain at the station to enjoy the remaining part of their lives than to share the misery of their relatives. In those days when all was quiet and calm she was not controlled by her husband, and her wishes were not subdued by him, now she is left to choose what she thinks proper.—Delhi Gazette.

STAMP PAPER.—Government, we are told, realised not less than twenty thousand rupees by the sale of stamp paper on the occasion of the last salt sale that took place in the Board of Revenue at Calcutta. The Englishman says:—"The demand for stamp paper was so great that papers of the value of Rs. 2 each could neither be had at the stamp office nor in the bazaar, and therefore stamp paper of the value of a rupee and fractions of a rupee were taken up and stitched together. In the present exhausted state of the public exchequer, the Board, probably, will not discontinue the practice of requiring tenders for salt being submitted on stamped paper. Certainly the Board deserve the thanks of the government for having hit on this measure for filling the public coffers. We have been told that the registered salt merchants do not much exceed two hundred in number; and as registered merchants only are permitted to tender for salt, it is difficult to comprehend how the applicants for salt at present amounted to one thousand men. We believe that the system of issuing tickets to respectable buyers, pursued in the opium sales, may with equal advantage be adopted in salt sales by the issue of tickets to registered mahajuns only, from whom one application only for salt should be received. If this course is pursued, the object with which registration has been introduced, will be effectually carried out, and the combination which now exists between the registered merchants and other speculators in the submission of tenders for salt, which is generally condemned, will cease to exist."

UNSAFE TRAVELLING.—We hear that two Government carts carrying the bhany dawd from Calcutta to Benares were plundered on the 28th of May, at Dummereah, near Topechauncey, where the Grand Trunk Road runs near Poras-nauth. The bandits are said to have been hill-men, and to have numbered close on three hundred. They took away all that the carts contained, but were pursued by a commissariat officer stationed on the Grand Trunk Road, who captured a number of them, and recovered a quantity of the plundered property. An European jailor of Burhee, we believe, who was proceeding to his station, happening to be on one of the carts when they were attacked, was very severely maltreated by the robbers. He received a severe sword cut on the head.

RAILWAY OPERATIONS in the N. W. Provinces are fast progressing, and the road from Cawnpore to Meerut will shortly be opened to the public. We hear that the want of coal has been a source of great inconvenience to railway passengers in the N. W. Provinces. Instead of coals, wood generally is used to work the locomotive.

NEW SYSTEM OF ACCOUNTS.—The system of accounts introduced some short time back into the office of the Central Office of Accounts, Public Works Department, at this Presidency, by Captain Dickens, who was appointed specially for the purpose, is to be introduced into the other presidencies. Captain Dickens has accordingly been deputed to proceed to Roorkee, Lahore, Agra, and Lucknow, to ascertain the state of the accounts there, and introduce his new system, and return by July to instruct the officers expected from Madras and Bombay. It is to be regretted that Captain Dickens was not allowed his own time, to do fully what, under this arrangement, will have to be done over again.

OFFICIAL CHANGES.—In consequence of the retirement of Mr. Staunton from the office of the military auditor general, after an aggregate service of fifty-seven years under Government, the following arrangements have taken place: Mr. George promoted to Rs. 400, Mr. Wright to Rs. 300. It is remarked of Colonel Champneys, in the disposal of vacancies in his establishment, that he has in view only the good of the public service, and the special qualifications of those who look to him for advancement and promotion.

MR. ALEXANDER ROSS, late civil and sessions judge of Furruckabad, has arrived at Agra to take up the duties of Mr. G. F. Harvey, late commissioner of Agra, who has left for Europe on medical certificate.

"GOT NO WORK TO DO."—Placards are posted on the walls in Calcutta inviting men of European parentage to enlist in Her Majesty's Indian artillery, cavalry, and infantry. A bounty of Rs. 50 is offered, but the term of service is not mentioned. The same paper says that from 1,200 to 1,600 men are now idling about the streets of the metropolis, having recently been discharged from the several naval brigades, and as there is no prospect of these men obtaining employment on board ships already well provided with hands, it is supposed that a majority will enlist.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS.—The Commander in Chief has ordered the removal of the Punjab and Goorka regiments from Oude. The regiment of Ferozepore, and the 7th Punjab infantry are to go back to the Punjab at once, and the Kumaon battalion to Kumaon. Major Bruce's police are to take the place of the regiments guarding the frontier of Nepal. This arrangement affords us reason to think that the rebels are not likely now to give much trouble. They are scattered about in small bands; and the recently-organised police will suffice to check their movements, if they should come in their way. It is supposed that by the end of the rains the number of native regiments in Oude will be farther lessened; and in a short time the police will be exclusively employed to protect the frontier.

RUNDHO SHAH, the Rajah of Khejreeghur, has, at the last moment, when suspected of being friendly to us, been found to have kept up a correspondence with the rebels, and to have furnished them with supplies. A force has been sent out from Shajehanpore, but he and his family have fled to the hills. Report says three guns were found in his village of Nawulghur.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—Economy in the public expenditure is the order of the day. A committee to revive the system of audit in the Marine department has been formed, composed of the accountants to the Governments of India and Bengal and superintendent of Marine, who have been specially urged, while preparing a scheme more simple than that which has hitherto prevailed, to keep in view the principle of not further increasing the expenses of the department unless it be to engage the services of qualified men.

ATTEMPT AT RESCUE.—A hostile demonstration was recently made, it appears, by a large force of insurgents, "friends" to whom the ex-Nawab of Furruckabad "had been gracious," to rescue the traitor from the custody of the military guard who were conveying the banished exile from Futtehgurh to Agra, en route to Bombay. The attempt, which was made in the vicinity of Shekoabad, was, however, frustrated.

TESTIMONIAL TO DR. RINGER.—The testimonial of a silver breakfast service, which certain friends of Theobald Ringer, Esq., M.D., late civil surgeon of Murree, desired to present to that gentleman, as a token of their high esteem and regard for his private character, and a just appreciation of his professional services, has, at his request, been forwarded to his brother, Charles Ringer, Esq., at Clifton; Dr. Ringer himself being at present engaged on active service in Oude.

GOWHATTY, LOWER ASSAM, May 27.—At present all is stagnation here, barring the river, which is fast filling to the level of its banks. We have a most wonderfully cool climate here. No punkahs at work yet, and cloth clothing quite necessary for morning and evening. Indeed, Assam has been greatly maligned. The climate is good, and apparently well suited to Europeans. As a tea-producing country it far surpasses, both for the yield of the plants and the facility with which the produce can be transported, any other part of India, as the whole valley is intersected with rivers both on the northern and southern sides, which fall into the Brahmaputra, as a glance at any tolerable map will show. Want of labour is the great drawback. I cannot say I think much encouragement is given to induce settlers to come up from Bengal, but I say this with diffidence. In the Naga hills cotton is grown in considerable quantities, and brought down for sale and barter to the valley. Rumour says the Lieutenant Governor of Bengal is to come on a tour of inspection this rainy season. If he really wants to see the land he should come in the cold weather, as now he will merely see the river and the few stations on the banks, which will give him about as much idea of Assam as he would have if he never left the Sunderbunds. Colonel Sale, of the Engineers, has just gone on to Debroghur on a tour of inspection. The rains have set in, and the weather is consequently muggy, but still far from unpleasantly hot.

FUTTEHGURH, June 1, 1859.—Moonshee Gungapershad, deputy collector, proposed that a club be established in this station. This evening a meeting was held accordingly, and the following persons were appointed members:—Moonshee Gungapershad, president; Moonshee Narain Doss, secretary; and Baboo Sreepushen Deb, Baboo Shib Chunder Ghosal, and Mohammed Syed, members. It was resolved that this club be called "The Futtehgurh Self-Improvement Club," and that subscriptions be paid by each member to meet its expenses. However, in order to commence with the business, it was resolved that the subscriptions of four months be advanced to the secretary to enable him to open communication with editors of different papers and journals. It was further resolved that all the members be assembled at the president's house early every Sunday morning. This is the first time that the natives of this place have entertained an idea of improvement. If it fail not, it will be interesting and useful to them. They will reap the result now anticipated, should they persevere and be steady in the scheme proposed.

JHANSEE, June 5.—You are already aware that Bundelcund, though comparatively quiet, is not altogether tranquil. Jawahir Sing, Gumbheer Sing, Burjore Sing, and several other rebellious thakours are still at large, doing as much mischief as they and their numerous followers can to the different parts of the country. Now only two days ago Thakoor Jungjeet Sing of Bushna came to Duttea, a small friendly principality in this neighbourhood, and in order to escape observation, mixed himself in disguise among the crowd of a marriage procession which had gone out on the occasion of the wedding of the late Raja's daughter. But the fellow could not evade the vigilant eye of the Superintendent, Bai Gunesheelall Bahadoor, who has been instrumental in the apprehension of many ringleaders of notorious character, such as the Mama Sahab, father of the late Ranees of Jhansee, Laloo Bakshee, and others during the last year. This functionary was no sooner informed of Jungjeet being in Duttea, than he laid his trap for him, caught him, and had him despatched to the civil authorities at this station to meet his desert. This rebel chief had been very troublesome, and had a reward of Rs. 2,000 set for his apprehension. The marriage festivities of the daughter of the late Raja of Duttea went off with great éclat.

THE REBELS IN NEPAUL. According to the Lucknow Herald the rebels in Nepaul appear to be reduced to the greatest straits. Jung Bahadur does not at all relish the idea of his dominions being infested with them; yet there is a strong party at Katmandu which seems disposed to favour them. At one time it would appear that Jung had determined to expel the rebels, but the chiefs Bala Rao, Nana, &c. sought and obtained permission for themselves and families, only, to remain in Dang or Dewgurh valley—the sepoys and others being requested to quit. Accordingly the Nana, Bala Rao, &c. have come down and encamped at the mouth of the Goorung pass leading into the Dang valley. Mummoo Khan was in the Urjun pass, four or five miles west of the Goorung, but it was said he would return to the Begum, who was at some place more in the interior. A rather large body of the rebels had made their appearance at the foot of the hills. They would appear to have lived in the jungles thereabouts, and only come out occasionally to see what they can plunder in the shape of food.

A RIGHTEOUS DECISION.—The Governor General has decided that if the inhabitants of Arrah took part in the destruction of the public buildings, the proposal to make them pay the whole cost of the repairs is proper.

LOSS OF THE "ALMA" OF BELFAST.—We regret to announce the loss of the British ship Alma, of Belfast, 1,230 tons, Capt. Munce, bound hence for Mauritius, with rice and sundries. The Alma left Cowcally on Sunday last, in tow of the steam-tug Mary Stuart, which left her about 2 p.m. to the south of the Lower Gaspar Light. About 4 p.m., whilst working down the Eastern Channel, the ship struck heavily, damaged her rudder, and became at once unmanageable. She appears to have foundered very shortly after striking, in mid-channel, about E. of the Spit Buoy. The ship Nimrod, inward bound, on Monday fortunately descried the wreck, and rescued eleven men who had taken refuge in the tops. The American ship Como also sent her boat to the wreck, and rendered every assistance in her power. The chief mate and nine of the crew who had reached the Gaspar Light vessel were also brought up by the Nimrod. Another boat had left the ship with eleven men in her; four of these afterwards shifted into the long boat, and as yet nothing has since been heard of these two boats. It is possible that the wind having been from the westward, they may have fetched the land to the eastward of Saugor Island, and no time should be lost in instituting a search for them in that direction. At present nothing is certainly known of the fate of the captain, his wife and child, who were on board, nor of the pilot and leadsmen, all of whom are missing. There were only two passengers on board—Lieut. Ruck and his bride. Mr. Ruck is among the saved, but we believe his wife was lost. The weather on Sunday, south of Saugor, was very stormy, and the mail steamer was obliged to take her pilot to sea with her, the pilot brigs having been compelled to stand out to sea.—Englishman, June 8.

GOLD A LEGAL TENDER.—The Committee of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, after consulting some of the native bankers and merchants, have recommended in their annual report the expediency of making gold a legal tender to the extent of 200 rupees, and recognising the sovereign as the equivalent of ten rupees. It is reported that Lord Stanley has obtained the sanction of her Majesty, for the issue of new coins in supersession of the present Indian currency.

NATIVE PRESS IN THE PUNJAB.—The judicial commissioner of the Punjab has issued a circular desiring the maintenance of a strict censorship over the native press, and prohibiting the establishment of any new native presses, without licence from the Lieutenant Governor.

THE PUNJAB.—On the evening of Friday, 27th May, a durbar was held by the commissioner of the Lahore division, Mr. B. Temple, for the purpose of presenting khilluts to various native chiefs and gentry of the Ferozepore district, who had rendered service during the crisis of 1857. The place of meeting was a large tent and awning pitched on the edge of Ruttun Chund's tank, near the city. The following officers and gentlemen were present:—Mr. R. Egerton, deputy commissioner, Colonel Errington, 51st K.O.L.I., Major Brett, 79th highlanders, Captain Mac Andrew, captain of police, Mr. Jones, assistant commissioner, Captain Leith, 79th highlanders, Lieut. Macnair, ditto Lieut. E. L. Ommanney, assistant commissioner, and Dr. Dallas, superintendent of central gaol. All the native chiefs and gentry of the Lahore city were present, to the number of about two hundred. After a suitable address from Mr. Temple, the following rewards were given:—Sirdar Kishen Sing, Providence, Rs. 500; Hurree Sing, agent of ditto, Rs. 500; Shumshoodeen Khan, Rs. 1,000; Goolab Sing of Hursahai, Rs. 500; Goolab Sing Sodhie of Munawa, Rs. 250; Sirdar Goordut Sing, Rs. 250; Maitab Sing, Rs. 125; Purtab Sing, Rs. 125; Sodhie Bhuggut Sing, Rs. 250; Rujjun Sing, Rs. 125; Indur Sing, Rs. 100; Mann Sing, Rs. 250; Khuzan Sing, Rs. 150; Ootum Sing, Rs. 100; Khoshal Sing, Rs. 125; Kishen Sing, Rs. 250; Futteh Sing, Veer Sing, Boland Khan, Rs. 200; Futteh Khan, Rs. 100; Hussun Khan, Rs. 100; Shojawul and Shamah, Rs. 250; Rookmoodeen, Rs. 100; Taree Sowars of Gooroo Goolab Sing, Rs. 75; Goolam and Ala, Rs. 130; Ahmud, Rs. 50; Kuddoo, Lumberdar, Rs. 100; Wahab, ditto, Rs. 100. After the presentation the tank was illuminated under the supervision of its spirited proprietor, Ruttun Chund, and there was a large display of fireworks. There was a large crowd of Lahore city people collected. After this the European officers and gentlemen dined with the Commissioner in Ruttun Chund's garden, close by, which was brilliantly lighted up by the proprietor. On Monday, 30th May, in the evening, Mr. Temple had a private durbar at his own house, to receive the chiefs and gentry of Lahore and Ferozepore, and to bid farewell to the latter before their return to their homes. On that occasion the following khilluts were presented to certain chiefs and gentry of Lahore, on account of service rendered during 1857:—Dewan Goordut Sing, Rs. 200; Rajah Fuqueeroolah, Rs. 500; Gokul Chund, Rs. 200; Jumyut Raie, Rs. 200; Colonel Joala Sing, Rs. 250; Dewan Bishen Sing, Rs. 200; Nubbee Buxsh, of Shalimar, Rs. 150; Colonel Nooroodeen, Rs. 150.—Lahore Chronicle.

GOVERNMENT LOANS.—From an official statement of subscription to the loans during the quarter ending April 30 last, we observe that one hundred and three lacs rupees in cash and an equal amount in bonds were paid to the five per cent. loan opened on January 16, 1857; while nearly ten lacs and a half have been received for treasury bills at three paces per cent. per diem. The cash balances in the Government treasuries in India at the close of the official year 1858-59 was Rs. 9,74,56,306.

CASHMERE.—The family differences between the two rival chiefs of Cashmere have been at last amicably settled. This has been done through the friendly interference of the British Government, and the prudent conduct of Jwala Shah the minister. In accordance with the advice of the late Lieut. Governor of the Punjab, the young Maharajah, it is said, has conceded several valuable estates, to put an end to all ancient feuds.

THE OPIUM CROP.—The Behar opium agent reported on the 30th of March that the provision of opium might be estimated at 44,250 maunds; on the 7th of April he wrote that not more than 40,760 maunds could be expected. On the 8th he reduced his estimate to 35,000 maunds, and on the 18th of April he reported 30,000 maunds as the utmost that could be expected. He adds that the opium produced is of very low consistency, so as to delay the caking. The agent attributes this to the bad weather of February, and a disastrous fall of rain on the 4th of March. In the Benares agency the provision was expected to be about 14,000 maunds, which might give eight thousand chests, but has since reported that it would fall short of that estimate. It was also of low consistency.

NATIVE RUMOURS.—We (Delhi Gazette) hear that the inhabitants of the city here (Agra) have got hold of a report, which has caused a good deal of excitement among them, and of the absurdity of which no argument will persuade them. They have it that on the 15th of this month (June) they are to be fallen upon and plundered right and left by the Sikhs and Europeans. They are determined they shall be looted, and they will be looted, and will be rather disappointed than otherwise when they find they are not looted. It is a great pity these reports, circulated, of course, designedly, with the object of creating alarm and keeping up excitement, cannot be traced to their author. Last year, when reports of this kind were so common, they all had a tendency the other way; it was the European community that was threatened with violence, or outrage, or massacre, as the case might be, but it seems now that the tables are turned. We observe that a similar report was prevalent in the city of Lucknow a short time since, and the minds of the principal inhabitants were only reassured by the commissioner, Mr. Wingfield, having them all assembled together, and reasoning with them on the absurdity of such a notion.

MADAME JOURDAN, whose husband was killed at Agra by the mutineers, is to have a pension of Rs. 100 a month, and a free passage to France.

THE AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS.—The thanks of the Government have been especially conveyed to the American members of the late Calcutta Volunteer Corps.

CONFISCATIONS.—Some landed property in the Benares division belonging to Narain Rae, Sree Dondoo Paul, Nana Sahib and the Ranees of Jhansi, has been confiscated by Government.

LUCKNOW.—We (Lucknow Herald) are enabled to report that confidence has been perfectly restored in the city. Indeed, the inhabitants are beginning to discover that the rumours which have from time to time disturbed their minds were nothing more than vile concoctions by some mischievous rascals, more common here, perhaps, than elsewhere. We are very happy, indeed, to see everything now wearing the aspect of settling down. The bazaars are fuller than they have latterly been wont to be; the display of bullion in the markets is greater; trade is more brisk; and altogether the common affairs of life seem to be fast assuming that cheerful appearance which was so remarkable in Lucknow before the rebellion.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.—Lord Canning has appointed a committee, consisting of General Birch, Colonel Steward, and Colonel Mackenzie, to investigate the present system of a double staff in India, in the medical department, and suggest a prompt remedy.

LORD CANNING, it is said, intends leaving Calcutta in September for a tour in the North-west Provinces.

THE CENTRAL OUDE RAILWAY COMPANY is to be amalgamated with the Oude Railway Company; the deposit from two shillings and sixpence to be increased to five shillings.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PEOPLE'S PARK.—The Madras Government have offered a reward of Rs. 200 for the best design for the People's Park, proposed to occupy the esplanade to the west of Black Town. In laying out the ornamental gardens within the park the combination of wood, water, and roadways, so as to produce a natural effect, is to be properly attended to. The second best design will receive a prize of Rs. 100. The following is from the Gazette on the subject:—"As this undertaking has for its sole object the healthful recreation of the people of Madras, it is hoped that the artistic talent of the European and native community will be largely displayed in the forthcoming designs, and that the one chosen for the prize will worthily illustrate, as a People's Park, the taste and talent of the Presidency."

THE NEW COMMISSION.—The Hon. Mr. Morehead and Messrs. Strange, T. Sydney Smyth, and J. B. Norton, have been appointed Commissioners for inquiring into and reporting on the evils existing in the present system of judicature in the Madras Presidency, and on the means by which they may be most effectually remedied.

NIZAM'S DOMINIONS.—There is evidently an uneasy feeling about the Nizam's country. Troops are being quietly marched into it from the Bombay Presidency, which would not be done unless their presence there was deemed necessary. The 18th Royal Irish have moved to Secunderabad, while the 91st Foot, expected from England, was, on arrival, to have marched direct to Jaulna. Two companies of the 56th Foot have marched from Belgaum to Shorapore, where it is suspected something unpleasant has been hatching, as otherwise European troops would not, in this grilling weather, have been marched to a station which, not having before been occupied by Europeans, has no proper accommodation for them.

THE MODEL GOVERNOR.—We hear of another bold act of Sir Charles Trevelyan. He has invested the head Sheristadar of the Madras Board of Revenue with the title of Rai Raya Rai, and bestowed a khilut upon him. The ceremony took place at Government-house, amid great pomp. The Englishman remarks that the general impression in Madras is, that Lord Stanley has vested its Governor with extensive powers of local action, and the latter is developing plans, well understood between him and the Secretary for India, which will be sealed when they reach home in public shape, whatever may be the verdict pronounced upon them in Calcutta.

ORIENTAL ETIQUETTE.—An illustration of the importance which Orientals attach to ceremonies which an European would scarcely notice, was afforded at the Government-house ball at Madras on the Queen's birthday. It appears that on the arrival of the Prince Azim Jah, titular Nawaub of the Carnatic, Sir Charles Trevelyan descended to meet him some steps further than former governors had descended to meet the predecessors of his Highness. On this fact the Mahomedans about the court of the Nawaub have founded the belief that he is to be restored to some or all of the royal rights, powers, and privileges of which he or his ancestors before him have been deprived!

THE PIER.—The following particulars relative to the Madras pier, now shortly to be undertaken by the patentees of the screw pile, Messrs. Saunders and Mitchell, who have contracted for the erection of it at a cost of £100,000, will doubtless interest our readers:—"The pier is to be 1000 feet in length and forty feet broad, terminating in a T head measuring 100 feet by 40. It will consist of rows of piles, four in each row, and placed 10 feet apart. The outer piles are to be of the diameter of 8 inches and the inner of 6, and they will be secured by struts and tie-rods of 5 and 2 1/2 inches in diameter respectively. Wrought iron will be the material used throughout in the structure. The elevation of the platform above high-water level will be 15 feet, and the first row of piles will be driven 60 feet seaward of high-water mark, or 280 feet from the road in front of the Sea Custom House, the site chosen for the pier. But as the level of this road is some five or six feet below that of the platform, an inclined approach will be made to the latter, partly rising upon an embankment and partly supported by piles. By this incline, on which double rows of rails are to be laid down, a connection will be formed between the shore and the pier."

MR. S. D. BIRCH.—We understand that Mr. S. D. Birch, Sub-Treasurer, has been appointed Accountant General of Bombay, and that he proceeds to take up his appointment by the next P. and O. steamer. The departure of this gentleman from Madras, of which place he has been so many years a resident, occupying conspicuous official situations, will be very generally regretted by all classes of the public. None of our fellow-citizens, probably, has a wider or more attached circle of friends, whose good wishes will follow him go whithersoever he may. As a financial officer, whether of old at the head of the Government Bank, or more recently as connected with the Bank of Madras and in the situation of Sub-Treasurer, Mr. Birch has ever stood high in the estimation of his superiors, both on the spot and in Leadenhall-street. The late Court of Directors and former Governments of Madras, have several times recorded their favourable sense of his able and zealous services.—To the community at large, he has ever proved himself a very obliging public officer, and the trading portion of it in particular are greatly his debtors, for the kindly interest in their welfare always manifested by him, both privately and when his official duties brought him into communication with them. Mr. Birch is indeed generally a man of kindly disposition and unobtrusive benevolence, and we believe we do not but express the common sentiment, when we say that we hope he will be spared to resume office again at our presidency hereafter. It would not be right for us to close these brief remarks without noticing how much St. George's Cathedral is indebted to Mr. Birch for improvements wrought therein of late, chiefly through his agency. The raising of subscriptions for the purchase of its noble new organ, was mainly owing to his exertions, and this is only one example of benefits bestowed.—Madras Athenæum.

EUROPEAN JURIES.—The subject of the trial of Europeans, says the Madras Times, "when indicted before the Supreme Court, was recently brought to the notice of Government by the Advocate General; having arisen out of the late case of the charcoal-burner, who died from injuries inflicted upon him by James Smith, an Englishman employed in the Department of Public Works. The Governor in Council remarks that 'it is a painful but undoubted fact that, however obvious the guilt of an Englishman may be, justice is not to be expected in cases of this description from an ordinary Calcutta or Madras jury composed of Europeans and East Indians.' The Advocate General proposed that these cases should be tried either by a special jury, or by a jury composed partly of natives. The Sudder Court was in favour of the former, and the Supreme Court in favour of the latter clause. Government took the view of the judges of the Supreme Court. The subject is to be referred home for the consideration of the Secretary of State for India."

AURUNGABAD.—The resident at Hyderabad has suggested that Aurungabad as a military station might be made over to the Bombay Government, while the Commander-in-Chief of Madras recommends Jaulnah as a good position for Bombay troops to occupy. Aurungabad is in a central situation, and should be preferred, being close to the Godavery, which marks the southern boundary of the Nizam's dominions, and within a short distance of the districts where the Bheels are constantly creating disturbances. The resident's recommendation is not a bad one. Jaulnah will become a station of the Nizam's contingent, if Aurungabad is occupied by Bombay troops, and, in this case, there will be no necessity for detailing a detachment from Aurungabad for the protection of Jaulnah. The Nizam's troops will be able to suppress any disturbances that the scattered bands of Rohillas in the neighbouring districts might occasion, while the presence of European soldiers, within fifty miles, will deter them from playing any of their wild tricks close to the cantonment.

THE 3RD MADRAS EUROPEANS at Jubbulpore have expressed their dissatisfaction of their transfer to her Majesty's service. They refused to receive the Queen's batta, always given on her Majesty's birthday. They said they wished for their discharge, but never attempted to be disrespectful to their officers, and after thinking over the matter for a day they have returned to their duty like loyal soldiers. The Artillery have throughout displayed an admirable spirit.

THE RAJAH OF MANGURAH, in the Jubbulpore district, who was found guilty of rebellion, has absconded, his property has been confiscated, and a handsome reward offered for his apprehension.

H.M.'s 44TH.—A painful loss of life took place on Wednesday evening last on the occasion of a detachment of H.M.'s 44th from Fort St. George relieving one at St. Thomas's Mount. Both the relieving and relieved force lost two men from, as we learn, sheer heat and fatigue. One man lay down and expired before even the medical officer could get to his side. The case is one calling for serious investigation.—Madras Times, June 5.

JACKATALLA was visited by a severe storm at the end of last month. Upwards of 31 inches of rain were gauged. The European barracks, now in course of erection, suffered a good deal, and several thousand rupees' worth of building materials were lost. The cantonment roads, watercourses, and burial ground, are more or less damaged. The chief engineer reports that the damage and loss caused by the storm will retard the progress of the works, and will render necessary increased exertions on the part of the executive engineer and his subordinates.

CULTIVATION OF SANDAL-WOOD.—The collector of Malabar, having found it difficult to put a stop to the depredations in the Sandal wood jungles by the Moplahs of Malabar, from the nature of the climate and country in which it was grown, and the large profits yielded by the trade in it, has suggested the advisability of growing sandal wood in Malabar. This he thought would be the most effectual way to put down the depredations. If supplied with a quantity of seed, he would have it distributed to the Moplahs in different localities; they were quick in taking up an idea, and a few successful attempts in the cultivation of the tree would speedily lead others to grow it. The conservator of forests has been requested to confer with the collector on the subject.

QUILON.—We learn from Quilon that robberies have been very rife there of late. There is scarcely a house that has escaped being plundered, and so great is the general apprehension that people do not think of retiring to bed without having firearms within reach.

THE LANDOUR RANGERS.—The corps of Landour Rangers, in the North-West Provinces, was broken up on the 3rd of June.

GASTIN CALCUTTA.—The Dispensary, the Police-office, the Town Guard, the Medical College and Hospital, the Great Gaol, the House of Correction, and various churches at Calcutta, are to be lighted with gas.

BOMBAY.

HYDRABAD, SCINDE, June 3.—Your readers will be glad to hear that a field force, under the command of Lieut. Roome, attacked and nearly exterminated Adul Mahomed Khan's cavalry. This action took place in the jungles between Secoda and Garrespore, early in the morning of the 16th May. Lieut. Roome did not leave Mungrowlie till the morning of the 15th. The force must have marched between sixty and seventy miles at a stretch. It was quite a cavalry affair, for on arriving at the village where the rebels had encamped, it was found they had just left; the infantry were therefore halted, while the cavalry divided into three parties, and, taking different roads, pursued at a gallop. That portion of them led by Lieuts. Roome and Bradford had not proceeded above three or miles before they suddenly came upon Adul Mahomed Khan at the head of a large body of cavalry. This they at once charged and routed, and in the charge and subsequent pursuit (which latter was kept up for several miles) they killed numbers of the enemy, and among them some men of consequence. There is a report that Adul Mahomed Khan escaped, but that requires confirmation. The cavalry engaged in this affair was that known as Mayne's Horse, and when it is considered that between the mornings of the 15th and 16th they had marched, fought, and pursued a distance of seventy miles, I think they are deserving of great credit, and it only shows what natives can do when properly led and commanded.

MR. A. D. SASSOON has been appointed a member of the committee of management of the Government savings' bank, in the room of the late Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, bart.

INDORE.—The total amount of Government treasure plundered at Indore was 1,208,859, the amount recovered was 470,820-13-6 or about 33 Rs. 3 Annas, per cent. of the sum lost.

MAJOR H. J. PARKINSON.—We regret to announce the death of Maj. H. J. Parkinson, of the Native Veteran Battalion, which melancholy event occurred at Ootacamund on the 8th of June, from disease of the heart. Maj. Parkinson was of the season of 1819, and served with the 1st Bombay Fusiliers in Arabia with General Sir Lionel Smith's force in 1820-21. He was present at the night attack made on the camp at Zom, and took a part in the capture of Beni-boo-Ali. Maj. Parkinson occupied the post of Commandant of the Zion Fort for a number of years, and was universally respected and esteemed. He was sheriff of Bombay in 1857, being the first military man who ever filled this important office. Declining health compelled him to leave Bombay some months ago, in the hope that a change of climate might lead to a recovery. But he seems to have adopted the step too late, and it is probable that the excitement of the journey may have accelerated the progress of the disease.

MILITARY COMMISSION.—A commission has been formed, under instructions from the Supreme Government, to inquire into and report on the military expenditure of India. Sir Charles Trevelyan has nominated Colonel Balfour as the member for Madras; Colonel Burn will represent Bengal; and Colonel Jamieson, Bombay. The commission is to assemble at once in Bombay.

THE MILITARY TRAIN.

No. 578.—The second battalion military train is under orders for immediate embarkation for England.

The career in India of this corps has been short but brilliant, and eminently serviceable to its country.

Upon arriving at the Presidency it was at once converted into a cavalry force, and sent untrained into the field.

Throughout the glorious campaign in Oude the military train bore a part which would have reflected credit upon the oldest and most experienced cavalry soldiers.

It has served with distinction in various affairs under Lieut. gen. Sir James Outram, at the capture of Lucknow, in the operations about Azimghur, and, lastly, in the harassing campaign of Shahabad.

The military train leaves India with the best wishes of the Viceroy and Governor General in Council for the future honour and prosperity of the battalion.

Adj. gen's Office, H.M.'s Forces, Calcutta, June 6. Hd. Qrs., Simla, May 23, 1859.

At a General Court Martial assembled at Lucknow on April 28, 1859, Lieut. A. Watson, H.M.'s 34th regt., was arraigned on the following charges:—

Charges.—First Charge.—For conduct, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Byram Ghaut, on Jan. 15, 1859, without leave from his commanding officer, absented himself from the detachment of his regiment under his command, and on duty on board the steam gunboat, Hoornsgotta, and so continued absent, until Jan. 31, 1859.

Second Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, on Jan. 28, 1859, with the intention to deceive Lieut. col. J. Simpson, comdg. the wing of the 34th Foot, at Fyzabad, and to conceal his absence without leave, as set forth in the first charge, written at Lucknow a letter to that officer, dated on that day, but falsely purporting to have been written at Byram Ghaut.

Finding.—Guilty of both charges.

Sentence.—To be cashiered.

Confirmed, but not approved.

(Signed) CLYDE, General, C. in C. Simla, 20th May, 1859.

REMARKS BY THE RIGHT HON'BLE THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF IN INDIA.

In the opinion of the Commander in Chief, the second charge is not proved, there being no evidence to show intention to deceive as alleged against the prisoner.

The sentence of the Court is therefore remitted, and Lieut. Watson will be released from arrest. The Commander in Chief trusts that Lieut. Watson will, by his future conduct, justify the views taken by His Excellency respecting his case, by the strictest exactness in the performance of his duty henceforth.

By order of His Excellency the Commander in Chief.

W. L. PAKENHAM, Colonel,
Adjutant General H.M.'s Forces in India.

LIEUT. AMBROSE DAWSON JENNINGS, 2ND EUR. L.C.

Hd. Qrs., Simla, May 19, 1859.

At a General Court Martial assembled at Meerut, on Thursday, April 21, 1859, Lieut. A. D. Jennings, 2nd Bengal Eur. Lt. cav., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and of a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, at Meerut on Feb. 24, 1859, been in a state of intoxication there, and in the presence of several men of his regiment.

Finding.—Guilty.

Sentence.—To lose one step of his rank in the wing of the regiment to which he belongs.

Confirmed.

(Signed) CLYDE, General, C. in C. Kussowlie, May 10, 1859.

REMARKS BY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF IN INDIA.

The Commander in Chief has confirmed the sentence, but he cannot approve of it; deeming the punishment awarded altogether inadequate to the serious offence of which Lieutenant Jennings has been found guilty. Yielding, however, to the apparent contrition of Lieutenant Jennings, and trusting that he will fulfil his promises of amendment, Lord Clyde has not returned the proceedings for revision.

Lieutenant Jennings is to be released from arrest, and directed to return to his duty. His name is to be transposed in the list of lieutenants of the left wing of the 2nd Bengal European light cavalry, and in future will stand next below that of Lieutenant J. C. Lockwood.

By order of the Right Hon. the Commander in Chief.

The Victoria Cross.

WAR OFFICE, JULY 6.

The Queen having been graciously pleased, by a warrant under her royal sign manual, bearing date December 13, 1858, to declare that non-military persons who, as volunteers, have borne arms against the mutineers, both at Lucknow and elsewhere, during the late operations in India, shall be considered as eligible to receive the decoration of the Victoria Cross, subject to the rules and ordinances already made and ordained for the government thereof, provided that it be established in any case that the person was serving under the orders of a general or other officer in command of troops in the field when he performed the act of bravery for which it is proposed to confer the decoration;—her Majesty has accordingly been pleased to signify her intention to confer this high distinction on the undermentioned gentlemen, whose claims to the same have been submitted for her Majesty's approval, on account of acts of bravery performed by them in India, as recorded against their names, viz.:—

Mr. T. H. Kavanagh, Assistant Commissioner in Oude.—On the 8th of November, 1857, Mr. Kavanagh, then serving under the orders of Lieut. gen. Sir James Outram, in Lucknow, volunteered on the dangerous duty of proceeding through the city to the camp of the commander in chief for the purpose of guiding the relieving force to the beleaguered garrison in the Residency—a task which he performed with chivalrous gallantry and devotion.

Mr. R. L. Mangles, of the Bengal Civil Service, Assistant Magistrate at Patna.—Mr. Mangles volunteered and served with the force, consisting of detachments of her Majesty's 10th and 87th regiments, and some native troops despatched to the relief of Arrah, in July, 1857, under the command of Captain Dunbar of the 10th regiment. The force fell into an ambushade on the night of the 29th of July, 1857, and during the retreat on the next morning Mr. Mangles, with signal gallantry and generous self devotion, and notwithstanding that he had himself been previously wounded, carried for several miles out of action, a wounded soldier of her Majesty's 37th regiment, after binding up his wounds under a murderous fire, which killed or wounded almost the whole detachment; and he bore him in safety to the boats.

GOVERNMENT CENTRAL MUSEUM.—The public will be gratified to learn that a very valuable and important contribution has recently been made to the Central Museum, by the purchase by Government of 300 specimens of ethnographical heads of the natives of India and Higher Asia, from the collection of the Prussian traveller Schlagintweit. The collection was made by this celebrated traveller during his travels in India and Asia, and other parts of the world, between the years 1854 and 1858, and is now available at Berlin. The prototype of the heads and faces of living beings was first taken by means of clay spread over the parts, and the mould thus obtained served for making copper copies of them by casting the metal into it. Fourteen of the heads which Government has purchased were received by the last mail, and have been placed in the Museum for public exhibition. Two of these represent the heads of the natives of Ladak (Thibet); two of those of Cashmere (Himalaya); two of Radz-mahal (Bengal); two of Sikkim (Himalaya); one of Bhutan (Himalaya); one of Galle (Ceylon); one of Ansora (Thibet); one of Balti (Thibet); one of Guari Khorsum (Thibet); and one of Kulu (Himalaya).

GOOD ADVICE.—"I recollect a very useful piece of advice which the Duke of Wellington gave me (as President of the Board of Control) with respect to courts-martial. When it was suggested that an officer should be restored, he said, 'Never forgive drunkenness.' I never did; I never sent back any man, or relaxed the punishment of any man, who had been drunk."—Lord Ellenborough before Organisation Committee.

Operations in Rajpootana.

Fort William, 20th May, 1859.

No. 725 of 1859.—H. E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following letter from Brigdr. gen. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., comdg. Gwalior div., forwarding reports from Col. De Salis and Lieut. col. Rich, of the pursuit and dispersion of the rebel force under Rao Sahib, Feroze Shah, and others.

H. E. in Council desires to record his cordial thanks to Col. De Salis, Lieut. col. Rich, and the officers and troops (European and native) employed on the occasion.

From Brigdr. gen. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., comdg. Gwalior div.,

To the Chief of the Staff,
Head Qrs., Simla.

Camp Seronge, 21st April, 1859.

Sir,—In my letter No. 226, of the 8th inst., I had the honour to report the pursuit and dispersion of the rebel force under the Rao Sahib, Feroze Shah, Adil Mahomed Khan, and other leaders.

There remained no organized body of rebels to act against; but the Seronge jungles forming a zone of about forty miles' radius, were infested with several considerable bands, acting apparently independently, yet not entirely without concert.

The pursuing columns of Gen. Michel had taken up positions assigned by that officer and Munohur Thana, Puchowree and Beursia, and Brigdr. Wheler had moved out from Saugor towards the Betwa, ready to take up the pursuit, should the rebels break cover.

Gen. Michel kindly placed Col. De Salis's column, formed of a remnant of Smith's brigade, at my disposal.

A strong detachment under Maj. Chetwode formed a cordon between Seronge and Beursia, and thus cut off a portion of this extensive jungle, and reduced the field operations considerably. The columns of Cols. Rich and De Salis, and a detachment of the 92nd highlanders, on their way to Jhansi, under Col. Lockhart, who delayed his march a few days and cordially assisted, thoroughly swept the northern portion of the jungle, but unfortunately without success. Such of the enemy as had been there managed to evade their pursuers in the dense thickets.

Col. Lockhart then pursued his march, and Cols. De Salis and Rich with undiminished zeal returned to the southern part of the jungle, and with better knowledge of its almost impervious recesses, succeeded by combined and excellent arrangements to driving the rebels from their fastnesses, and defeating them with very severe loss, which, from all the information I can gather, I estimate at about 500.

These rebels were well acquainted with the proclaimed amnesty, and had opportunities afforded them of accepting it, but failed to do so, and murdered all our camp followers who fell into their hands.

I regret that this success has not been attained without the loss of some valuable lives.

I beg to commend to the favour and protection of the rt. hon. the C. in C., Col. De Salis, and Lieut. col. Rich, comdg. the two columns engaged, for the able and skilful manner in which they have carried out a difficult duty, and also the European and native officers and soldiers of both arms, for their gallantry in action, and their unfailing ardour and endurance in a long and harassing pursuit.

I very cordially support the recommendations made by Col. De Salis and Lieut. col. Rich, of the officers named in their reports.

R. NAPIER, Brigdr. gen., comdg. Gwalior Div.

From Col. De Salis, comdg. 1st brig. Rajpootana F. F., to Brigdr. gen. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., comdg. Gwalior Div.

Camp Moohsoodnuggur, 6th April, 1859.

Sir,—I was encamped at this place on the 2nd inst., and Lieut. col. Rich was at Laituree. According to your instructions I arranged a movement of our columns south for the purpose of sweeping these jungles.

We moved accordingly on the 3rd inst., but could not succeed in catching the rebels, who escaped to the west, crossing the Parbuttee, and in so doing a body of their cavalry, about 200, cut through the long column of my baggage, which, together with my guns, half my infantry and some hussars, I had sent by the straight or level road which skirts the jungles. The rebels brutally murdered the native band-master, 10th N.I., and severely wounded two sepoy. They took two Enfield rifles from our baggage and a few camels. A small party of hussars came up very soon, upon which they disappeared in the jungles.

I encamped on the 3rd at Gunjaree, twelve miles south of this, and Lieut. col. Rich encamped at Deergur, about eight miles east of me, but on the other side of the belt of jungle.

I had reason to believe the rebels who had crossed the Parbuttee would endeavour to return, and having very few cav. I could not spare any to follow them without urgent reason.

I was aware we had left other rebels under Feroze Shah behind us, and on the 4th inst., Capt. Bolton, A.D.C. Asst. Qr. mr. gen., procured me certain information of their whereabouts. I arranged with Lieut. col. Rich that we should both make long marches that night to the north, and attack them simultaneously from different sides.

I have to thank Lieut. col. Rich for his cordial co-operation. He himself will report to you the result of his movement.

Accordingly at 7 P.M. on the 4th, I marched quietly out of camp with a column as per margin, leaving the rest of my force and all my tents standing, in order to deceive the enemy's scouts.

We marched back to Moohsoodnuggur and about thirteen miles further to a point north of a jungle village called Boordah, which is ten miles N.N.E. of Moohsoodnuggur, detaching again part of our force, twenty hussars, thirty 95th, thirty 10th N.I., to Tinsia, a village in the heart of the jungles, about five miles south of Boordah. This detachment was commanded by Maj. the Hon. E. Massey, 95th regt.

My plan was to attack Boordah, where the rebels were encamped from the north, and endeavour to drive them east upon Lieut. col. Rich, who was to be at Esurwas, whilst the detachment at Tinsia was to show itself and intercept any attempting to go south.

Accordingly at daybreak on the 5th, I was a little to the north of Boordah, and forming one-third of my small inf. force in skirmishing order and the rest of us in four supports, we advanced quietly through the thick jungle in the direction where the enemy's camp was said to be. On nearing it, we were challenged, and finding the alarm given, we fell upon them with a cheer from our Europeans, and the sound of all our bugles and trumpets.

We killed a good many inf. here, but the cav. who were encamped the other side, and whose horses lately have always been kept saddled, managed to get away.

I pushed on at once with about forty hussars and a few inf. in the direction of Esurwas, and Lieut. col. Rich, but finding none of the enemy near us, I hastened on with the hussars alone, and after going about two miles we discovered the enemy's cav. moving parallel to us. We left those that had preceded us for Lieut. col. Rich, and Maj. Seager, com. the 8th hussars, turned to his right and attacked what was before him. We killed forty of them, and also turned back their camels and baggage that were following them, so that it all fell into the hands of our inf. and camp followers. The rest of their cav. dispersed, some few jumping off their horses and climbing steep rocks in the jungle.

This movement brought us near to Tinsia, where we found Maj. Massey's party, which must have been discovered by the rebels, and obliged them to go off east and meet us and Lieut. col. Rich.

I must observe that the whole country between Boordah, Esurwas, and Tinsia is very dense * 8th hussars: 75 sabres. 95th regt.: 90 on camels; 60 on foot. 10th N.I.: 60 on camels; 60 on foot.

jungle, deep glens and nullahs. Except the cav. attack, and thirty-five rebels surrounded in one glen, and thirteen in another, all actual fighting was mere individual skirmishing.

I am happy to say we have only one wounded (a sepoy, 10th N.I., dangerously), two horses killed, and no one missing.

Several of the cav. slain were the old Gwalior Body Guard, their clothes, arms, and appointments in excellent order. I am told nearly all the inf. who fell were either old sepoys or vallaitees. During our night march our spies had informed us that 200 men who had crossed the Parbuttee were just returned and had gone towards Boordah, and there we recovered one of the Enfields and several camels taken from our baggage on the 3rd inst., besides several Sandree camels taken from my messengers and mine at different times. Subadar Chuttur Sing, late Gwalior Contingent, and lastly general in the rebel force, was said to have commanded the attack on our baggage, and we found him amongst the dead.

I had desired my camp to move on the 5th to Moohsoodnuggur, to which place, after the day's work, we returned. I estimated the number of rebels before us at 1,500: they were commanded by Feroze Shah.

The rebel loss can never be accurately stated. It extended over a length of five miles and breadth of two miles of thick jungle, and we could not spare officers to count them. It is certainly not less than 300, independent of what Lieut. col. Rich may have done. The natives say 500, and do not appear sorry. I begin to think that fear of the rebels alone has prevented them affording us every assistance.

I beg to assure you that the very correct intelligence we have constantly received from our spies and the arrangement of the whole plan of our attack were due to Capt. Bolton, A.D., Q.M.G. I may safely say, that without him we should still be walking after the rebels, and I have the greatest pleasure in bringing this officer's excellent services on the present, as well as on several former occasions, to your notice, hoping you will represent them in the proper quarter.

I cannot speak too highly of the spirit evinced by our Europeans on this occasion, and the fortitude and endurance shown by the 10th N.I. We have all been out in the field more than fourteen months. Our march this day was not less than forty miles; the heat and want of water in the jungles were most oppressive. Our men's clothing has been much damaged in their rapid advance through the jungle.

I have to thank Maj. Seager, commanding 8th hussars; Maj. the Hon. E. Massey, 95th regt.; Capt. Carmichael, 95th regt., comdg. detachts; Capt. Richards, comdg. detachts. 10th N.I., and my brigade major and Cornet Goldsworthy, 8th hussars, for their zealous able assistance which enabled me, first, to carry out a long march in a very dark night; and secondly, to attack with a definite plan, through very thick jungles, where the sun was the only thing that could be seen.

I was much pleased by the spirit and intelligence shown by Capt. Parkinson, 95th regt. Capt. Richards, and Ensign Newport, 10th N.I., and Cornet Pallise, of the 8th hussars.

R. DE SALIS, colonel,
Comdg. 1st brig. Rajpootana F.F.

From Brev. lieut. col. G. W. Rich, 71st Highland L.I., comdg. column, 1st brig., Gwalior div., to Brigdr. gen. Sir R. Napier, K.C.B., comdg. Gwalior div.

Camp Laituree, 7th April, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour in now forwarding an official report of the expedition of my column on the 5th inst., to excuse the delay in not sending it yesterday, on account of endeavouring to collect all information.

On the 2nd inst., hearing there was the Rao's party of rebels, south of Laituree, I co-operated with Brigdr. De Salis in driving them from that jungle; they fled across the Parbuttee River, and we afterwards lost their track. On the 4th inst. I rode to Brigdr. De Salis's Camp, and knowing there was another body of rebels to the north of Laituree and Moolhsodnuggur, I there agreed to his proposed arrangements, a copy of which I annex (No. 1) and in accordance with them I struck camp that night at 8 P.M., made a forced march to Kotra across N.W. of Esurwas, leaving all my baggage with a strong guard at Laituree. In passing, I detached a jemadar and thirty sepoy, 9th Bombay N.I., to Tinsia. I ascertained that there was not any water between Kotra and Boordah, and therefore concluded that the rebels, if driven by Col. De Salis, would either come to Kotra for water, and then fall into the hands of my force to try to escape by way of Tinsia, their favourite resort. It happened as I expected. Many came my way, and made for some villages on the edge of the jungle, favourable to their cause. We cut down fifteen rebel sepoy in the jungle, and then moving my force outside, we discovered a numerous body near the village of Nainwas, half a mile distant, and some running to Esurwas. I immediately rushed forward with my force, as per margin.* The cavalry surrounded the village, and cut down all those in the open country; the infantry entered the village and found rebels in every tenable house and in the grass stacks outside, all of whom were killed. Those rebels were vailaites and sepoy of Gwalior contingent, Scindiah's own army, and a few of different regiments. It is impossible to say the exact number killed, but after consulting officers of the force, and from my own judgment I compute it at seventy, independent of fifteen cut down in the jungle, amongst whom was Chuttur Sing, a subadar of the Gwalior contingent, and others killed by my detached party of the 9th Bombay N.I., under Jemadar Ramjee Cudum, whose report, marked No. 2, I attach, and would recommend him to your favourable consideration. This affair was carried on during the heat of the day. We returned to our camp, Laituree, at half-past 2 o'clock P.M.

I cannot speak too highly of the conduct of officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of my force, both European and native. All exerted themselves, and endured the fatigues of the day and night with the greatest cheerfulness.

I would specially recommend to your notice Lieut. Bradford, of Mayne's horse. From his knowledge of the Hindoostani language, by his intelligence, zeal, and activity, he has enabled me to procure information which, otherwise, I could not have obtained.

The villagers of Nairwas and Esurwas concealed the rebels, denied any rebels being there, or having seen any. I was obliged to burn the former village to get the rebels out of it.

G. W. RICH, Brevet Lieut. Col.,
71st Highland L.I.,

Comdg. column, 1st brig, Gwalior div.

Correction.—From intelligence just received from a wounded rebel of the 72nd Bengal N.I., there were no vailaites in the rebel force. The sepoy, many of them, looked like vailaites, because they had not shaved for a long time.

No. 2.

From Jemadar Ramjee Cudum, 9th Bombay N.I., com. detach.

Camp Laituree, April 6, 1859.

Sir,—I arrived in command of a party of thirty (30) sepoy, 9th B. N.I., at Tinsia, about 8 o'clock, A.M., 5th inst. Just before arriving I came upon a party of rebels, thirty-five in number, flying in all directions. I extended my men and attacked them, when I killed thirty. Two or three were vailaites; about ten were mounted on tattoos and horses, and the rest were Gwalior contingent and budmashes, all armed with regulation muskets and matchlocks. I then went on to Tinsia. On arriving I saw the brig's force; they had already had a fight, and I saw fifty or sixty bodies lying about. The brig. gave me a note to take on to Col. Rich. On arriving at Esurwas I heard firing, and saw two horses loose belonging to the 14th drags., which I assisted to catch, and saw a sergt. of the 15th drags., who told me there was a fight going on. I then extended my men again, and killed four rebels who were flying from Col. Rich's force. These men were also of the Gwalior contingent; all had black belts and regulation muskets.

Brigadier Faddy at Kentee.

Fort William, April 19, 1859.—No. 535 of 1859.—H. E. the Gov. gen. in Council has much satisfaction in publishing the following letter from the Adjt. gen. of the army, with enclosures, giving details of an engagement with the rebels by a detach. under command of Brigdr. Faddy.

The Gov. gen. in Council desires to record his thanks to the brigdr. comdg. and to the troops employed on the occasion, and more particularly to Capt. Boileau and the party of the 2nd Sikh cav. under his command, and to Capt. Wright of the same corps.

From the Adjt. gen. of the army to the Secty. to the Govt. of India, Mily. Depart.

Sir,—I have the honour, by desire of the C. in C., to forward for submission to H.E. the Gov. gen., the accompanying letter in original, No. 187, of the 12th ult., from Maj. gen. G. C. Whitlock, comdg. the Saugor F. D., with annexures, relating to an engagement with the rebels at Kentee, in Bundelcund, and I am to beg you will express Lord Clyde's approbation of the conduct of Brigdr. Faddy, and the troops engaged under his command.

3. His Lordship desires specially to recommend for favourable notice the conduct of Capt. Boileau, and the party of 2nd Sikh cav. under his command; also to express his approval of the services of Capt. Wright, commandant of the 2nd Sikh cav., as brought to notice by Maj. gen. Whitlock.

W. MAYHEW, Lieut. col.,

Adjt. gen. of the army.

Adjt. gen.'s office, Calcutta, April 16, 1859.

From Maj. gen. G. C. Whitlock, comdg. Saugor F.D., to Maj. gen. Sir R. W. Mansfield, K.C.B., Chief of the Staff with army hd. qrs.

Camp near Nagode, March 12, 1859.

Sir,—I had the honour to communicate to the Rt. Hon. the C. in C., in my letter No. 60, and dated 3rd March, to the address of the qr. mr. gen., my having detached every available soldier from this place, to try to fall in, if possible, with the rebels under Munzoor Ally and Runmutt Sing, who had committed two murders and other atrocities in this neighbourhood. I beg now to enclose a copy of a despatch from Brigdr. Faddy, who had the good fortune to encounter them in force at the village of Kentee. The prompt and decisive measures taken on this occasion by the brigadier, the gallantry with which that officer's orders were executed, call for the highest commendations; and I do indeed most cordially and warmly recommend to the special notice of his Lordship Brigdr. Faddy and those officers named in his despatch. A detach. of the A. trp. H.A. well merit the praise bestowed upon them by the brigdr. I well know the keen disappointment it must have been to them not to have brought their guns into action.

The columns under Lieut. Col. Oakes, H.M.'s 12th lancers; Maj. Chichester, H.M.'s 97th reg.; Maj. Middleton, of the 17th N. I.; Maj. Babington, of the 17th N. I., although not having met with the rebels, still performed the responsible duties allotted to them in the most satisfactory manner. Capt. Wright, comdg. the 2nd Sikh cav., and his gallant body have done their duty well. Capt. Wright has been on the constant move, and kept that part of the country entrusted to his care quite free from rebels. I have been in constant communication with Mr. Mayne, the Collector of Banda, and whose information again has been most useful to me. Brigdr. Faddy has recorded his sense of the services of Lieut.

Osborne, the political agent of Rewah, in enabling him to learn the movements of the rebels.

I would beg permission to mention, that the information that I have received from a valuable and intelligent officer, Mr. Cole, the deputy political agent at Nagode, was of the greatest assistance to me.

Comdg. Saugor F. D.

From Brigdr. P. P. Faddy, comdg. art. brig. and F. detach., Saugor F. D., to the Asst. adjt. gen., Saugor F. D., Nagode.

Camp Kentee, 5th March, 1859.

Sir,—On the 3rd inst. I reported my arrival at Rewah. I have now the honour to state that at 2 P.M. on that afternoon I marched for Simereah with the half A. trp. Madras H.A. and one squad. of Sikh cav., strength as per margin,* arriving there by 9 P.M.

2. Early on the morning of the 4th intelligence was received by Captain Osborne, the Political Agent, that the rebels had moved from their positions at Mynhna and Kuteheree with the intention of proceeding towards Myagurhee. Orders were sent off to Maj. McDonnell, 27th M.N.I., comdg. the inf. detachments at Rewah, to proceed immediately to Mungowah on the Mirzapore road, and there await orders, and I marched at 10.2 A.M. with H.A. and Sikhs towards Kentee. At four miles from camp I received intelligence that the rebels had been at a village about six miles ahead, and were then encamped at a village a short distance beyond. I pushed on a trp. of cav. to reconnoitre, following as rapidly as I could with the art. and remaining trp.

3. About three miles on we crossed the Tons River, a most difficult passage for the guns, and, three miles further on, met the River Beehur or Gogur, a branch of the Tons. Here we were delayed a considerable time, the usual ford at the village of Chachye being impassable for guns. Another ford was found half a mile lower down, by which we crossed, the artillery with excessive difficulty, being obliged to drag the guns up nearly a perpendicular bank by hand.

4. While the guns were crossing, I pushed on the cav. to Sirmoul, and shortly after had the gratification of hearing from Capt. Boileau, who commanded them, that the enemy were halted a short distance ahead of him.

5. As soon as the guns were over the river, I again pushed on at a sharp trot, and came up with the cav.

6. I moved on to the attack, the cav. on the right, and guns on the left, but was brought up by the Mahana Nuddee, a wide and rocky branch of the Tons River, with very steep banks.

7. The enemy were drawn up in position with this river on their front, flanked by the village of Kentee on their right, and a deep impassable nullah on their left.

8. On first approaching the river they seemed inclined to stand, but on the guns nearing them they moved off slowly towards the village.

9. I proceeded with the cav. across the Nuddee and up the bank of the nullah, which I crossed about quarter of a mile in rear of the enemy's first position, with the intention of keeping them in view till the guns could be brought up, the river and nullah forming almost an impracticable hindrance for guns.

10. Having crossed the nullah and got well in rear of their position, I brought my right shoulders forward, and halted in line to watch the enemy's movements. After a few minutes we observed the enemy advancing from the village to take possession of a tope in our point.

11. From the dense mass in which the enemy came on, I should estimate their numbers at from twelve to sixteen hundred men, including a few sowars.

12. On reconnoitring their position in the tope, it was observed the enemy were moving out and showed intention of coming down on the cav., but suddenly changing their direction, they moved off in a compact body to their left, apparently in the direction of Gurh. I immediately sent back an officer to the rear to bring up the guns with the utmost expedition, but by this time it was near four p.m., and no signs of the guns coming on, and fearing from the lateness of the hour I should be unable to inflict any punishment on the enemy were I to wait for them, I determined to attack with the cavalry, strength as per margin,* and accordingly ordered them to form up in line, and placing myself at their head, accompanied by Capt. Howlett, Lieuts. Ward and Shaw, I directed their comdg. officer, Capt. F. W. Boileau to charge; and from personal observation can testify to the dashing manner in which the squad, carried out my orders led by their gallant commander.

* 14th lt. drags., 50, under Lieut. Gowan; 71st high-land lt. inf., 80, under Dalgleish; 9th Bombay N.I., 70, under Capt. Tubbs; Mayne's horse, 50, under Lieut. Bradford; Gwalior camel corps, 170, under Capt. Templer; staff, Capt. Ramay, 71st, med. dept., Asst. surg. Broderick, Mayne's horse.

* Artillery—Capt. Henegan, Lieut. Anderson, Trp. qmr. Knox, 3 serg., 49 r. and f., 83 horses, two 6-pdr. guns, one 12 pdr. howr. 2nd Sikh cav.—Capt. Boileau, 6 native officers, 62 non-commissioned r. and f.

13. After a gallop of four hundred yards we crossed a high bank with a ditch on the other side, from behind which we were greeted with a heavy discharge of musketry, but this had no effect in checking the advance of the Sikhs, who plied their swords most vigorously and effectually, continuing the pursuit for about two miles, when I considered it prudent to recall them, and we rejoined the guns at about half-past five, just as they were dragging the last one across the nullah. I think the Maj. gen. will agree with me, that the dashing charge of so small a body of cav. against such superior numbers was a most gallant exploit, and reflects the greatest credit on the Sikh cav.

14. I cannot speak too highly of the manner in which the half A. trp. Madras H. A. overcame every difficulty and brought their guns over ground which had they not effected it, I should have considered impassable for art., and which requires to be seen to form a correct idea of the obstacles they surmounted. It is to me a matter of the deepest regret that after all their exertions they had not an opportunity of showing the enemy what metal they were made of; and I feel well assured that very few of the enemy would have escaped had this desirable point been effected. As it was one hundred and two bodies were counted dead on the field, most of whom were sepoys, and several wounded men have since been brought in.

15. Sixty stands of arms, nearly all percussion, one Enfield rifle, seventeen matchlocks and fifteen swords have been collected from the field, and the Sikh cav. have had the high honour of capturing the regimental colour of the late 30th B. N. I., also several articles, the property of the engineers who were lately murdered by those rebels, have been recovered.

18. I cannot speak too highly of the cheerfulness and alacrity with which all ranks of the small column under my command have undergone the fatigues of the severe marches from Nagode, a distance of 100 miles, which we have accomplished in sixty-nine hours, the last fifteen being across country at a trot and a canter.

19. I beg to bring to the favourable notice of the Maj. gen. the officers who acted on my staff, namely, Capt. A. Howlett, 17th M.N.I., dep. asst. gr. mr. gen.; Capt. C. H. Harrison, Madras art., brig. maj.; Lieut. Ward, Madras rifles, and Lieut. Shaw, Madras art., orderly officers, whose zeal and energy deserve every commendation, and my best thanks are also due to Capt. Henegan, comdg. the Sikhs.

20. I would also wish to bring to notice Dr. Abbott, of the Bengal Service, whose kindness and attention to the wounded has been unremitting.

21. I must not omit to mention that the whole of this success must be attributed to the excellent information afforded by W. Osborn, Esq., political agent of Rewah, to whom I beg to tender my sincere thanks.

22. I march this evening from Kentes to Gurh, where the infantry under Maj. McDonnell have been ordered to join, and where I hope Capt. Osborne will receive further intelligence, by which I shall be guided.

* Staff—Brigdr. Faddy, Capt. Howlett, Lieut. Ward. Cav.—1 officer, Capt. Boileau, 61 sabres.

23. Hoping that these movements will meet with the Maj. gen.'s approval,—I have, &c.,

P.S.—Since my despatch was written, Capt. Osborne has succeeded in gaining the following specific intelligence from some of the prisoners who were examined separately that Runmatt Sing is the C. in C. of the rebel army, and Mundroog Sing commander of the mutineers, who are men of the 2nd grenadiers, 7th, 11th, 30th, 38th, 40th, and 9rd regts. N.I., to the number of 200 men, and that Furzund Ally and Lopal Sing, with a party of fifty mounted men, keep half a mile in advance of the main body to reconnoitre.

Operations on the Grand Trunk Road.

No. 716 of 1859.—H. E. the Gov. gen. in Council has much satisfaction in publishing the following report, from Lieut. col. Turner, c.B., comdg. troops, Grand Trunk Road, of his movements against the rebels.

H. E. in Council concurs with the Rt. Hon. the C. in C. in the approbation expressed by his lordship.

From Lieut. H. W. Turner, comdg. troops, G. T. Road, to the Asst. adjt. gen., Benares.

Dehree Ghat, 15th April 1859.

Sir,—On the 6th inst. I had the honour to report for the information of the Maj. gen. comdg. the div., that at the first movement of the enemy into the Kymore Hills I detached the Benares police cav. with orders to proceed to Chundaree, nine miles south of Jehanabad; that I moved myself with the inf. into the hills, and, crossing the front of the enemy's line of march, turned him upon Manchee, in Mirzapore; that I then descended to the plains by the Kotah Ghat, and directing the detachment of the Loodianah regt. to take post at Rhotas, and that of the Indian nav. brig. at Mehree Ghat, marched upon Jehanabad with the detach. of H.M.'s 77th regt., intending to effect a junction with the 100 men of the 2nd batt. of the 60th at Mohunea, and operate with them against the enemy.

That enemy, having been met and roughly handled by the Mirzapore troops, again turned northwards along the Kurumnasse, and descending the Ramghur Ghat marched upon Chydepore.

Mr. Bingham, the deputy magistrate there, having been apprized of the movement, sent an express to the cav. to move to his assistance, and barricading his residence, made arrangements to defend it; the enemy, however, finding him prepared, declined attacking, and moved eastwards along the foot of the hills to Bognanpore.

The deputy magistrate of Sasseram having kindly placed at my disposal forty of the Sasseram Sebundy levy, under Isserie Sing, their sub-lieut. (an efficient and able native officer), I attached this party to the police cav., under Lieut. Stafford, at Chundaree, who, on receiving Mr. Bingham's application for assistance, marched with his whole force at five p.m., and falling in with a party of the enemy, directed the sub-lieut. with his infantry to attack them.

Annexed is Lieut. Stafford's report of this operation:—

On the 7th inst. I directed the detach. of the 2nd batt. of the 60th to move from Mohunea to Bhubbooa, eight miles south, but the officer commanding having received information that the enemy was making for the Grand Trunk Road, returned to Mohunea the same evening with the police cav., who had also received similar information; they were, however, too late, as the enemy had already crossed and gone north.

No information of any description having reached me from the road police, Mr. Bingham, or the cav., I felt satisfied that the enemy must have crossed the Trunk-road in small bodies, and, therefore, marched with the detach. as per margin* upon Kochus, directing the cav. and 2nd 60th to follow me with all possible expedition.

Arrived at Kurnach, within a few miles of Kochus, I learned that the enemy was at Toorkeehim, a village three miles to the west. I turned to attack him, but on reaching it found that he had marched at 5 a.m. It was then ten. Halting for the men to breakfast, I pushed on again at 2 p.m. to Sukkosa, where the enemy had turned eastward in the direction of Dinareh. I followed till dark and until I had lost all intelligence of him, and then halted to allow the men to get their dinners.

In this manner I continued the pursuit of the enemy for the next three days, via Kochus, Dinareh, Bhaupore, Munneepore, Nawa Nagger, Kesuth, and Waina, towards the Ganges, never allowing him to halt for more than a few hours, and straining every nerve to push him upon the Arrah police force, which I had been informed was on the line between Domraon and Peeroo.

In this I was partly successful; Mr. Herschel, the magistrate, having since informed me that he was enabled to compel one party to lay down their arms, and that the other had been attacked in crossing the Ganges and lost upwards of eighty killed.

The police cav., as directed, overtook me near Toorkee, but seeing that it would be impossible for the detachment of the 2nd 60th to do so, I directed it to return and remain at Jehanabad.

All occasion for the services of these troops having now passed away, I have ordered them to return to Benares by the usual marches.

In conclusion, I beg you will call the attention of the Maj. gen. commanding to the willingness with which the troops exerted themselves to keep close to the enemy and drive him at once from the district, distressed as they were by the scorching hot wind.

H. W. TURNER, Lieut. col.
Comdg. troops, G. T. Road.

P.S.—I have to add that the result of the attack upon the enemy by Isserie Sing, as reported by Mr. Bingham, has been four tatoos, six muskets, three hatchlocks, some tulwars, and two cloth European coats which have since been found in the jungle.

From Lieut. P. P. L. Stafford, comdg. the cav. with Lieut. col. Turner, c.B., and 2nd in com. Benares Mil. Police, to Lieut. col. Turner, c.B., comdg. H.M.'s Forces, G. T. Road, Sasseram, dated Sasseram, April, 1859.

Sir,—Having received a letter from Mr. Bingham, the deputy magistrate at Chydepore, on the 6th inst., at five o'clock p.m., stating that the rebels (two hundred strong) were coming down the Ramghur Ghat, and would most likely attack his house at Chydepore, I at once marched off to his assistance. After having marched about twelve miles, I fell in with a party of rebels (sixty strong) at the foot of the Kynoor Hills, three miles east of Ramghur Ghat. Spreading my cav. into the plains, the inf. as per margin† under my command attacked the enemy about midnight, and, after two or three hours' sharp firing, drove them back upon the hills, capturing two horses and two muskets, and killing and wounding twelve of the enemy. As it was quite dark when I withdrew the inf., in order to proceed to Chydepore, no doubt more arms remained unseen by us on the ground. Jemadar Ellie Bux Khan, the senior native jemadar, with the inf., I wish to bring to your notice for promotion, for the determined way in which he followed the enemy up. I rejoice to say that I have no killed or wounded on my side on that occasion.

MR. W. R. MOORE ON FEMALE INFANTICIDE.

AMONG the latest "Selections from the Records of Government, N.W. Provinces," is a very able and interesting Report on Female Infanticide in the Benares Division, drawn up by the late Mr. W. R. Moore, of the Bengal Civil Service. This active and intelligent officer, who perished in the discharge of his duty during the recent disturbances, was selected by the late Mr. Colvin for the responsible office of Special Commissioner for the Suppression of Female Infanticide. The report he had previously submitted on that atrocious practice had won for him this honourable distinction, and there is no doubt that his zeal, judgment, and ability fully justified the choice made by the Lieutenant-Governor.

The existence of female infanticide among the Rajpoots had long been known to the authorities, and preventive measures of various kinds had been adopted, but without producing the desired effect. The evil, indeed, had been considerably diminished, and in some quarters it had nearly died out; but still there was reason to believe that in many districts it continued unabated. Among the Chowhans, for instance, there were 1,488 girls alive in 1851, whereas in 1843 there was not one; and in one hundred villages in the Agra district the number of female children increased 75 per cent. between May, 1851, and January, 1854. On the other hand, in thirty villages of Pergunnah Oonglee, in Jounpoor, there were, in 1855, only 379 girls to 1,054 boys, in two villages of Pergunnah Muriahoo, 65 boys to 6 girls, and in six villages of Pergunnah Kerakut 214 boys to 36 girls. It was clear that such a monstrous disproportion could only have been caused by foul means, and accordingly the Government of the N. W. Provinces determined to make full and careful inquiries into the causes and extent of such an unnatural crime. A cursory investigation soon proved that in the fifth division there were 308 villages in which the practice prevailed to greater or less degree, and 62 in which not a single female child existed under six years of age. The causes which combined to produce such an utter violation of all natural feeling are stated by Mr. Moore to arise chiefly from superstition and pride. Female children are regarded by many Rajpoot families as unlucky, and, therefore, they gladly disembarass themselves of the source of future woes and annoyance. Some, however, "continue the custom simply because their father and grandfather did so before them; others, because, though quite able to give their daughters good dowries, they consider the marriage of a daughter betokens inferiority, or because they have a repugnance to the terms sala (brother-in-law) and soosur (father-in-law). Many, again, especially those of low rank, practice it because, seeing that Rajpoots of high standing and position are addicted to it, they fancy such a course of proceeding will cause them to be considered of consequence. In the majority of cases, the inability to give such dowries as they consider fitting is no doubt the cause."

A miserable, selfish, vulgar pride sufficed to turn the parent's hand against the life of his new-born child. If a large dowry were not forthcoming, the Rajpoot father must accept for his daughter a husband from an inferior family, and rather than stoop to this indignity he preferred that she should perish at her very birth. The actual deed is usually perpetrated by the attendant midwife or nurse, or even by one of the aged female members of the family, and the corpse of the innocent victim is then consigned to the earth on the bank of a nullah, or a stream. If the child be not destroyed before it has drawn nourishment from the mother, its life is never assailed by direct means, though it may purposely be exposed to the extremes of heat and cold, and utterly neglected, so that death is certain to ensue, sooner or later. Among the lower classes of Rajpoots the custom has lately been introduced of selling their daughters, "that is to say, of taking money for them instead of giving money with them." If not a magnanimous or very affectionate proceeding, this innovation has at least the advantage of securing the lives of these unfortunate beings.

Having fully ascertained the prevalence of this abominable crime, which is supposed to have existed for at least two centuries, Mr. Moore energetically applied himself to its suppression. With this view, he induced the leading men of many villages and communities to sign a paper regulating the expenses attendant on marriages and betrothals. He also suggested a series of police measures, necessarily inquisitorial, but which were only to be directed against villages open to suspicion. There seems no reason to doubt that had his life been preserved, he would have succeeded in achieving the end he proposed. As it is, we must hope that his bright example will stimulate his successor to walk in his steps, and complete the good work so ably inaugurated.

"LE JEU NE VAUT PAS LA CHANDELLE."

Is it true, then, that the stake is not worthy of the play? Has it come to this that England is no longer able to maintain and guard her vast possessions in the four seas? Was M. Ledru-Rollin really inspired by the genius of Truth when he spoke of the decline and fall of the British empire? It cannot be so. No man believes that such is the case. We all feel our virility, our individuality, too strongly and earnestly to doubt ourselves, or distrust our neighbours, or question the vigorous vitality of our dear old fatherland. And yet there are among us croakers who affect to despair of the future, and take gloomy views as to the maintenance of British supremacy in the East. These desponding individuals pretend that it is impossible to find soldiers in sufficient numbers to keep up an army of 80,000 Europeans in India, and at the same time provide efficiently for the defence of our own shores. We are a commercial people, a nation boutiquière. Our "mission" is to manufacture goods for the rest of the world, and not to waste our energies on wholesale homicide. It is not for us, then, to enter the lists of fame against the warlike states of Continental Europe, whose pride it is to wield the weapons which we are the most skilled to forge. Let us, therefore, be wise in time, and take warning from the fate of the frog who, in vain imitation of the ox, swelled out only to its own miserable destruction. The question is, shall we sacrifice the whole loaf, rather than secure one-half? Shall we lose all, rather than content ourselves with the choicest part?

Having thus set forth their preamble, these most un-English alarmists proceed to chalk out the course of policy they would have our statesmen to pursue. Here, indeed, they are not unanimous. According to one school, the system of annexation should not only cease, but at once be replaced by one of restoration. The Nizam, for instance, would recover the ceded districts, the King of Oude would be re-seated on his throne, the province of Kumaon would revert to the kingdom of Nepal. The result of these and such-like measures would be to bind these princes by the most enduring gratitude to the "magnanimous and valorous" British Government. Jealous of one another, they would have only feelings of respect and admiration for the great people who could so gracefully temper irresistible force with generosity and moderation. A small army, therefore, of Europeans would amply suffice to preserve the balance of power, and assert the suzerainty of the sovereign of England.

Another class of politicians, however, go still further, and insist upon the termination of our military occupation of the Indian peninsula. Let us return, say they, to the original system of fortified factories, modified by the terrible experience of the last hundred years. An absolute rule of non-interference with the affairs of native princes would avert the necessity for armed intervention and the recommencement of a career of conquest. As for America, or the other nations of Europe, there would be nothing to fear from them so long as we held in our own hands the chief ports, and the mouths of the principal rivers.

Many of our readers, perhaps, will be disposed to suspect us of having conjured up these monsters of the imagination in order to afford ourselves the gratification of demolishing them. Unhappily, in so thinking, they would do us injustice. It is a melancholy fact that both the suggestions we have just alluded to, are gravely propounded and supported by persons of education and influence.

We shall not stop to consider whether the annexation policy was a sound one or otherwise, for it was never properly carried out. To be successful, it was indispensable that for every increase of territory there should be a corresponding augmentation of the European army—and this essential condition was never attended to by the home authorities. But, be this as it may, no one really acquainted with the natives of India, could seriously recommend a retrogressive step. A backward movement would certainly be construed into an acknowledgment of weakness, and all sorts of troubles and annoyances would speedily ensue. Besides, the interposition of these independent states would preclude the possibility of completing any great lines of road, or rail, or water communication. Special treaties, indeed, might guarantee the neutrality of such public works, but these very treaties would contain the fruitful germs of discord and future hostilities. Then, if it be granted that a smaller European force would be sufficient—which is at least problematical—in what manner is the difficulty of maintaining even that smaller force got over, if the best lands are restored to their former rulers and the revenue proportionately diminished?

The second scheme is yet more easily disposed of. Admitting, for the sake of argument, that our commerce with India would not materially suffer, and that the lion's share would still fall to the lot of the ancient seakings, it may nevertheless be asked how the safe transit of goods in the interior is to be provided for? If a native trader undertake to deliver at a certain port a stipulated amount of produce, and fail to do so from any cause, how is he to be punished for his bad faith, or protected in his desire to act aright? And if British adventurers undertake to construct public works for native princes, or to develop the general resources of the country, what measures are to be adopted to secure their persons and property from outrage and spoliation? Is it not evident that in a short time the work of conquest would begin afresh?

Instead of these ignoble doubts of the stability of the British empire and the elasticity of its resources, it were wiser and more patriotic to err in the other extreme, and presume too much. The runner who thinks of checking his speed has already lost his impetus—the army that looks to the rear is already half beaten—the nation that distrusts itself is already in its decline. Who is there that does not sympathise with the generous fanfare of the ancient Romans, when they bid against one another for the ground on which the victorious Hannibal was encamped? They, at least, would never have dreamed of abdicating half their empire because a treacherous ally was awaiting an opportunity to attack them. The Indian peninsula is an integral portion of the British empire, and can only be given up when that empire is crumbling to decay.

REORGANIZATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

JOHN POLLARD WILLOUGHBY, Esq., late of the Bombay Civil Service, and now member of the Council of India, was of opinion that a local European army was quite essential, especially in the artillery arm; the supreme control of H.M.'s forces in India should be vested in the Governor-General, and not in any authority at home; the power of the Governor-General should be augmented, and India treated as a distinct empire; the E. I. Company, always very anxious to increase their European force, but encountered much opposition from the home Government; in 1853 they were allowed to have 20,000 foot and 4,000 cavalry, but they could not raise the additional regiments without the sanction of the President of the Board of Control; in 1857 two urgent requests were made, at the instance of the Governor-General, to raise three European regiments, but it was refused; it is of great consequence to have a local force acquainted with the language, customs, and prejudices of the natives; whatever jealousies may have existed between the two European services were chiefly owing to the disadvantages under which the local army laboured, but these have now been removed; on financial grounds, a local force preferable, owing to the great expense of reliefs; officers of the line are, comparatively, birds of passage; they do not, and would not, go to India for a life service; seasoned troops certainly stand the wear and tear of a campaign better than "green" troops; the interference of the C. in C. at home would be prejudicial; the Governor Gen. is sufficiently checked by the Secretary of State for India, and a third interposing power might do harm; the local authority is in the best position to judge of the qualifications of officers, and should be allowed to select them for important commands; the health of H.M.'s regiments improves after two or three years' residence; the expense of sending out troops to India between June, 1857, and November, 1858, was £2,148,336; about 60,000 men were sent out; by the overland route every man costs £40, by steamer round the Cape about £33, and by sailing vessel about £13; a Government transport service would be dearer than by contract, and for part of the year the ships would be unemployed; the exchange system not desirable because it would prevent a man from concentrating his entire energies upon an Indian career.

Colonel J. T. Leslie, C.B., being further examined, gave evidence as to the recruiting system; within the previous seventeen months 9,900 men of all arms had been sent out to the local force; since the disturbances there had been no limit to the recruiting; recruits have lately been sent out without being drilled; they are merely clothed and cleaned; recruits are attested to serve in H.M.'s "Indian" military forces, but nothing is said about exclusive service in India; the understanding is, that they belong to an army whose head-quarters are in India; a man for the Company's service costs about £16 before he embarks from the depot; recruits going out are furnished with a sea-kit, and receive 19s. 10d. on landing in India; men ought to be kept at the depot four months; the establishment must be greatly enlarged, as at present there is barrack-room for only 1,200 men; the staff consists of a commandant, a second in command, a paymaster who is effective as a duty officer, an adjutant, two subalterns, a surgeon, and an assistant surgeon, with a large number of very efficient staff sergeants, chiefly from pensioners of H.M.'s service.

Charles Raikes, Esq., B.C.S., declined to answer questions on exclusively military matters; with regard to the police force, he would have it organised and drilled, and armed with a light musket; some of the best men should be employed as detectives; the only other police should be the village chokeedars; would have three European officers to every regiment of police—a regiment mustering 800 men; there should be one-third European soldiers to hold the country, "supposing the artillery to be exceedingly strong;" the commandant of a police corps should be ex-officio a magistrate; the police would be quite as dangerous as sepoy in the event of another outbreak; there should be 100 horse and 400 foot to each district; this would give for the entire Bengal Presidency about 8,100 horse and 32,400 foot; it would be very advantageous if the burkundazes, or constabulary force, were also converted into a military police; this would raise the entire force to about 52,000 men; the regular sepoy might be of the same number, and also the Europeans; the native army should be organized like the Guides, a different nationality for each company; the old Burkundaz system should be abolished; there should be a superintendent general of police for the N. W. Provinces, another for the Punjab, and a third for Bengal.

The Earl of Ellenborough, G.C.B., was clearly of opinion that there should be a local and a moveable European force in India, of equal strength; would have a reserve of five regiments at Calcutta always ready for embarkation to any point, and in like manner a body of 5,000 men at Chatham always ready to embark for India; the local force to consist of infantry, cavalry, and artillery; there will be no real tranquillity in India during the present generation—"we must look forward to a state of disquiet and apprehension of war as long as we live;" "the best education for every civil servant in India is service in the army, especially in the native army;" no advantage in dividing the Bengal army; "the relations between the local army of India and the Secretary of State and the Council should be precisely the relations which existed before between the army of India, the Board of Control, and the Court of Directors;" the Governor general "must have the same authority over the C. in C. in India which the civil government here has over the C. in C. in England;" the Royal army should look to the Horse Guards as now, and the local army to the Secretary of State for India; "a knowledge of the language is enormous in real practical value; I recollect that the late Sir Charles Napier and myself happened to come to the same conclusion as to its value. I said 10,000 men—he said, 'that is my impression, too; I would rather be able to speak the language than have 10,000 men;' the only fault to be found with the Company's Europeans was that they were sent out rather too young; no necessity for the local army to be placed under the Horse Guards, quite the contrary; there should be only one code for the two services; it would be well if the Governor General, like Lord Wellesley, were also Captain General, to prevent any possible collision between the highest authorities; draughts for the local army should be organised in this country; the C. in C. in England should have no power to employ the recruits at Warley, except within the island, and only in a case of emergency; the depot to remain under the control of the Council for India; officers of the line and of the local army should all be equally eligible for appointments if equally qualified; the Duke of Wellington said that "the English army in India came nearer his idea of what the Roman legions were than any troops which he had ever seen in his life;" "as an army, there was no army superior to the English army in India."

Major general Sir Charles Yorke, G.C.B., was next examined, but his evidence merely went to prove that the C. in C. in this country exercises very little power, beyond a general supervision, over the Queen's troops in India.

E. F. Elliott, Esq., Chief Officer of the Madras Police, then gave much valuable information on the subject of a new police system for the Madras Presidency, but scarcely bearing upon the question of army organization.

Colonel R. B. Wood, C.B., Secretary to the Commission, offered various suggestions for the amalgamation of the two European services, but too complicated to be carried into practice; the C. in C. in India should be merely the chief military adviser of the Governor General; the C. in C. in Bombay and Madras would communicate directly with the Horse Guards; in matters of detail the C. in C. in each of those Presidencies should be independent of the C. in C. in Bengal, but the last should be paramount on active service.

Colonel H. M. Durand, C.B., was the last witness who appeared before the Commissioners. In explanation of evidence previously given, Colonel Durand stated, as his opinion, that a reasonable amount of respect should always be paid to the claims of seniority, as it serves as a security against favouritism; would give the native troops a good musket, but not the Enfield rifle; would do away with native courts-martial, and have them composed entirely of European officers; the period of enlistment should be for ten years, and pension to depend on good conduct, and not as a matter of right.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A PREMATURE SONG OF VICTORY.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—Whoever, at home or abroad, may mourn the downfall of the Tory Ministry, and Lord Stanley's descent from his "high estate" of Secretary for India, we may be sure there is one pretty large body in this country, at least, who will not at all regret it: I mean the retired field-officers of the (late) East India Company's Artillery and Engineers, whose claims to the same privileges as their retired brethren in those branches of the English army were so unceremoniously, not to say flippantly, rejected the other day, without even the pretence of reason or right. For who could divine what the above-mentioned young lord meant by technical and professional objections to the measure, in his reply to the question put to him in April last, in his place in Parliament? Was ever a plain, straightforward inquiry so shirked and so evaded? Was ever a reply so mystified? Something was said about further explanations; but they have never appeared, and no wonder! Does it not seem quite absurd, as well as unjust, after assimilating the two services (now but one indeed) so completely, as regards the effective ranks—and that at a great expense,—to stop short of perfecting the resemblance, when its carrying out would not cost the country a farthing! I must own I have been surprised at the seeming apathy of the majority of those most concerned, since the late Government's contemptuous refusal of their undoubted rights was made known to the country. Some of them, however, who have friends in high places, may possibly have been pushing the thing in a quiet way, especially since the change of ministry; and let us hope that Sir Chas. Wood himself, seeing the incongruity and injustice of the existing state of things, will at once recommend to her Majesty the complete equalisation of the British and Indian Ordnance Departments, as well in their retired as effective branches. It must be done some day, and the delay itself is a hardship; for the oldest veterans, who would most benefit by the operation of the rule, must soon be going off the scene, as some already have done since the privilege was bestowed on the royal officers. With thanks for former favours, I remain, sir, your obedient servant,

A LIEUT.-COLONEL, but claiming to be Maj. Gen. E.I. Retd. List.

P.S.—I gave some idea in my letter of the 25th March last (see Indian Mail of 31st March) of the alterations it would immediately occasion in our Retired Lists; showing that it would promote about thirty-five general and field officers (some double), and improve the dates of five more. No very great task, therefore, for the officials at the India House, or War Office, to adjust the altered lists for the Gazette.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

COMPENSATION FOR LOSSES IN THE INDIAN MUTINY.

MR. W. VANSITTART asked the Secretary of State for India whether the report from the Government of India respecting compensation for losses sustained during the late mutiny had been received; and if so, whether it was his intention to lay such report on the table of the House.

Sir C. Wood said a report had been received from India, but the whole subject would have to come before the House. Nothing final on the subject could, however, at present be decided on.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

MR. BRIGHT wished to ask the Secretary for India whether he was able to tell the House when he should be able to bring forward the question of Indian finance, and also if he would lay upon the table of the House the latest despatches received from India on the subject. He believed the noble lord, the member for Lynn, adopted that course, and gave the House to understand that it would be followed for the future. It would be well to have the papers laid upon the table as soon as possible, that they might be rendered available before the discussion was taken.

Sir C. Wood said that the papers he had received would be laid before the House that very day. As to the time when the financial affairs of India would be presented to the House, he begged to say that the Chancellor of the Exchequer must take precedence with the general financial statement; but as soon as that was decided he (Sir C. Wood) would bring on Indian finance at the earliest opportunity, though, owing to the uncertainty, it was impossible for him to fix a day.

THE INDIAN ARMY.

MR. H. BAILLIE called attention to the report of the commissioners appointed to inquire into the organisation of the Indian army. He observed that this was a matter which involved the efficiency of her Majesty's army in this country as well as in India, and ought to receive the serious consideration of the House in the present state of political affairs. An opinion was expressed in the report that henceforth an army of not less than eighty thousand European troops should be permanently retained in our Indian empire. Now, there would be much difficulty, in his opinion, in maintaining such an army in India in time of war. The force now in that country was about 85,000 men; but the consequence had been that, in spite of all our efforts, we had not been able to raise in this country the number of men voted by Parliament last year by 10,000, and we had been obliged to call out 25,000 militia to do the duty of regular troops: so that the army was deficient 35,000 men. The question was, could we with voluntary enlistment raise and maintain so large an army as to allow of a permanent force of 80,000 men being kept in India, with due regard to the wants of our numerous colonies and the exigencies of the mother country in the event of war? He inquired whether the Secretary of State for India intended to bring this question before the House.

MR. VANSITTART could not agree with the hon. gentleman that this country was not sufficient to maintain 80,000 European troops in India. We had already 85,000 troops, independent of which there were there 25,000 troops of the East India Company. He had read the report of the commissioners with great interest. It appeared that they were unanimous on one point—namely, the necessity of maintaining a force of 80,000 troops in India. The commissioners, however, were not agreed as to whether it should be a local force, or that it should be one forming part and parcel of the regular army. He was of opinion that the force should be composed partly of Royal troops and partly of troops raised expressly for service in India. He was aware that there were symptoms of disaffection between the old East India force and the local troops; but that arose from a statement or a remark made last year by the noble viscount at the head of the Government, that the services of the European troops of the Company would not be insisted upon, and if they chose they might be discharged; but with regard to the Queen's troops there would be no change made. When that statement reached Calcutta those words were taken down by some pettifogging attorney there, who openly and warmly commented upon them. He (Mr. Vansittart) thought at the time that such language was rather indiscreet by the noble viscount. He saw no difficulty whatever in the recruiting of this force. Instead of proportioning the forces in the way recommended, he should say that there ought to be three natives to two Europeans. That would give us a force of 80,000 Europeans and 120,000 natives. He would reduce the force of sepoy as low as possible. That would give us a total of 200,000, which would be amply sufficient to meet all requirements. He concurred, generally, in the recommendation of Sir C. Trevelyan relating to the employment of an effective police force, and the arrangements respecting our fortifications there.

Sir C. Wood replied to Mr. Baillie, but in a very subdued and confidential tone. The result seemed to be that the present Government had not had time to consider a subject of so much difficulty and importance.

LORD STANLEY observed that the commissioners had given their opinion in very guarded terms. The only point on which they expressed a decided opinion was that the number of European troops in India must for the future be greater than before the insurrection. He for one did not attach much weight to any conjecture made beforehand as to the exact number of those troops which it might be necessary to have in that country some years hence. The same remark applied to the proportion necessary to be maintained between the native troops and the European, the solution of which would greatly depend on the working of the military police in India. He did not believe that either here or in Calcutta the Government would be in a position to pronounce a decided and accurate opinion on that point till they saw how the system worked over a considerable period of time. But there was one point on which he wished to express an opinion, as the question had been raised. He meant that on which the commissioners did not conclusively express an opinion, namely, whether the European force should be exclusively a local force or part of the general force of the line. He was convinced that it was a matter not only of expediency but almost of necessity, that that force should remain, as it was at present, to a great extent local. He defended that view on the ground of economy, and he defended it on the ground of efficiency. By such a system they kept down the great expenses of transports, and they had men accustomed to the climate. The latter was a very important consideration taken in connection with the fact that the greatest mortality was amongst the fresh arrivals. Then they could not expect officers, who were mere birds of passage, to acquire that knowledge of the country which would render their services in a civil capacity serviceable to the local Government. He did not know how the civil administration of India could be carried on if they deprived the Governor General of the advantage which he derived from the assistance of some thousands of educated men who knew the language of the country and the habits of the natives, and who looked forward to permanent employment in the civil service.

Col. SYKES remarked that before the mutiny the number of European troops kept in India was 45,000, a number greater than the revenues of the country were sufficient to afford. The commissioners proposed that the number in future should be 80,000. How would the revenues of India maintain those? In his opinion 50,000 was as much as the Indian finances would justify, or as was necessary for the maintenance of British rule, provided that the country was governed as it ought to be.

Sir DE LACY EVANS expressed his opinion that a local artillery force was especially indispensable.

ORGANIZATION OF THE INDIAN ARMY.

MR. BUXTON called the attention of the house to that portion of the report of the commissioners on the organization of the Indian army which refers to the amount of force to be maintained in future, and contended that it contemplated a force to be maintained to the extent of 400,000 men, involving an expenditure by no means in accordance with the finances of India. He also thought there was enormous risk in placing arms in the hands of 300,000 natives.

Lord STANLEY said he did not believe it was possible to lay down any rule as to the amount of force which would be required in India. At present the native force was very large, but that was owing to the exceptional state of affairs in India at the moment, and gave no criterion as to what might be requisite in future.

Sir E. PERRY contended that the report was most unsatisfactory, and did not touch the real difficulties of the case.

Colonel SYKES contended that 50,000 British troops would be amply sufficient for India, and the finances of the country would not bear a heavier burden.

After some observations from Mr. Hadfield, Mr. Smollett, and Mr. Vansittart,

Mr. BRIGHT said that at the present moment this Indian question was of more importance than either that of the Reform Bill or the Budget, and therefore it was that he wished to press it strongly on the Secretary for India.

Sir C. WOOD expressed his anxiety to bring the whole financial state of India before the house, and he hoped the requisite accounts would be ready to be placed on the table on Thursday.

The abstract of her Majesty's Indian forces, Bombay presidency, shows (not including Queen's troops, but including 4,970 undisciplined men)—total: artillery, 4,495; cavalry, 7,150; infantry, 65,828. Grand total, 77,473.

PENSIONS ON LORD CLIVE'S FUND.—From a return to the House of Lords issued on Tuesday last, it appears that last year in England there were 101 officers, 2,785 men, and 774 widows receiving pensions from Lord Clive's Fund, to the amount of £80,062.

KNIGHTHOOD OF THE RECORDER OF SINGAPORE.—(Buckingham Palace, June 30).—The Queen has been pleased to confer the honour of knighthood upon Richard Bolton McCausland, Esq., Recorder of Singapore.

TRADE WITH INDIA AND CHINA.—The East India and China Association have issued their usual comparative statement of the number of vessels, British and foreign, entered inwards and cleared outwards, from and to places within the limits of the East India Company's charter, from the 1st of January to the 30th June, 1858 and 1859. With respect to the statistics of vessels entered inwards, the port of London figures for a decrease of one vessel, with an increase of 29,005 tonnage, the difference between 422 vessels, with a capacity of 255,479 tons in 1858, and 421 vessels, with a capacity of 285,085 tons in 1859. In the case of Liverpool the decrease is 22 vessels, with 12,054 tons, the difference between 145 vessels and 125,752 tons in 1858, and 123 vessels, with 113,688 tons in 1859. Bristol figures for an increase of seven vessels and 4,582 tons, the number of arrivals in 1858 having been 13 vessels, with 5,078 tons, and in 1859, 20 vessels, with 9,660 tons. The return from the Clyde shows an increase of three vessels and 1,255 tons, the difference between 11 vessels and 4,722 tons in 1858, and 14 vessels, with 5,977 tons in 1859. The net decrease is, therefore, 13 vessels, with an increase of 23,378 tons; the arrivals in 1858 having been 591 vessels with 391,031 tons, and 578 vessels with 414,409 tons in 1859. The increase in arrivals has been from Bombay and New South Wales, and the decline in vessels from Calcutta, Madras, Ceylon, and the South Seas. By the statistics of vessels entered outwards it appears that in the case of the port of London there has been an increase of 20 vessels, but a decrease of 5,068 tons, the number of departures in 1858 having been 403 vessels, with 268,024 tons, and in 1859, 423 vessels, with 262,956 tons. Liverpool is returned for a decline of 23 vessels, and 26,891 tons, the difference between 253 vessels with a capacity of 213,974 tons in 1858, and 230 vessels with a capacity of 187,083 tons in 1859. The port of Bristol shows a decrease of two vessels and 2,100 tons, the difference between four vessels with 3,177 tons in 1858, and two vessels with 987 tons in 1859. In the case of the Clyde a decrease is presented of six vessels and 4,047 tons, the departures in 1858 having been 48 vessels with 30,724 tons, and in 1859, 54 vessels with 34,771 tons. The net increase is consequently one vessel, and a decrease of 30,102 tons, the departures having been in 1858, 708 vessels with a capacity of 515,899 tons, and 709 vessels with a capacity of 485,797 tons in 1859. The principal increase has been in vessels which sailed for Bombay, China, and Singapore, but this has been counterbalanced for the decrease of vessels destined for Calcutta, Ceylon, Australia, Java, and Sumatra.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS

PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided: no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS

is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer,

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

Lowness of Spirits, Hypochondria, Insanity.—These formidable diseases are usually caused by a disordered condition of one or more of the digestive organs, and most deplorably commence at the meridian of life. The distressing symptoms need no enumeration; they are known in some degree to the wisest and best of mankind, as well as the weakest. Whenever the liver, stomach, and kidneys are roused, the morbid feelings and ideas vanish. To effect this happy result, nothing more is needed than friction over those organs with Holloway's Ointment, whilst his Pills are likewise taken. The change of thought is immediate, happy, and lasting. Those whom these medicines have cured confess that their influence over the mind is magical.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT

from the Second Edition (page 188) of the Translation of the Pharmacopoeia of the Royal College of Physicians of London, by Dr. G. F. Collier, published by Longman and Co.:—

"It is no small defect in this compilation (speaking of the Pharmacopoeia) that we have no purgative mass but what contains aloes; yet we know that hemorrhoidal persons cannot bear aloes, except it be in the form of COCKLE'S PILLS, which chiefly consist of aloes, scammony, and colocynth, which, I think, are formed in a sort of compound extract, the acidity of which is obviated, I suspect, by an alkaline process, and by a fourth ingredient (unknown to me) of an aromatic tonic nature. I think no better and no worse of it for its being a patent medicine. I look at it as an article of commerce and domestic convenience, and do not hesitate to say it is the best made pill in the kingdom; a muscular purge, a mucous purge, and a hydrogogue purge combined, and their effects properly controlled by a dirigent and corrigent. That it does not commonly produce hemorrhoids, like most aloetic pills, I attribute to its being thoroughly soluble, so that no undissolved particles adhere to the mucous membrane."

NEWBERRY'S COD LIVER OIL CAKES.

"We have examined a specimen of gingerbread made by Messrs. Newberry—each cake containing a teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil. The gingerbread is extremely light and pleasant, the flavour of the oil being completely covered. This seems likely to prove a very useful mode of administering Cod Liver Oil to children, and to others who are nauseated by the offensive odour and flavour of the Oil as generally taken."—Medical Times, 12th Feb., 1859. From THE HOME NEWS, March 3, 1859.

"Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. have just brought out the first number of a monthly periodical, called THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND SOCIAL SCIENCE. We confess that until we read this first number we had no very clear impression that we were in any need of any addition to our already heavily-laden monthly literature; but a careful examination of the contents of the work has satisfied us that its projectors are justified in the undertaking. If they cannot be said, in the slang of the book-market, to have supplied a want, there is little doubt that they will create an audience. The best brief notion we can give of the publication is to say that it promises to become to English readers what the Revue des deux Mondes is to French, with an indefinitely wider latitude of topics and freedom of opinion. The critical element predominates, but it admits of the essay in its pure form, and is sufficiently elastic in both departments to embrace every variety of subject of current or permanent interest. In politics it ranges with the progressive section of the Conservative party, which would preserve the constitution, by adapting it from time to time to the necessities of successive epochs. The soundness of its judgment on the question of Parliamentary Reform is displayed in the ablest and most thoroughly constitutional article that has yet appeared in any of our periodicals on this subject; an article which acquires additional value from the fact that it foreshadowed the whole scheme of the Government two days before the Reform Bill was brought forward. In social laws and morals, the object of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW will be to note the progress, and collect the results, of all movements tending towards the advancement or elucidation of those vague philosophical investigations which are clustered under the general head of social science. Good earnest is given of the resources at the command of the writers, and of the practical manner in which they are prepared to deal with them, in an excellent article on the 'Homeless Poor.' There are also capital papers upon 'Russia' and 'Indian Finance'; and some admirable literary articles. This last department is pervaded by a spirit of independence, and a high scholarly tone which, we trust, 'custom' may not impair. Let us have at least one English periodical, written with integrity and good taste, to which we may confidently look for fearless and honest opinions. The UNIVERSAL REVIEW promises to realise these expectations, and we heartily wish it the success it deserves."

7. PHILOSOPHY AS AN ELEMENT OF CULTURE.

9. THE SESSION.

From THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, April 9, 1859.

"The second number of this new candidate for public favour is, unquestionably, an improvement on the first. This is in itself a merit to be appreciated, as it augurs that the organisation on which the future of the review depends has within it the limits of that completeness which can alone ensure stability. We have only space to direct attention to the articles on 'Philosophy as an Element of Culture,' on 'Realistic Novelists,' and 'Christianity in India,' but we venture to say that the whole number is well worthy of thoughtful consideration. In this addition to our periodical literature there is every mark of careful conduct, and there is every reason in the present number for a prediction that it is destined not merely to an existence, but to a useful and enduring life."

No. 3 (MAY) CONTAINS:—

1. THE LATE REV. F. W. ROBERTSON.
2. WOMEN.—NEITHER NICE NOR WISE.
3. THE RESOURCES OF INDIA AND ITS COLONIZATION.

4. THE PHILOSOPHY OF FABULOUS AGES.
5. MICHELET ON LOVE.
6. FRENCH DRAMATISTS AND ENGLISH ADAPTERS.

7. THE LAST OF THE MOGULS.
8. HOW SHALL WE VOTE?
9. THE SESSION.
10. BOOKS ON OUR TABLE.

From THE PRESS, May 14, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW contains seven articles, which, some for one reason, some for another, merit the attention of the public. The article on Mr. Robertson derives virtue from the excellence of its subject, but is nicely written as well. 'Women—neither Nice nor Wise,' is a protest against the smoking-clubbed, shooting-galleried, red-trousered style of young lady, of whom it is very truly said that all their efforts for the emancipation of women are in reality intended for the enslavement of men.' 'The Resources of India, and its Colonization,' has only one fault—it is greatly too short; and we confess if it had been extended over the space which 'The Philosophy of Fabulous Ages' now occupies, we should not have regretted the exchange. 'Michelet on Love' is a review of which it is difficult to determine the merit without having read with great attention the book of which it treats. The writer seems so entirely to agree with his author as to have abandoned any idea of criticising him in the literal sense of the word, so he gives us instead a very compact and clever abstract of his theory, expressed with great felicity, and enlivened by occasional touches of real humour. The writer of 'French Dramatists and English Adapters' took a good grasp of his subject, but laid it down again before he had squeezed it dry. His article contains a good deal, but might have contained more. For instance, he takes up some half-dozen hypotheses to account for the decline of the drama, turns them over, and leaves them, saying it is not his business to settle which is true. But we think this is just what his business was. The article is written in so agreeable a style, and evinces so much latent ability, that we regret more was not made of it. 'The Last of the Moguls,' though a little florid in diction, is well and strikingly executed. The article called 'How shall we vote?' after a summary of the policy of Lord Derby's Administration, proceeds to the delivery of a strong philippic against the Opposition leaders, and especially Lord John Russell. We observe this article has been reprinted in a separate form, and we trust may have contributed to blow away some of those delusions which the public mind has been carefully fed by the partisans of the 'Bedfords.' With the writer's remarks on Lord Palmerston we do not so fully agree. His lordship has performed great services, and what he may have done in a moment of irritation should not be too harshly criticised. The customary 'Session' and 'Books upon our Table,' conclude a very good number."

No. 4 (JUNE) CONTAINS:—

1. MAN AND HIS DWELLING PLACE.
2. A REVIEWER'S PARCEL.
3. THE STORY OF MICROSCOPICAL DISCOVERY.
4. AUSTRIANS AND SLAVONIANS.

5. RESOURCES OF INDIA.—COLONIZATION, PART II.
6. THE ROYAL ACADEMY AND THE WATER-COLOUR EXHIBITIONS.

7. POPULAR HISTORY.—KNIGHT'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND.
8. THE FRENCH IN ITALY—A NATIONAL AND TRADITIONAL POLICY.
9. BOOKS ON OUR TABLE.

From THE GLOBE, June 3, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW is, as usual, distinguished by discussing subjects of deeper and more permanent interest than are commonly entered on in monthly publications. The first article, on a book entitled 'Man and his Dwelling Place,' affords the writer an opportunity of professing his acceptance of the Idealistic theory of Bishop Berkeley, which, though supported by reasoning that it is admitted cannot be refuted, has hitherto made so little progress with mankind in general, chiefly on account of the misapprehension that has prevailed, or, perhaps, we may say, which does prevail, respecting it—a misapprehension that, doubtless, the writer is correct in ascribing to people picking up their notions of it at second hand, instead of resorting to the exposition of Berkeley himself. The article entitled 'A Reviewer's Parcel' is a lament over the degeneracy of the present age, especially made manifest by the vast number of new books published every month. Every one has a vague desire to go behind the scenes of a theatre, and by admitting, or pretending to admit, the public behind the scenes of reviewing, the writer of the article in question has produced a taking and readable paper, with which those who know little or nothing about the subject of which it treats will probably be best pleased. 'The Story of Microscopical Discovery' is an interesting article in which the progress of microscopical science is traced from its commencement to now. 'The Resources of India and its Colonization,' an article the first part of which appeared last month, is continued in the present number by a writer who has evidently devoted to the subject considerable care, pains, and research. An article on the picture exhibitions, a political article entitled 'The French in Italy,' 'Austria and the Slavonians,' with other papers, fill up the number."

No. 5 (JULY) CONTAINS:—

1. MODERN DIVORCE.
2. WHAT WILL HE DO WITH IT?
3. THE EARLY DAYS OF CHARLES FOX.

4. THE CORNISH DRAMA.
5. ILLOGICAL GEOLOGY.
6. OUT OF THE DEPTHS.

7. PARTIES, NATURAL AND ARTIFICIAL.
8. LOUIS NAPOLEON—PRINCE AND EMPEROR.
9. THE SESSION.

From THE ILLUSTRATED TIMES, July 9, 1859.

"The new periodical, THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW, fully maintains its excellent start, and may be regarded as one of the cleverest exponents of sound, sensible, unbiased views among the periodical press. Nothing can be fairer than the spirit pervading two of the articles of the new number, the one on the Divorce Court, the other (in the shape of a review of a bad novel, 'Out of the Depths') on the Delicate Question; though, while giving the writer of the first-named pages every credit for sincerity, we deny the truth of his denunciation of a measure which undoubtedly has given the means of relief to scores of persons weighed down and lost here and hereafter by their tie to a worthless person. As regards the second article, every man of sense must go hand in hand with the reviewer, more especially in that portion of his paper where he deprecates the publication of such books as useless and demoralising. Other very readable essays are—a review of 'What will he do with it?' in which Bulwer is very honestly, and withal very favourably, judged; a pleasant paper on 'Charles James Fox'; an erudite dissertation on Mr. Norris's 'Erudite Book'; 'The Ancient Cornish Drama'; and three political articles, the best written of which is devoted to Louis Napoleon, and closes in the following words—'He said of himself, Je suis citoyen avant d'être Bonaparte. He might more truly have said that he was a political fanatic rather than a great prince; that his genius was a monomania; that his idea of internal order is that of a wolf who would muzzle the dog, and that his faith in foreign powers is that of a burglar in possession of a ticket-of-leave who surveys at his leisure his neighbour's premises, and chooses his own time to break in and seize the spoils."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 18th June is barren of startling incidents. The Nana and his followers are still prowling about the jungles on the frontiers of Nepaul, destitute of everything but life. The Begum, one would suppose, might be induced to surrender by an unconditional promise of pardon, and her defection would sensibly weaken what little strength now remains to the fugitive rebels. In any case it is unworthy of the British Government to have even the appearance of waging war on a woman, however great the cause she may have given for its displeasure.

A commencement has at last been made towards the reduction of the native forces, at present so formidable to the State. The Loodianah and Ferozepore regiments, the Sirmoor, Kumaon, and Nusseree battalions, the Ghoorka regiment, and the Kumaon levy, are at once to be reduced to ten companies of seventy men each, while the irregular levies are to be brought down to 600 men each, and the irregular cavalry to 420. This measure is to be extended to Madras and Bombay, and will have the effect of diminishing the native army by one-fourth.

It is also reported that the Bengal military police, mustering 10,000 men, will be done away with, and it is even possible that the same fate awaits the military police in Oude, who have contrived to make themselves exceedingly unpopular. On the other hand, there is some probability of a European militia being formed, in compliance with instructions from the late Secretary of State for India. All European residents, it is said, are to be registered, drilled, and armed with the Enfield rifle, and so organised as to be able to act together on any sudden emergency with the least possible delay.

As the system of double government in the Public Works Department has been found not to answer, it is proposed by the new Lieutenant Governor of Bengal to separate that department from the Bengal Secretariat. The office of Chief Engineer will be abolished, and three Superintending Engineers will be appointed in his stead, each to superintend an extensive circle. The embankments will continue under the control of their special Superintendent.

The model Governor of Madras has been going a little too fast even for his staunch admirer, the editor of the Athenæum. The head and front of his Excellency's offence appears to have been that he presumed to write disrespectfully of the petit jurors in that presidency. On several recent occasions, both in Bengal and Madras, European juries have exhibited as much reluctance to convict a fellow-countryman, notwithstanding the evidence, as would be displayed by an Irish jury with regard to a Roman Catholic prisoner. Sir Charles has consequently penned some very strong remarks upon the subject, which are pronounced by the Athenæum to be both severe and unjust. Severe they certainly are, but their injustice is not equally apparent.

From Hong Kong we learn that the English and French Plenipotentiaries have at length started for Peking, whither they will be escorted by strong body-guards. It was rumoured that the Russian Government had offered its assistance in putting down the rebellion, and likewise that the members of the Russian Embassy at Peking had been murdered by the Chinese; but there is no sufficient reason for believing either report, although the former is far from improbable.

The remains of Commissioner Yeh have been received at Canton with every outward manifestation of respect on the part of the Chinese officials.

It is stated in the city that Sir Charles Wood, in making his Indian Financial Statement this evening, will move for power to raise twenty million sterling in this country on the guarantee of the India revenue. It is supposed, however, that that amount will be distributed over a period of three years.

A CLASS OF LANDOWNERS IN INDIA.

The rebellion has shown us so clearly the necessity of raising up a class in the country whose interests are identified with our own, that we attach extreme importance to the creation of freeholds in India, by the commutation of the land-tax. No surer means can be devised against the recurrence of the dangers we have passed through, than an imitation of the policy of our predecessors in matters connected with the land. There are two ways in which we may raise up a class of landowners in India, whose interests shall be identified with our own. The first of these was long since suggested by Sir John Malcolm, and well would it have been for us had it been adopted. Sir John Malcolm insisted upon the propriety of our rewarding long and meritorious service of natives in our employ, by grants of rent-free lands, after the manner of our predecessors. The considerations which recommend such a proposal to us are as numerous as they are important; while we may confer these grants with positive benefit to ourselves, as well as to the recipient. The custom of granting waste lands in India to men of substance, upon condition of their bringing them into cultivation, is probably as old as any of the institutions of the country; and the advantage with which we might liberally pursue the same plan are obvious in every light but that of short-sighted cupidity. No more healthful reward could be conferred, at the completion of their term of service, upon our revenue and judicial officers who had distinguished themselves, than an Enam—and when we say an Enam, we mean what the Mahrattas mean,—a freehold of unoccupied lands in the districts, to which the railways are now opening access. We have long enough tried the squeezing process in the country, and it is time that we adopted one based upon more generous and sounder principles. If we cannot admit these men to the highest appointments in our administrative system, we may confer other and substantial benefits upon them, in part compensation for the unavoidable wrong which our rule does them. By directing our efforts patiently and generously to the growth of a landed proprietary of our own creation, we may do something to atone for the injury the country has sustained at our hands, in the extinction of its old aristocracy. The education which these classes will have received in our colleges and in our service might fairly be expected to make them the nucleus, wherever located in the Mofussil, of a new order of things, and a higher civilisation. Instead of destroying the Inamdars of the Deccan, we have the strongest conviction that true policy and finance alike point to the augmentation of the class, by transferring into it men who understand the general integrity of our purposes, and would be ready to lay down their lives in defence of the existing order of things as the guarantee of their own status. It is somewhat humiliating to have, in the same breath, to fortify the suggestions of philanthropy by the cold reasonings of expediency. It is, however, the case, that to be generous in this matter is consistent with the truest policy, expediency, and prudence. Let us suppose that the short-sighted calculations of cupidity are still allowed to prevail against these reasonings, can the reader sum up our gains? Of what value to the country are the vast tracts of waste and unoccupied land over which the Government holds the land tax? When are they to be brought into cultivation, and by whom? Wiser than yourselves, your predecessors did not wait for the expansion of population to reclaim the waste, but redeemed it from the jungle by conferring upon it an owner. We cannot do better than imitate them, for they were wiser than we. We are glad to observe that Sir Charles Trevelyan has ordered a return of all the waste lands in the Madras Presidency; and we trust it is with the object of turning them to account in some such way as we have now suggested.—Bombay Times.

A NATIVE LEADER ON THE MUTINIES.

We are enabled to publish one of the most interesting contributions to the history of the mutinies which have yet appeared. It is the statement of a leading mutineer, a man till recently high in the confidence of the Begum, and who surrendered under the amnesty. The disclosures were made not in the way of evidence, but in the course of long conversations with an European friend, and we have every reason to believe their authenticity. There may indeed be persons yet alive who can confirm the incident of the theft of the box from within the Lucknow garrison. The evidence, it will be seen, bears heavily against the Nepaulese, but more in appearance than reality. The Nepaulese Government is Hindoo, and had the British power been extinguished, would of course have fought for its own hand. The fact, however, must not be forgotten when Lord Canning is blamed, as he has been by ourselves, for refusing the first offer of the hillmen. On the question of the Oude proclamation it will be seen the deponent is entirely hostile to the Governor General. He at least understood that paper in its literal sense, as implying the forfeiture of all property.

"I do not think any particular cause can be assigned for the rebellion—something of the sort has been expected for the last three years. The Soonees, who are more captious on matters of religion than we Sheeahs are, had an indistinct conviction that the Government would interfere with their beliefs, but few had an idea that the army would have broken out en masse; when the army did mutiny, there was a disappointment felt, and a fear that existing hopes of the extinction of the English would be frustrated, for who could trust in troops who in one brief moment had swerved from the allegiance of 100 years?

"Our first cause for regret was the early capture of Cawnpore; that fact caused the Nepaulese to waver; a little later and our negotiations would have been completed.

"To the people of Oude the first relief of Lucknow was the boldest act the English have ever undertaken, and from the date of the entry into the Baillie Guard all hopes of overcoming the garrison except by starvation were given up. Before that a thousand devices were proposed, digested and rejected, but no decision could be come to for overpowering the garrison. It was proposed to attack at night, but many hinted we should shoot our own men and thus increase the confusion. The Parsees (a tribe in Oude) offered to poison the wells, but it was known the English doctors had an antidote. The Parsees proposed to enter the garrison at night, and shoot with their arrows the Europeans while asleep. On one occasion two Parsees entered the garrison and thoroughly inspected it; they discovered the position of the magazine, commissariat, &c. One of the Parsees brought out a little box he had removed from off a table, the other returned with a bullet in his thigh from having gone too close to an European sentry.

"The evacuation of the Baillie Guard paralysed all with amazement; we could see that the women and children were being removed, but it never for one instant entered our heads that the English would leave it; it was so unlike them, and the bombardment of the previous days induced us to believe the Kaisur Bagh would be carried. We never had hopes of turning the English out of the Alum Bagh, though we knew you were only 4,000 strong of all arms.

"We firmly believed the Kaisur Bagh would not fall under a year's fighting; nor did we despond when we viewed from the minarets of our mosques the splendid array of artillery and the large European force. People believed there was some trickery ("Jadoo") in the sudden way the English obtained an entrance to the Kaisur Bagh. The fall of the city would have closed the campaign but for the proclamation forfeiting all lands. That paper gave us hopes, as we all knew the landholders would cling to the Begum as long as they could. But if that was cheering the amnesty was as much disheartening. On its reaching Boondee, I for one took leave of the Begum. I saw her rule was undermined. Throughout the rebellion the sepoys were virtually the rulers; so far as they permitted it, some semblance of a government, a throne, and a king was maintained. They prohibited the slaughter of kine; even in my village (purely Mahomedan) no one dared to kill a cow. When the Muezzin called to prayers, it was in fear and trembling that a bullet from a sepoy's musket would stop his devotion.

"The Sikhs wavered at first, but on the whole they have behaved right well to the English.

"The Nepaulese are not worth much to you; even at the capture of Lucknow they sent us messages in case the English were overcome, and we had great hopes in them.

"We always fancied and had heard that the English won their battles through spies, but now we know you really can fight. We had no idea you could bring out such reinforcements; anyhow, there cannot be many more 'goras' left in England.

"The highlanders are fine soldiers; how is it they bleed less from a sword wound than any other European?

"Do not trust a native army a second time; even your police correspond to this hour with the rebels.

"The minds of the people are still very unsettled, and will remain so for five years till 1280 Hijree, when it is predicted there will be great changes.

"If you have to send regiments to England on account of the war, excitement will be produced, for all eyes are turned in that direction.

"Few people know that an envoy came to the Begum from Herat."

That remark about spies is precisely the one made by the Sikhs when they surrendered to General Gilbert. They also had imagined that the Europeans would "outwit them somehow," but could do no nothing at close quarters. The 6th Regiment of the Gwalior Contingent after their defeat rushed into the capital, declaring not as a fact but as a new wonder that they could not contend against the British. The same idea, prevalent till the mutinies all over India, evidently influenced the defenders of Lucknow. The immense army brought against them never shook their faith in the Kaisur Bagh. The opinion, we believe, was produced by the incessant flattery it had been the custom of generals and governors to pour upon the sepoys. They who, since 1845, have never behaved even decently in the field, received all honour; while the Europeans, who did the work, were coldly commended for their gallantry.

One statement seems to need a little inquiry, though it is supported by some antecedent facts. The deponent declares that the Hindoos were completely dominant in Oude—that he dared not kill cows even in a Mussulman village. It was proved in 1856 that the Hindoos were far the stronger and braver race in Oude, but anything like dominance seems almost incredible in the face of a fanatically Mahomedan dynasty.—Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CUTTACK.—A correspondent of the Englishman states that an unusually large number of buffaloes has been sacrificed by the Khonds to Dhurney, the Meriah deity, with all the ceremonies and pomp which used to attend a child-sacrifice. As the sacrifice of buffaloes was allowed only as a substitute for the Meriah, on condition that the rites attending it should be forever abolished, the Khonds have acted contrary to their agreement with Government. A register has been prepared of all male and female children under six years of age in the infanticidal tribes. The increase in the number of female children, and their appearance in villages where scarcely one of that sex used to be seen, show that infanticide has received a very great check.

ITALIAN PATRIOTS IN INDIA.—Signor Cassella, the Consul general of Sardinia in Calcutta, has issued a patriotic address "to the Italians residing in India, and those who desire the independence of Italy." He asks contributions to the Central Committee formed at Turin to render pecuniary aid to the families of the soldiers of Italy "who perhaps at this moment are shedding their blood for her, and thereby prove to the world that the desire for the independence of Italy is unanimous with all the children of that chosen land, towards which are directed vows not less passionate from those who inhabit the western hemisphere than from those residing on the banks of the Ganges."

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT.—A correspondent of a Calcutta journal states that the Postmaster-general of Madras has been quietly making a tour among the several offices in his jurisdiction, and remedying abuses. He unexpectedly visited the deputy postmaster of Calicut, found the letter-delivering peons' accounts in arrears, fined him five rupees, and degraded him to a lower post. It is energy like this which Bengal and the North West Provinces need. The arrangements of the Calcutta post-office may be perfect, but the complaints we not unfrequently receive from the Mofussil show that Asiatic sloth, stupidity, and unconsciousness still flourish.

FORT WILLIAM.—The Calcutta Gazette publishes an order of the Governor General abolishing the office of town and fort major, from the date on which it may be vacated by the present incumbent. A brigadier of the first class will be appointed to the office as commandant of Fort William and of the troops at Calcutta, and also of the European infantry depots at Dum-Dum, Chinsurah, and Raneeungee. He will have a brigade major, a deputy-assistant quarter-master general (heretofore designated disembarkation officer), and a garrison quarter-master, as staff officers. A great anomaly is thus abolished, and a more centralised system for the superintendence of troops at and near the Presidency introduced.

A SWARM OF LOCUSTS.—The Bombay Times calls attention to the army of Peons, Burkundazes, and Chupprassees, who are attached to the various public offices of the Indian governments. They are estimated at 200,000 men, and their average pay is certainly not under Rs. 5 a month. We might dispense with, at least, a third of their number, and remove the temptation of officials to employ them in purely personal and domestic duties. The saving would be upwards of three and a half lakhs a month.

THE SILKWORM AT UMRITSUR.—At the last meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India Mr. Cope, of Umritsur, presented twenty silk cocoons from the annual worm which is now successfully reared in the Punjab, not only in the sub-mountain districts, but at a considerable distance from the foot of the hills. The cocoons were from the celebrated Kashmir stock, which is entirely free from any symptoms of disease. Count Freschi reported on them as almost equal to the finest of Italy. Mr. Cope attributes their beauty to the excellence of the leaves obtained from the trees about Umritsur. The small skein reeled from them was valued at from 22s. to 23s. per pound.

SHIPWRECK.—The Englishman mentions the wreck of the French ship Lormont, in the Bay of Bengal, about thirty miles south of Ganjam, on the 31st May last. The crew of seventeen left the wreck in three boats, but only two of the officers have as yet been heard of. They found refuge in False Point Light House.

RESTORATION OF ORDER.—A traveller on the Grand Trunk Road writes from Burhee to the Englishman that he was attacked near the Dunwa Dak Bungalow by a large party of armed men, and had a narrow escape. It was near this place that the Bhange carts were recently plundered.

THE "ALMA" OF BELFAST.—The remaining portion of the crew of the Alma were rescued on the 11th of June. They were found in one of the Saugor Houses of Refuge. The long boat in which they left the wreck had been broken to pieces. Thus all have been saved, except the Captain, his wife and child, the Pilot and Leadsman, and a lady passenger.

MR. COX, MASTER PILOT, who was in charge of the mail steamer Nemesis when she came into collision with the Cape of Good Hope in the Hooghly on the 23rd March last, was arraigned before a marine court on a charge of disobedience of orders and inattentive or careless performance of his duty. The jury returned a verdict of "Not Guilty." The trial of the pilot of the other steamer has yet to take place.

DOMESTIC SERVANTS.—John Groser, steward of Government House, appeared recently in the Calcutta police-court to prosecute two native servants for the theft of a bed sheet. One of them is the head tindal, and in charge of the linen. At their houses were found a large collection of bed and table linen and glass, and amongst them the missing article. They were each sentenced to three months' hard labour. Europeans have such a dislike to prosecute native servants in the courts for roguery that it is well when Government House sets the example. The peculation of servants in European houses, continued steadily on a small scale from week to week, is enormous. Dismissal is generally the only punishment that follows discovery, and the thief finds no difficulty in entering another service. If higher pay would secure honesty among a most degraded class of Asiatics, few Europeans would decline to give it.

A ROW AMONG THE LOLLIPOPS.—The Hindoo Patriot draws a picture of what he terms "the mutiny in the sweetmeat shop" for the benefit of his European readers. The milkmen of Calcutta have been hitherto in the habit of selling to the Moyrahs, or sweetmeat-makers, a preparation of milk and the acid of tamarinds called dooyee; these, having a chemical affinity for each other, solidify. The substance is sold wrapped in sheets of cloth under the name of ch'anah; the Moyrahs pound and fuse it with sugar, sweet almonds and cardamums, and so produce shondesh, "the most palatable eatable on earth." Hitherto the ch'anah has been weighed with cloth and water and so sold, but now the sweetmeat-makers demand that the substance be weighed separately. The milkmen take their stand on old custom, and will not yield, and our contemporary backs them. Meanwhile, "all Bengallee Baboos, whose palate has not been disorganized by beefsteak," are in despair for their favourite sugar-plum. The leaders of the two castes have threatened with excommunication all who dare to yield.

THE AGRICULTURAL AND HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OF INDIA, at their last meeting, resolved to recommend that the surplus of the Dalhousie Testimonial Fund be appropriated for public gardens in Calcutta. The erection of a Dalhousie Hall, to contain the existing museums of the Asiatic Society and Geological Survey as the basis of an imperial museum, is much more in accordance with the pursuits of the members of the Agricultural Society, whose collection might be placed in the same building as an industrial museum. The Botanical Garden already meets every scientific purpose, and a mere public garden, for purposes of recreation, could be added to the Hall. The imperial museum would be a boon to India, the public garden be purely local in its benefits.

CHRISTIAN DAROGAHS.—The Hurkaru hears that Government have approved of the proposition of the inspector of gaols in the lower provinces to put Christians in charge of the district gaols instead of native darogahs. It will not be difficult at present to secure strong muscular Europeans, but we fear that it will be difficult to get men with sufficient education and self-restraint of the class required.

BEERBLOOM.—Letters received from various districts state that rebels were crossing over into the Santhal hills in great numbers, and a feeling of uneasiness had arisen in consequence. It would appear further that the population are rather favourable to the rebels than otherwise. A Government executive engineer engaged on a new road now being constructed, was told by a Mahomedan zemindar, that he did not like the road to come through his property, and that he would oppose it in every way in his power. The zemindar further sent word to the Government officer, and told him that if he did not strike his tents and be off he would be attacked that night by seventy latials armed and ready for the purpose. The zemindar said, too, that he knew what sort of sahibs they were; that he was not afraid of them; that the engineer might kill one or two of the villagers, but what could he ultimately do against such a number; and they would not be punished for killing him! This was reported to the magistrate of Beerbloom, followed up by the intimation that in case anything of the kind threatened took place, the engineer would be compelled in self-defence to fire upon the villagers, and a request was made to have steps taken for protection against the assault. The worthy magistrate of Beerbloom replied that he could not do anything, and advised the engineer to be cautious in acting up to his intentions, for in case he should kill any of the natives he would be liable to be indicted for murder in the Supreme Court.—Engineers' Journal.

ROB ROY BURJORE SING.—The Delhi Gazette states that the rebels who recently beat off our police at Lahar, in the Jaloun district, were a section of a force of 3,000, headed by one Burjore Sing. He is a thorough Rob Roy, and confines himself to the disaffected district about Chandeyree and the west side of the Bundelcund.

CAPTAIN SPEKE.—At the last meeting of the Asiatic Society of Bengal a letter was read from Captain Speke, detailing the course of his African expedition with Captain Burton. Starting from opposite Zanzibar, they followed up the Kinjani river to the eastern Ghauts of Africa, about 100 miles from the sea. Thence they ascended from 250 feet, crossing great mountain belts of granite, until the central plateau was reached, and Lake Tanganzika, which is described as very beautiful, and depressed about half the height of the plateau. Thence going due north, Captain Speke discovered the "water of waters, Nyanza Lake, a broad expansive sheet, at an elevation of 3,800 feet, extending certainly five degrees or six degrees to the northward, and about ninety miles broad. The waters are delicious, and are said to contain a great variety of fish. The whole of its southern extremity is thickly populated, thickly cattle, and thickly cultivated. Iron is found in great abundance, and a little north of the line coffee is grown to any extent." He believes it to be the true source of the Nile. Cotton and rice grow very well over the plateau, and frankincense and other gums are abundant. There is little animal life. The people are mild savages.

RATHER COOL.—The Phoenix hears on good authority that a deputation was recently sent by the Sikkim Rajah to wait upon the Government at the Presidency. Its object was to demand the payment periodically to himself of Rs. 12,000, or the restoration of the territory confiscated from him in 1850. Government considered the demand not only inadmissible, but the mode in which it was presented insolent and offensive. This, it has been directed, is to be pointed out to the Rajah, and no further communications from him are to be received on any subject whatever until he apologises.

BENGAL MILITARY POLICE.—The new Lieutenant-governor is beginning to reap some of the fruits springing from seed sown by his predecessor. The establishment of police battalions composed of a conglomeration of native levies, in plainer words, the re-construction of a native army, was the pet project of Mr. Halliday, and he appears to have set about it, save the mark, with his usual foresight. The mode adopted to carry out the wishes of the late sub-viceroy has resulted in the present holder of that office being compelled to place on record his disapproval of the measure individually and the apprehension he feels as a Lieutenant-governor. Nor are we surprised at this when we find the "serpent's teeth sown" by Mr. Halliday "have sprung up in the shape of 10,000 armed men, over whom Mr. Grant finds their officers have no kind of military control at all as officers, and therefore, not being amenable to military law, the men are, in fact, only amenable to punishment for offences against the municipal law, which must be examined into, and proved before, and awarded by a magistrate. Major Rattray is of the same opinion. These destined-to-be-famous police battalions, for whom the naval brigades have been sacrificed, and the officering of which offered so many snug little appointments (and which appointments were all filled before Mr. Halliday withdrew the light of his countenance), this embryo army, it appears, if not decidedly illegal and touching strongly upon the disarming act, is in its construction, in the power of control possessed over it, decidedly unsafe and dangerous, and affords another instance of the wisdom which has directed the councils of Her Majesty's province of Bengal.—Englishman.

TEA IN DACCA.—The Dacca News speaks favourably of the tea cultivated in Dacca, and considers it equal in flavour to the Cachar tea. In appearance, our contemporary observes, it cannot be distinguished from the ordinary black China tea. The plants are from the indigenous seed of the Assam and Cachar tea. Those on lower ground died, but those on higher elevations, and under the shade of trees, were healthy and vigorous. Our contemporary believes that the tea plants could be made to grow in dry and shady spots in the plains of Bengal, as well as in Cachar and Assam.

MR. E. T. BEAUVAIS.—The Hurkaru understands that on the recommendation of Sir Robert Hamilton, Bart., the resident at Indore, and of the Officiating Director General of post-offices in India, the Governor General in Council has authorised the grant of a donation of rupees 500 to Mr. E. T. Beauvais, in recognition of some valuable services rendered by him to the State during the early part of the mutiny, when deputed to effect some revision of the post offices along the line from Agra to Bombay. Mr. Beauvais opened the communication between the residency and Sir Hugh Rose's camp in Central India. His property was plundered by the mutineers, and his family and children were murdered. Mr. Beauvais is now in England, and the local authorities at Bombay have been instructed to pay the donation to an accredited agent. We think that considering the important services rendered by Mr. Beauvais on the occasion, he has not been adequately rewarded by the Government.

THE POST-OFFICE PEONS who were lately committed for having in their possession several thousands of undelivered native letters have been discharged, as the Advocate-general was of opinion that the clause of the new Post-office Act, under which they were indicted, was not applicable to their case.

SMALL CAUSE COURT.—Mr. Mathew Uvedale, the deputy clerk of the Small Cause Court, having retired on a good service pension after having served Government thirty-five years, Mr. J. J. Tucker, officiating clerk to the first judge, has been promoted to the vacancy, and Mr. C. Y. C. Bolst, record-keeper of the Court, has been appointed head of the Levy and Distraint Department. The subordinate vacancies caused by these arrangements have been filled up by promotions in the office. The selections were made by Mr. Wylie after much consideration of the respective merits and claims of the different officers, and will materially improve the strength and efficiency of the Clerk's Department.

A NARROW ESCAPE.—The Dacca News of the 11th June mentions that the collector's bungalow at Sylhet "was struck by lightning and burnt." The collector was asleep at the time the house was struck, and the electric fluid melted his watch.

POST-OFFICE APPOINTMENTS.—In conformity with the recommendation of the late post-office commissioners, and the minute left by Mr. Riddell, the officiating director-general of post-offices in India, has recommended to the Government that the office of the deputy-postmaster-general be abolished, and that Mr. Garrett be permanently appointed as postmaster of Calcutta, on a salary of Rs. 700 per mensem, with an additional sum of Rs. 100, on account of the bullock train, and that Mr. Garrett should draw his salary from the date on which Mr. Dove's appointment was gazetted.

NO ACCOUNTING FOR TASTES.—A rather unusual occurrence is reported in the Punjab journals—the marriage of an English lady to a rajah! The affair is thus remarked upon by a correspondent of an up-country paper:—"I see you have noticed in your Domestic Occurrences the marriage of Rajah Runder Sing of Kup-poorhulla to Miss Hodges. I understand that it has been agreed by both parties that in case there should be any issue from this marriage, such issue shall be baptised by a minister and be brought up as Christians; and be sent to England to be educated there, and married to Christians. These conditions have been agreed to by the Rajah, and they cannot be departed from; but, judging from the Rajah's antecedents, I do not wonder if he becomes at a future period himself a Christian; he does not belong to that class of Hindostan noted for bigotry, but appears to be an enlightened native nobleman, upright and honest in all his transactions with those in the little principality over which he rules, and sees everything in a clear and liberal light. May the issue of this marriage prosper under God's blessing. Besides, I understand a dowry of Rs. 50,000 has been settled on the bride by the Rajah, and some lands set apart for any issue they may be blessed with hereafter." The Rajah, it may be recollected, assisted us with his contingent at Delhi and Lucknow.

DOCTOR MOUAT has in preparation for the press a work on the Andamans. The work, we believe, speaks favourably of the inhabitants, whom the Doctor had many opportunities of seeing and judging on his recent visit to the islands. We are sadly in want of a good work on the Andamans, and this one of the Doctor's will doubtless supply the desideratum.

"FUNERAL BAKED MEATS."—The Hurkaru has been informed that a dinner is about to be given in the town hall to the men and officers of the defunct Volunteer Guards. The proposal was first set on foot by one of the most influential merchants of Calcutta, and has received the signatures of many loyal and respectable citizens, including some of the highest members of Government.

LALA REWTEERAM TEWARÉE.—The Government of India have recently sanctioned the bestowal on Lala Rewteeram Tewaree, the commissariat contractor and purchasing agent of the Presidency division, of a confiscated village in the Cawnpore district, yielding an annual jumma of Rs. 2,000, in consideration of his past services, especially those rendered at a time of unexampled difficulty, 1857, when the commissariat was taxed to the utmost. His chief work at this critical period was to supply bread, rations, bedding, &c., to the European regiments that poured in here, and were sent up to the Upper Provinces since the mutiny broke out. Rewteeram Tewaree has been connected with the commissariat for a long time, and it is said that he has well deserved this signal mark of approbation from the Government.

AN "EARTH-BUBBLE."—One not versed in occult sciences naturally feels at a loss to account for mysterious occurrences. We (Lucknow Herald) have just heard of an extraordinary instance where a dream was suddenly transformed into a reality. The correctness of the story may be implicitly relied on. A very worthy follower of Esculapius, not many nights ago, was dreaming that his hands were steeped in blood—that he was cutting and hacking away (not however surgically) at some one whom he had fancied had come to slay him, and starting up suddenly, made a bolt clean out of his bed, through curtains and all, to seize the fellow, when what should he see in reality but a man, apparently a native, dressed in khakee, making off with all his might from near the head of his cot. He ran after him, calling out at the full pitch of his voice—stop, stop; but the villain would not so much as even look round, and most strange to say that, though the chase was over the public road, not a policeman nor watchman was within hail. The good doctor, who had gone out without his slippers, had his feet pretty well lacerated by the gravel. Up to the present hour the circumstance remains a mystery, but it is not the less a reality.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, June 18).—In exports the produce market has shown increased animation as regards salt-petre and oil seeds, and the demands, especially for the latter, have been so active that, if supplies had not come in freely, the prices would have advanced considerably. Rau Sik has been very sparingly dealt in; stocks of native sorts, both here and in the interior, are heavy, and dealers would gladly dispose of them at a considerable reduction. Silk Piece Goods are little in demand. Sugar has been in limited operation, and is being offered at reduced prices. Rice, of low quality table, has been engaged for Great Britain; but the demand is not general. Jute, Lac Dye, and Shell Lac in very limited operation. Hides of good quality are scarce, and competed for at extreme prices.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, June 18).—In imports Mule Twist was in a very favourable position at the date of our last report, and prices had slightly gone up; since last week, however, there has been less disposition to purchase, and prices have again fallen. Coloured Yarns, especially Turkey Red, are in fair demand. Chintzes of fast colour are in moderate request. Grey Shirtings, of medium quality, 6½ to 7½, in good demand for local requirements. Grey Madapolams, stocks almost none; prices slightly improved. Grey Jaconets are in fair request. Grey Mulls are scarcely sought for at present. White and figured Shirtings are in limited request. White Mulls are in very moderate request. The Metal market continues inactive.

MADRAS.

THE STORY OF AN ENAM.

Once upon a time, as they say in the fairy story-books, there arose a terrible mutiny among the native soldiers of the Company's army. It burst out at Vellore; every one knows how the sepoys rose and murdered their officers, and how the gallant Gillespie dashed in at the head of a handful of cavalry and put the mutineers down. Now if this outbreak had not been opposed at the moment, there is no saying to what awful catastrophe it might have led, or whether the scenes of havoc and murder which it has fallen to our lot to witness in the last two years might not have been anticipated in the time of our fathers. There existed, beyond all dispute, a very serious ill-feeling in the minds of far more of the coast army than those who chanced to be quartered at Vellore at the particular moment. Whole regiments were in correspondence with one another; secret meetings were held among the men at sundry stations; and to use a hacknied but very expressive phrase, the Europeans in India stood, without suspecting it, on the edge of a volcano. It was at this crisis that two faithful Subadars of two regiments stationed at the same spot became aware of the intentions and the plans of their men. They did not halt or hesitate; they had eaten the Company's salt, and it was not for them to prove traitors to their employers. Straightway they proceeded to their officers, they disclosed the mutiny that was hatching; and, it may be, that by this act, fraught with danger to themselves, these two noble soldiers saved the British empire in India. It was of course impossible for them to remain in the regiments after such a display. Their lives would not have been worth a week's or even an hour's purchase. They accordingly retired; and the Government of the day, to mark its sense of their eminent services, bestowed on each, in his native district, Tinnevely and Trichinopoly, an Enam of forty cawnies of land. Thither these worthy men retired, and many an observation we may be sure was rife among the neighbours when they pointed out to their children how the great Company, that mysterious entity, had rewarded fidelity in its servants; how these two Enamdars had saved the Government from the intrigues of mutinous soldiers, and how for all time—so long as the sun and moon should endure, in their own figurative language,—the posterity of the lucky veterans should enjoy the land for ever and for ever.

Let us pass over an interval of some years. The curtain again rises, and we find the heirs of the Trichinopoly Enamdar in quiet honourable possession of his property; and as indeed his grandchildren are still the undisturbed tenants of the soil, it will be unnecessary to follow their fortunes further, save to remember them by way of contrast to the fate which fell upon the family in Tinnevely. In that district less liberal counsels presided than in its neighbour Trichinopoly. Tinnevely, as we all know, is the chief seat of Missionary labours and success in the South of India, and it was at the period we speak of inflicted with one of those conscientious collectors who combine extreme love of their species in general with an inflexible determination to raise the Government revenues to the highest possible point, by screwing men in particular. To such eyes an Enam is an abomination; and as the old Subadar had granted a piece of his land to the Roman Catholics for the purposes of church-building, it is not improbable that this particular case found more than usual disfavour in the eyes of the "Lord of the Manor," that monarch of all he surveys, a crack Collector. The old Subadar died, and we believe one of his sons was suffered to succeed him. But he too died; and then the Enam was looked into; it was discovered that the gift had not been made out to the Subadar and his heirs. This notable discovery was not suffered to lie dormant long. A correspondence between the Collector, the Revenue Board, and the Government followed. The legal bearings of the matter were fully discussed. This hutus valde defendus (by the Subadar's family) was held fatal; but a "paternal Government" on the whole decided that the old man's widow should be allowed to enjoy a portion, two-thirds if we recollect aright, of the original grant for her life, after which the Enam was to be forthwith "resumed." In the course of nature the widow died: the estate was resumed sure enough; and the last of the Subadar's children, one Anthony Mootoo, found himself cast adrift upon the world, a beggar. Such was the fate in store for the immediate descendant of the man who had saved the State. In vain the puzzled Anthony appealed to the fact that the grandchildren of the other Subadar were still enjoying his grant in Trichinopoly, though the form of grant was the same in both districts. He was informed that the point had been formally determined by the Government of Fort St. George, and that he must make the best of it. Then commenced the great farce of petitioning. We find the unfortunate Anthony petitioning every one within his reach; Collector, Revenue Board, Government, Governor, Governor's Secretary, until he must have been set down as a standing and unavoidable, but harmless nuisance, perhaps slightly tainted by monomania in one of its mildest forms, an inveterate love of one's own property; we see the poor wretch bandied about from post to pillar, from pillar to post; now supplicating the belted peons at the Collector's door for admittance to the "Huzzoor," now waylaying the great man on his morning ride, and presenting a petition to his breast, much as a highwayman might a pistol, but with less felicitous result. Now he is mulcted of his small bribe in the Kutcherry, and sees his "siffication" at last fairly on the road to a reading. Anon comes the curt endorsement which dashes his hopes to the ground. But the persevering monster trudges a hundred miles or so on foot after the Collector's tent at Jummabundy, till at length the happy thought strikes him of trying the high and mighty authorities at Madras. Thither then he wends; and foot sore and heart weary he performs his journey of some four hundred miles with a perseverance and a patience truly marvellous. Here he is destined to meet all sorts of disappointments. His petition to the Revenue Board results in a direction to try the Collector; but that is too much of a joke; and he accordingly attacks the Governor's private secretary, by whom the question is referred to some particular department. In due time the petition is returned, with one of those extremely pithy endorsements which are doubtless far more satisfactory to the Secretary than the suppliant; or it may be a dirty scrap of paper with a few Tamil or Telegu words upon it is appended to the corner, much like the docket to a dishonoured check, conveying the cheerful intelligence of "no effects." Anthony learns that he has violated section eight or nine of the petition rules; he has not laid the whole of the papers before the Government, or he has made some other slip, which affords quite plea enough for putting him off, it may be for years, and it may be for ever. But no; he is not to be choked off so. He trudges to Tinnevely and back, and armed with all documents tries his best once more. This time he is referred to the Revenue Board, who again request him to apply to the collector. He now falls into the hands of a petition-writer, some miserable wretch who lives upon such dupes. Anthony's hopes are excited. The writer is a particular friend of the honourable Mr. Blank who has just been called to the Council Chamber, or he is in the habit of taking a morning cup of tea with the head member of the Revenue Board. Anthony may judge for himself if he wishes, and he thinks on the whole that he would prefer this course before parting with the last rupee he has or is ever likely to have in the world. Accordingly he sets out with the concocter of memorials in a Shigram po to the gardens of the great unknown. There the writer leaves him at the gate, and dives for the necessary time into the thick bushes, or trudges up to the house and presents a little petition on his own account, in which he is pathetically represented as a claimant on the great man's charity, either on account of inability to bury a grandfather, or a total destruction of all his worldly goods and chattels by fire or shipwreck. Satisfied with the mysterious hints thrown out by the petition-writer on his return, Anthony is hooked, only to find, after due interval, that his memorial is returned with a final determination on the part of the Right Honourable the Governor in Council not to interfere. The victim threatens the petition-writer with the police and sessions; and ultimately compromises matters by accepting a return of ten out of the fifty rupees he had been induced to part with. Matters are now rife for a memorial to the Court of Directors, who would assuredly have replied, that the affair having been satisfactorily disposed of by the authorities in India, they saw no reason to depart from their decision. But before this could be effected, the Court of Directors themselves had ceased to be.

The third act of this domestic drama opens upon an entirely new scene. The whirligig of time has brought round much such a mutiny as that threatened fifty years before at Vellore, only with this difference, that the authorities misread the events before them, and accordingly the disaffection was suffered to develop itself into mutiny and mutiny into rebellion. But so far as our story is concerned, the analogy between the two epochs was striking enough. In Trichinopoly the Government might, with some assurance, point to the reward of fidelity; and soldiers and civilians, looking to the grandchild of the subadar enjoying the fruits of the old man's good service, might well feel persuaded that their own best policy was to keep faith with a Government which kept such faith with them. How different was the picture in Tinnevely. There the mutinously disposed would have a powerful illustration of the petty meanness of their rulers, and could inveigh with much appropriate force against the treatment which even those who had deserved best of the State might expect after the crisis of danger was past. Some such ideas as these induced a gentleman in a neighbouring district to take up Anthony Mootoo's case. A memorial was accordingly drawn up, briefly yet very unmistakably detailing the whole facts of the case; and as the Queen had now superseded the Company, the matter went straight up to the Board of Control (Council of India?). A person of some influence in Indian matters at home, fortunately for Anthony, Mootoo was so struck by his case that he interested himself in seeing justice done. The sympathies of some of the best men in the Board of Control were enlisted, and the hostility of others perhaps soothed, by the assurance that a Parliamentary inquiry would probably follow fast upon the rejection of the petition. Be that as it may, new counsels prevailed, and novel results followed. The old grasping at every scrap of land in the country was no longer in vogue. "Resumption" was looked upon with disfavour. Enamls were not necessarily eye-sores, nor enamls a nuisance. A technical omission was not to be quibbled upon to the overthrow of an obvious intention. The policy of keeping faith overweighed the love of territorial ownership, even though forty cawnies were at stake. The justice of rewarding in perpetuity the heirs of him who had perhaps served the State, and at any rate risked his life to save it, was seen as clear as the light of day itself; and an order has just been received in this country to reinstate the happy Anthony in his family estate; and, what is more, for the payment to him of the whole of the mesne profits during the time he has been out of possession, with interest. This is doing the thing handsomely, and as it ought to be done. It is creating quite a sensation in the district; a sensation of a very pleasing character, too, because the population at large see in this act, and in the restitution of the Chokumpetty zemindar to his property, undeniable evidence that the Queen's Proclamation is not a mere vox et preterea nihil, but a substantive declaration of the inauguration of a policy which they one and all feel to be noble in purpose, and are now satisfied is honest in practice.—Indian Statesman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CANNANORE.—Matters are as quiet here as they can be. The detachments of H.M.'s 60th regiment, under the command of Captains Storey and Gore, from Mysore and Hurryheer, are coming in every second day, in batches of thirty to thirty-six men, by bullock train. Cholera is reported to prevail on the route. But the three batches that have already reached Cannanore have passed safe. Accommodation being insufficient in the barracks at Cannanore for a full regiment, strong as the 60th is of 1,300 rank and file, four bungalows have been rented for the dwelling of the two companies now arriving from Mysore and Hurryheer; two of the bungalows are situated midway between the barracks and the mess house, and the other two close to the latter building. These are tiled, the property of her Majesty the Queen Bebee, of Cannanore, and the other, the largest, thatched with cocoa-nut leaves, the property of a native, formerly mess butler to the European regiment at the station.

A PEARL FISHERY.—Off the Tinnevely coast there are pearl banks which have not been worked for several years. An examination is to be made of them, and with this view our Government has asked that of Ceylon for the services of Dr. Keilaart, whose valuable reports on the pearl banks of Ceylon are well known. It is supposed that a fishery may take place in 1861, so that should it turn out anything like the fisheries in Ceylon, a very welcome addition to the revenue may be looked for.

CRYSTALLINE LIMESTONE.—Mr. Oldham, the Superintendent of the Geological Survey of India, has brought to the notice of the Madras Government the occurrence of Crystalline Limestone near Trichinopoly, of a uniform thickness of six or seven feet. At Naivallie the band extends for upwards of two miles, and at Mootum for about a mile in length. An extension of the same beds may be traced, by farther observation, between Trichinopoly and Coimbatore. If "a continent without lime is fit only for savages" and India has hitherto been dependent on Sylhet and deposits of kunkur, the occurrence of the limestone is very important. Whether for building, or as polished marble, or as chunam, this stone is of great value.

THE AMERICAN TRACT SOCIETY at Madras have at last hit the real difficulty in the spread of good vernacular literature among the natives of India, such as will compete with the vile trash sold in every village by hawkers, and ultimately, we hope, drive it out of the market. They propose to issue a Pocket Tamil Calendar for 1860, containing suitable information upon the new Government, the late rebellion, caste and Brahminism, interspersed with Christian lyrics and Christian truths. One hundred thousand copies will be printed and sold at three pice a copy. When will the most suitable of our English Christian and secular works, translated into the vernaculars of India, be sold at one anna a volume? Let them be got up in no better style than the native mythological rubbish, so that they undersell it.

THE MADRASA-TAUZUM, a school designed mainly for the Mahomedans of Madras, was recently opened at Triplicane. The director of public instruction stated that the Government felt a high degree of interest in the school, as the first one specially devoted to the education of that body.

THE "AVA."—A further attempt is to be made to recover the rest of the treasure of the Ava. According to the Madras Spectator H.M.'s ship Retribution is about to set out from Trincomalee to the site of the wreck. It will remain there till some £30,000 still unrecovered is brought up by the English divers who were so successful last year.

STEAMERS TO RANGOON.—Regular steam communication between Madras, Masilipatam, Cocanada, and Rangoon, has been established by the Madras Government. The steamer which leaves Madras on the 12th of June after the arrival of the English mail steamer, will reach Rangoon on the 22nd, and thus render the English in Pegu independent of Calcutta for their home correspondence. Passengers will be accommodated only when Government does not require the cabins and stowage room. The cabin charge for one passenger from Madras to Rangoon is Rs. 150.

MADRAS POTATOES.—The Bengal Government have applied to that of Madras for 200 maunds of the best Madras potato-seed for the Jynteah hills, where the potatoes have become deteriorated in consequence of the Cossyals never changing their seed or soil. The Californian potato-seed had been tried, but without success. It is supposed that the Madras seed is best adapted for the soil of these hills. The best is grown at Nong Kreem in the Khyrin country.

PLUMBAGO.—The Vizagapatam Chronicle says the Rajah of Vizianagram intends himself to work the Plumbago mines on his extensive estates. A specimen, recently reported on, was found to contain ninety-eight per cent. of pure lead.

TRAVANCORE.—General Cullen has received the following letter, dated 19th May, from Madava Row, Dewan of Travancore:—"I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letters Nos. 460 and 622 respectively, dated the 22nd and 23rd March last, together with extracts from the minutes of consultation of the Madras Government. As requested, I have laid the correspondence before his Highness the Rajah. The whole subject has had careful consideration. His Highness certainly feels that the provisions of the Proclamation of 1004 M. E. on the subject of the dress of the inferior castes require to be greatly modified. His Highness now proposes to abolish all rules prohibiting the covering of the upper parts of the persons of Shanar women, and to grant them perfect liberty to meet the requirements of decency any way they may think proper, with the simple restriction that they do not imitate the same mode of dress that appertains to the higher castes. His Highness desires to observe that anxious as he is to meet the wishes of the Government to the utmost of his power, and to give free scope for the improvement of the moral and social condition of his subjects of all classes, his Highness would not have made even this small reservation were it not for the fear that the sudden and total abolition of all distinctions of dress which have from time immemorial distinguished one caste from another, may produce most undesirable impression on the minds of the larger portion of his subjects and cause their serious discontent. Still, I am to observe that by the present concession the demands of decency have been fully answered without needlessly offending the feelings peculiar to the other castes. It is of course needless to remind you of the many circumstances which would make the introduction of decisive reforms, especially in matters of caste and religion, much more difficult in Travancore than in Her Majesty's territories. While, therefore, the progress of education among the people in general may be expected to pave the way for much greater changes, his Highness hopes that the arrangement now proposed, the only one which seems calculated to answer the object in view without the probability of disturbing the peace of the country, would meet with your approval and that of the Madras Government." These concessions received the approval of the Resident, and the Madras Government accepted them "as a practical earnest on the part of the Rajah to put an end to the barbarous and indecent restrictions previously existing on the dress of the Shanar women."

"HOW WE APPLES SWIM!"—The Rangoon Times of the 1st June comments severely but justly upon the conduct of the commander of the steamer Coromandel on her arrival at that port. She is the first steamer of a line established by the Madras Government, between Madras and the northern ports and Rangoon. The steamers are chiefly intended for the conveyance of troops and military stores, but are also available for private passengers and private freight. The commander of the Coromandel disgusted the merchants of Rangoon by refusing to attach his signature to a bill of lading, as he was not a merchant skipper, but an officer of the Indian navy! The consequence was that many refused to ship, while some were obliged to content themselves with the signature of the purser of the vessel. The Madras Government has thus sustained some loss in the shape of freightage by the absurd conduct of the commander of the Coromandel. If the steamers in question are occasionally to convey private freight and private passengers, who so fit to sign bills of lading as the commander of the Coromandel?

COIMBATORE.—A record published by the Government of Madras shows, that the attempt to civilise the Kadars and Mulsars, in the Annamally jungles in Coimbatore, has not been suc-

Millions of acres of land were found to be waste for want of labour in some instances, for want of water in others. Colonel Turner, in one of his tours in Upper Scinde, saw heaps upon heaps of wheat and other grain collected for conveyance abroad, rotting on the ground failing the means of transport. A country fertile enough, but without carriage—a country wide enough to tax ingenuity for production, but destitute of labour and sufficient means of irrigation.

The port of Kurrachee was not lost sight of for all this. Mr. Hardy Wells, who subsequently initiated the railway in India, proposed a sort of wet dock into which vessels of a certain tonnage could conveniently move, and simultaneously with this scheme suggested a terrace extending from the Custom House to Clifton for providing suitable buildings under special allotments. These were found premature projects, and accordingly abandoned, together with a provincial bank on a small scale.

Two or three years before, a small vessel, called the Lady of the Lake, had been the exceptional instance of any craft coming direct to Kurrachee with goods from Great Britain; the year 1854 was to open that direct communication for stores required for the Punjab, as well as the appearance of recruits for that province. Vessel after vessel successfully performed her trip, and then it remained to prove the safeness of the harbour during the south-west monsoon by a trip of the steamer Queen, appointed in that object by Government—an experiment so successful as to induce a sonnet for the nonce. One by one the wild delusions which had been gaining belief abroad of the difficulty of approach to Kurrachee, its want of a harbour, and the danger to be apprehended in such a harbour as it was by vessels lying there during the prevalence of the south-westerly winds, were being bowled over like skittles. Time, perseverance, and experience had undermined the work of prejudice, ignorance, and credulity. — Bombay Gazette.

THE GLORY OF ART.—A novelty, in the shape of a magnificent organ-clock, with self-acting music, chimes, and moving figures and effects, specially constructed for his Highness the late Imam of Muscat, by the celebrated James McCabe, has just been imported into Bombay by a Khojah merchant, Cassumbhoy Nathabhoy. The clock is of the estimated value of upwards of four thousand rupees; it is embedded in a large pedestal case, splendidly ornamented, and inlaid with gilt organ-frets, with very rich brass fluted pillars on the sides. The body of the case is made to separate, at pleasure, into one thousand portions, so as to afford convenient access to the clock-work, the organ and moving figure-work, etc. The front of the clock presents a richly-formed arch-shaped dial-plate, having hour and minute circles, and circles for the days of the week and of the month, seen through an elegantly-pierced metallic cover over a white ground. The upper part of the dial-plate displays the proscenium of a theatre, with a crimson velvet curtain, which is lifted at intervals by the clock-work, and then it discloses the scene of a castle courtyard, with a gateway and battlements, a fort, a rock, a lighthouse, and a sea-view with moving ships, a waterfall being observed in the distance. In the foreground a prince sits on a throne, surrounded by attendants holding flags in their hands, winding the march (on three lines of procession) of numerous moving troops, with cavalry, elephants, camels, cannon, and a band. During the march of the troops the organ-work of the clock (specially constructed for the purpose) loudly plays selected martial strains, with accompaniment of the drum, the triangle, trumpets, and other instruments. The whole of the work appears to have been constructed with great care. The clock strikes chimes at each quarter of an hour, and the organ plays eight different airs, admitting of being changed at pleasure, and provided with all necessary stops.

ACCOUNTANT GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.—H.E. the Gov. Gen. in Council is pleased to make the following appointments, consequent on the resignation, from May 31, of the Civil Service by Mr. E. E. Elliot, acct. gen., Bombay:—Mr. S. D. Birch, sub treasurer, Madras, to be acct. gen., Bombay; Mr. H. D. Sandeman, acct., Punjab, to be sub treasurer, Madras; Mr. W. Balmain, 1st asst. acct. gen., Madras, to be acct., Punjab; Mr. W. Waterfield, Bengal C.S., to be 1st asst. acct. gen., Madras, and to act as sub treasurer until relieved by Mr. Sandeman, or until further orders.

PRESBYTERIAN CHAPLAINS.—On account of the large number of Presbyterian soldiers recently sent to India, the Government have sanctioned the permanent addition of seven Presbyterian chaplains to the establishment, in the proportion of three to Bengal, two to Madras, and two to Bombay. The salaries of these additional chaplains it is proposed to fix at Rs. 500 per mensem. The permanent establishment of Presbyterian chaplains for India will be, according to the above arrangements, thirteen chaplains in all, namely, five for Bengal, four for Madras, and four for Bombay. The number of Presbyterians in India is estimated at 8,447, of whom 665 are in the civil service, 4,732 in the military service, and 3,080 unconnected with the Government.

COTTON SPINNING.—A correspondent writes with reference to the working of Cowasjee Nanabhoys cotton-mill, that it turns out about 3,080 lbs. of twist daily. If the mill is working at this rate, we are fully borne out in our assumptions as to the profitable nature of the speculation. It is fully expected, from the estimate of the monthly returns, that the shareholders will be entitled to at least Rs. 1,200 per share next month, when it is believed a dividend will be offered to them. Very splendid opportunities for investment are afforded by the cotton-mill companies, and we would therefore recommend them to our merchants and the enterprising public. Estimating the profits at the lowest figure, they cannot be less than four times the interest derived from Government loans. And there can be no risk, so far as these manufacturing establishments are concerned, especially when registered, like the East India Company, as "limited," which can be easily done under Act XIX. of 1857. Mr. Cowasjee Nanabhoys's shares are too large, being Rs. 5,000 each. It would be well to divide them into quarter shares, which is the plan adopted by the Colaba Press Company. Few can pay Rs. 7,000 for a share, which is the price now, the premium being Rs. 2,000. The East India Company has done well in confining the amount of its shares to Rs. 500 each. We would recommend those who are seeking for investments to lose no time in purchasing shares in this company, though they may have to pay a premium for them. — Bombay Gazette.

MISSION COLPORTEURS AND GOVERNMENT TEACHERS.—Complaints have reached Mr. Hope, the Educational Inspector, N.D., that Government schoolmasters under his inspections have been in the habit of interfering with the colporteurs sent from various mission stations at Guzerat, in their work of selling tracts and books among the people. Mr. Hope has therefore addressed to the schoolmasters a circular, which characterizes the statement—that Government regards with disfavour the purchasing of "Padre Sahels" books—as utterly false, and strongly asserts the entire neutrality of the authorities in the contest between God's truth and man's errors. It prohibits all teachers in Government schools from interfering with the selling of tracts by missionary colporteurs, except in the schools during school hours; and requires them to prevent their pupils from purchasing such books, even out of school-hours, "should their parents or other relations object."

ABOLITION OF KAMOTEE.—Amongst the several political and social improvements made in the Sontal Pergunnahs by Mr. Robinson, the deputy commissioner, is the abolition of a sort of slavery prevailing there. During one of his recent tours into the interior of the district, Mr.

Robinson heard of the abominable practice of Kamotee, or the enslaving of poor people by the rich. A person borrowing money from a rich man was made to enter into a covenant to serve his creditor until the whole amount was liquidated. In some cases, two or three generations have served a creditor and his descendants for a few rupees. We are informed that Mr. Robinson has received the thanks of Government for having succeeded in abolishing the nefarious practice.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A CHILD FROM A SNAKE.—A few days ago a woman residing at Bandora, being engaged outside in some domestic duties, had her attention called to one of her fowls, which had entered the house, and cackling furiously, was exhibiting the most unmistakable symptoms of excitement and alarm. A little child, about a year and a half old, was playing about the charpoy (bedstead) at the same time, and from the motions of the feathered alarmist the mother's attention was directed to it. After looking about in all directions, she peeped underneath the blanket, which was hanging loosely low down, and to her horror saw a large black snake lying within a few inches of the child. To snatch up the latter and call for assistance was the work of a moment, and on some neighbours coming to her assistance the reptile was despatched, and found to measure about four feet six inches in length.

MAJOR GENERAL J. SCOTT.—We observe that the colonelcy of the 3rd dragoon guards, serving in the Bombay Presidency, has been conferred upon Major-general John Scott, C.B., who recently commanded the Scinde division of the Bombay army. Major-general Scott formerly belonged to the 9th lancers, and was present with the French army, under Marshal Gerard, at the siege of Antwerp, in December, 1852; and, by permission of the Marshal, he accompanied the troops on every occasion during the siege. In October, 1858, he was appointed to the command of the cavalry of the Bombay division of the army of the Indus, as brigadier, and served in that rank during the campaigns of 1838 and 1839, in Scinde and Affghanistan, being present at the attack and capture of Ghuznee (medal). During the latter part of 1839 he commanded a detached column, consisting of the whole of the artillery (excepting four guns), the cavalry, and one battalion of infantry, which was destined to secure the subjugation of Upper Scinde, and to co-operate with the main column, under Sir Thomas Willschire, directed against Khelat. In the action at Maharajpore (medal), on the 29th December, 1843, he commanded a brigade of cavalry, as also the battle of Sobraon (medal). He had command of the Scinde division from 1855 to 1858. — Bombay Standard.

A UTILITARIAN JAILER.—The Marshal of the Bombay House of Correction, with the view of turning the tread-mill, which seems to be still in use in the Bombay prisons, to account, has attached an oil-mill to it. The mill consists of three distinct machines—the first crushes, the second is the receiver in which the crushed materials are ground by a pair of granite stones and passed into the "agitator," where they are reduced to a pulpy state fit for the press; the third is a vat, where it is squeezed between a series of thin iron plates by a moveable ram or piston, whose advancing motion is obtained by working a pair of pumps with which the press is furnished, on the hydraulic principle.

the horses to be brought for his inspection, and selected the five best horses and ordered the rest to be given to those for whom they were destined. The Vakeel of Bokhara presented himself at the durbar in the evening with presents from his master, and stated that his king had desired him to observe to the Ameer that the country of Koondooz belonged to the Kingdom of Bokhara, (which the dost was endeavouring to wrest from that king) and that he hoped the Ameer would desist from doing so. The Ameer ordered the Vakeel to enjoy himself for a few days and inspect the fine places of Kabool, when he would give him a reply. The Ameer had a private conference with his Ministers, Sirdar Osman Khan, Ameen Khan, and Golam Mamood Khan Mookhtar on the subject of the mission from the Bokhara King, and directed the transmission of a despatch to the Governor of Balk to the effect that if he felt strong enough to take Koondooz to do so at once, while the Ameer would detain the Vakeel of Bokhara amused at Cabool. But if he did not feel equal to the task, to say so, when he would give up the project of taking Koondooz with a good grace, since a good opportunity was given, by the Monarch of Bokhara having sent a representative to put matters on a good footing. An immediate reply was requested. The ex-Ruler of Balk Eshan Sudoor waited upon the Ameer and obtained permission to return the visit of the Vakeel of Bokhara. The Dost also sent handsome presents to the said Vakeel in a richly worked loongy, worked all over in gold; and a gold worked Chogah. May 6.—Sirdar Sooltan Mamood presented himself at the Durbar, and solicited permission to celebrate the Eed festival; the Dost replied that as the day was Wednesday and a bad "omened" day for rulers, he would celebrate it on the next day, Thursday always being counted a lucky day amongst Mussulmans. The agent (Nazeer Na'im Khan) of Sirdar Sherah Khan arrived from the valley of Jelallabad to pay his respects to the Dost, who desired to know the state of Sungoo Khail, where the people were troublesome in many respects, not giving the land and other taxes, and committing highway robberies, &c. The reply from the Governor of Balk reached the Dost to the effect that the Hakim of Koondooz (Meer Attalick Beg) had sent his son and brother with large presents to the King of Bokhara, with the request of a force being given them to repel the intended attack of the Afghans against their country; a report also prevailed at Shareabad, some five miles beyond Koondooz, that a force of the King of Bokhara had left Bokhara in aid of Koondooz. The Governor of Balk has recommended to the Dost to collect forces in Koistan or the highlands in the neighbourhood of Toorkistan to reinforce the troops at Balk. May 7.—A great gathering took place on Thursday, to celebrate the Eed. The Ameer ordered sweetmeats to be distributed to the poor, and shawls presented in the shape of khelluts to Meeranjee, the Head Priest of the Cabooles, and to Cazy Khan and Moolah Khan, the great expounder of the law of the Koran. May 8.—The Ameer ordered Sirdar Shereef and Ameen Khan to take the nobles and officers of the army with their respective regiments to Sheeasing, where they had a review of all arms between that place and Balattissar. The Vakeel of Bokhara appeared much pleased, and remarked that the force under Mamud Sheriff Khan was the best disciplined. May 9.—The Ameer ordered Mamood Ameen Khan to collect all the force of Coistan at Charikar. Ameen Khan went off with an escort of fifty sowars to give effect to the above order. May 21.—The Ameer received intelligence from Candahar that Sooltan Ahmed Jan was informed by one of his officials that his (Sooltan Ahmed Jan's) brother had left Herat in the direction of Candahar with a number of followers, but the precise place to which he was going was not known. The ruler of Herat (Sooltan Ahmed Jan) on hearing that his brother Mahomed Sadeek had gone six stages from Herat, went out to him with fifty sowars, and advised him not to go to Candahar, which belongs to Dost Mahomed; but he did not listen to him, saying that he would go where he wished. The ruler of Herat, finding his remonstrances of no avail, returned to Herat. Some suppose that Mahomed Sadeek is gone towards Huj, others that he is gone towards Room (Turkey). 22.—Some days ago, the Dost engaged three hundred Jezailchees and two hundred Koolistanees, (in all five hundred) and sent them to Sirdar Mahomed Azim Khan. This force marched via Indrah to Koondooz. 23.—The Dost received a letter from Mahomed Afzul Khan, to the effect that Sirdar Mahomed Azim Khan, and Sirdar Mahomed Uslum Khan have reached Ghoree and Booglan with their forces, and on arrival at Ghoree the inhabitants of the place gave them battle. The Sirdars immediately besieged and took possession of the place. The Sirdars lost four killed and some wounded; and the enemy six killed and ten wounded; and many were taken prisoners. The rest fled towards Koondooz. Some people have submitted to the Sirdars, whilst others are still in arms. Sirdar Mahomed Azim Khan has taken two small forts. The Dost on hearing of this affair was much pleased. 24.—The Ameer sent for the Vakeel of Bokhara, and requested him to leave for Bokhara. He also summoned Sarajooden Khan Akhloonzada, and ordered him to accompany the vakeel to Bokhara as his (Ameer's) agent. The vakeel left accordingly. Intelligence was received by the Dost from Candahar that thirty-four of his sowars and seventy Candaharees had deserted to Shikarpoor, as they were on the verge of starvation. Sirdar Shair Ally Khan having heard of this after two days went out with 200 sowars to trace them, and having found them he ordered them to be imprisoned; but he released the Candaharees on the assurance that if they repeated the same offence they would be severely punished. The Ameer was much displeased on hearing this act of ingratitude. May 25.—The Sirdar Ameer Khan was summoned by the Dost, who addressed him thus:—"I ordered you to go to Candahar, and you did not listen to my orders. If the people are disaffected, what good will it then be for you to go there? It is better if you and Shurreef Khan go to Candahar, if you can govern Candahar and give the government of Gurishk and Mulla Khan and Furra to Sirdar Mahomed Shurreef Khan;" to which Sirdar Ameen Khan replied that, "if you give me permission I will go to Candahar; but if you depute Sirdar Mahomed Shurreef Khan to accompany me I will not go, because he is of an independent disposition, and is not controllable." But the Dost insisted on Ameen Khan going in company with Mahomed Shurreef Khan, against which the former protested.—Lahore Chronicle.

EXPULSION OF THE PRINCE OF THE DEVILS.—A lama is selected to perform the part of the Dalai-lama, and a lay-person to enact the Prince of the Devils, or Logung-Ghisboo, as he is called. His costume is as follows:—his left cheek is bedaubed with white, and the right with black; he has a pair of immense green ears, his hat is surmounted with a small flag, in his left hand he holds a sort of stick, and in his right a cow's tail. This outlandish figure advances towards the pretended Dalai-lama, who is placed on a high seat, with his lamas on each side, and after sundry astonishing leaps, says to him, contemptuously, "What is perceivable by the five sources of intelligence is not illusory; what you teach is not true." A dispute takes place between the devil and the human deity, which they agree to divide by casting dice. The Dalai-lama throws his die upon a silver plate, the devil throws his on the ground. It may be easily imagined which loses: the Dalai-lama's die has six on each of its faces; the devil's die has but the ace. The Prince of the Devils thereupon takes flight immediately, and the lamas, assisted by the people, pursue him with bows and arrows, muskets and cannon. The actor of the devil, who is hired for the purpose, is obliged to conceal himself in the mountains, where he finds a store of provisions for several months, and he must not quit his hiding-place for some time.—Chinese History of Tibet.

The Military Command at Calcutta.

Military Department, Fort William, June 10.—No. 832.—It having been found for some time past that the want of a thoroughly efficient system of military command in Fort William and Calcutta has been the cause of considerable inconvenience, H. E. the Viceroy and Governor General of India in Council has determined that henceforward the troops stationed at the Presidency, or passing through Calcutta, shall be placed under the command, and be subject to the control, in all respects, of one officer.

2. The office of town and fort major will be abolished from the date on which it may be vacated by the present incumbent, Lieutenant colonel Cavenagh.

3. An officer will be appointed by the Viceroy and Governor of Fort William, to the office of commandant of Fort William and of the troops at Calcutta. This officer will have the rank of a brigadier of the first class, and emoluments of that rank, and he will be invested with the command of the European infantry depots at Dum-Dum, Chinsurah, and Raneejunge.

4. The brigadier will exercise independent control over the troops, European and native, placed under his command. He will report direct to the Commander in Chief on all matters respecting the regimental details and discipline of the troops; and will receive orders from the Commander in Chief on all points connected with the military command.

5. On all subjects connected with the authority of the Governor of Fort William, the brigadier will address himself to the military secretary to the Governor General, and he will receive his orders through the same channel.

6. The brigadier will issue his instructions to the local executive officers in all matters connected with the commissariat and ordnance requirements of the troops, their pay and clothing; and these officers will immediately attend to the requisitions of the brigadier.

7. The brigadier will exercise superintendence over the military hospitals and the invalid soldiers of the line, and of H.M.'s Indian forces arriving at the presidency.

8. The C. in C. will be pleased to furnish the brigadier with specific and detailed instructions connected with the embarkation and disembarkation of troops.

9. Reports of arrival and departure, heretofore made by officers, under the general regulations of the service, to the town major, will henceforward be made to the brigadier.

10. The brigadier will have under his control the following staff officers, for the duties of the presidency :—A brigade major; a dep. asst. qrmr. gen. (heretofore designated disembarkation officer); a garrison qrmr. These officers will be additional to the officers of the garrison staff already on the establishment of Fort William.

11. DUTIES OF BRIGADE MAJOR.—The brigade major, who has heretofore held the office of brigade major to the Queen's troops of the line serving in India, will perform the duties of brigade major at the Presidency, in connection with all H.M.'s troops, European and Native, there employed or passing through Calcutta. He will be the principal staff officer to the brigadier, and will be relieved of all duties and correspondence not local, discharging the functions of the brigade majors at other stations; and all extraneous or general duties heretofore performed by him will be transferred to the office of the adjutant general, H.M.'s forces.

12. DUTIES OF THE FORT ADJUTANT.—The functions of the fort adjutant will continue as at present, and he will further perform such duties as may be rendered necessary by the abolition of the office of town major. Regarding these he will receive his instructions from the brigadier under the orders of the Governor. He will exercise the functions of deputy superintendent of cadets, under the orders of the brigadier.

13. DUTIES OF THE DEP. ASST. QUARTER-MASTER-GEN.—These will be prescribed by H.E. the C. in C.,

who will from time to time appoint an officer to this situation. Should it be necessary, His Excellency will be pleased to detail an officer of the same rank from the department of the quarter-master general of the army, to assist the brigadier, and be placed under his orders.

14. DUTIES OF THE GARRISON QUARTER-MASTER.—The garrison quarter-master, a commissioned officer, to be appointed by the Governor, will be placed in charge of the conservancy of Fort William, and of the several guard rooms of the town and suburbs. He will have charge of the garrison and coolie bazaars and all the camp followers; and will exercise the authority heretofore exercised by the town major with respect to the duties entrusted to him, under the orders of the brigadier, who will be responsible for their due execution to the Governor.

15. The garrison quarter-master will be allowed a staff salary of rupees (250), two hundred and fifty per mensem.

16. The duty of keeping the rolls and records of H.M.'s European forces in the Bengal Presidency heretofore performed by the town major, will be transferred to the office of the adjutant general of the army, to which the necessary establishment will be made over from the town major's office.

17. The certificates brought out by officers returning from furlough, and by cadets, will be delivered by them into the office of the brigade major in Fort William, and by him will be transmitted to the adjutant general of the army, as heretofore by the town major.

18. The discharge certificates of men leaving the army will henceforth be prepared in the adjutant general's office, previous to transmission to the military department.

19. The bounty and renewal book, the register of discharges, the records of accounts of estates, recruit register and department register of the European local forces will be kept in the adjutant-general's office.

20. The duties heretofore performed by the town major connected with the payment of invalids and recruits, and the keeping of the necessary account books of such payment as well as with the accounts of all insane, both officers and men, and of the estates of deceased men, will henceforward be performed by the fort adjutant.

21. It will be the duty of the brigadier, as at all other stations, to assemble committees of adjustment of the estates of officers dying at the Presidency, this duty having heretofore been performed by the town major.

22. The town major's list will henceforward be designated "The unattached list," and will be kept in the office of the adjutant general of the army.

23. The Presidency staff surgeon will be the principal medical staff officer of the brigadier, and will have the sole executive duties (under the director-general of the medical department, and the inspector-general of Her Majesty's hospitals respectively), of all that is connected with troops arriving at or departing from the Presidency, and the several depots above mentioned, the staff and garrison of Fort William itself excepted. Within the fort no alteration of the medical management is intended by this order.

24. The correspondence heretofore carried on with the military department and the department of public works, and the general officer commanding the Presidency division, by the town major as the representative of the Governor of Fort William, will henceforward be carried on by the brigadier, in the same capacity.

Officers Service Time.

Fort William, June.—No. 856.—H.E. the Governor general in Council directs that the following paragraphs of military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 148, of the 2nd March, 1859, and the list therein referred to be published for general information:—

1. In continuation of the letter, dated 1st April, 1857, No. 58, a list is herewith forwarded of the officers of the Bengal Army who, pursuant to the resolution of the 22nd November, 1837, are entitled to count the time passed at the Royal Military College, Addiscombe, after they attained the age of sixteen years, as so much time passed in India, in calculating their period of service for retirement on full pay.

2. Being of opinion that the officers named in the margin*, who passed their public examination at Addiscombe in three terms immediately before the date of the resolution above referred to, should not, on that account, be deprived of a benefit to which all the cadets who joined the College at the same time as themselves, but did not pass out until six months afterwards, are entitled, I have resolved that they shall each be permitted to reckon the period of their residence at Addiscombe as service for retirement on full pay.

* Brev. Lieut. col. J. S. Paton, 14th N.I., three months nine days.—Capt. B. M. Loveday, 16th N.I., sixteen months six days.

List of Officers entitled to benefit by the Regulation of the 22nd November, 1837, as to time passed at the Royal Military College at Addiscombe after attaining the age of 16 Years.

would beg expressly to mention it was the first time the levy has been under fire.

Ensign and Adj. Gill, Moradabad levy, I would wish particularly to bring to the Brigdr.'s notice, who, though in a very weak state from sickness, accompanied the column and rendered me every assistance.

I have omitted mentioning the force I marched from camp with, and I herewith enter it in the margin.*

The column returned to camp at midnight, being nine hours under arms.

G. CLEVELAND, Capt. 98th regt.,
Comdg. the Column.

From Capt. FitzRoy Fremantle, rifle brigade, to Capt. Cleveland, 98th regt., comdg. field detach.

Rumwarpore, 13th April, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour to report that I marched with the detach. as per margin†, in obedience to your orders, to outflank the rebels at "Dursitalao."

I followed the Fyzabad road for a mile and a half after leaving your force, and then turned to my right through a very dense jungle. I pushed on the Punjab rifles in front of the guns, but, owing to the darkness which was fast coming on and the excessive badness of the road, I made but slow progress. After proceeding about three quarters of a mile the ground became more open, though the plain was surrounded by jungle on all sides.

At 6½ P.M. I saw a rebel vidette on the top of a hill, and had just ordered the Punjab rifles to form company when the rebels opened fire upon us from the bushes on the top of the hill at a distance of forty yards.

Upon the first shot being fired the Oude police cav. turned round and ran away, carrying away a section of the Punjab rifles, and creating some confusion.

I ordered the Punjab rifles to move to the left, and a section of the rifle brig. to the right of the guns, which opened fire with grape at this short range, and in a few minutes completely silenced the rebels' fire, and I then advanced to the top of the hill where I found their camp, but no men were to be seen. I did not think it advisable to follow them as it was now quite dark, the moon being completely hidden by clouds, and the jungle very dense.

I returned by a different road, making a long detour to avoid the jungle.

The troops behaved remarkably well, and I beg especially to bring to your notice the great steadiness showed by the H.A. in a trying moment, when the Oude police cav. retired so precipitately and broke through them.

I received every assistance from officers comdg. detach., viz., Lieut. Robinson, H.A., who brought his gun into action with great gallantry, and set an example of cool bravery which was well followed by his men. Lieut. Browne, 5th Punjab rifles, whose horse was wounded; and Ensign Myers, rifle brigade.

I was much indebted to Mr. King, asst. commissnr., who made himself most useful during the skirmish, and after it was over, in obtaining guides to lead us out of the jungle by which we were surrounded.

FITZROY FREMANTLE, Capt. rifle brig.

NATURE OF THE SOUL.—The custom of calling to the soul, just after death, to come back, now prevalent among the people, is mentioned in very ancient books. It must have existed for more than two thousand years. The friends of the deceased go to the well, to the roof of the house, to the north-west corner, with other parts of the dwelling, and call to the spirit to return. Death they call the breaking of the three-inch vapour. In the moment of death this portion of vapour three inches long, separating from the organisation to which it belonged, escapes upward like a wreath of smoke, or a small light cloud, into the region of thin air.—Edkins' Religion in China.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

MR. JOHN WARDEN AND CAPTAIN COWPER.

It is, perhaps, unfair to blame Mr. Warden for being susceptible on a question of honour. But certainly so far as actual knowledge is concerned, no one who possesses the slightest acquaintance with Indian matters would ever dream of placing Captain Cowper's opinion, on any subject connected with that country, on the same level with Mr. Warden's. It was, therefore, quite superfluous to answer Captain Cowper's unjust attacks and insinuations in the form of a pamphlet.* Mr. Warden's answer to these allegations leaves nothing to be desired. He demolishes his opponent's objections one by one, and completely cuts away the ground from under his feet. It is curious, however, to observe the strong desire, amounting almost to monomania, manifested by Captain Cowper for the prosecution of the Enam investigations and the resumption of all doubtful lands.

PROSELYTISM IN THE MADRAS PRESIDENCY.

THE resignation of the Government of Madras by Lord Harris did not take place one day too soon for the peace of that presidency. Obstinate in the inverse ratio of his capacity, his lordship appears to have systematically set aside the instructions of the Court of Directors whenever they happened to clash with his own preconceived opinions. Several glaring instances of his contempt for the most precise orders of his honourable masters are recited in a Memorial to the Secretary of State for India, from the Madras Native Association, consisting of both Hindoos and Mahomedans. Not only did his lordship take the chair at a meeting of the Bible Society, in St. Andrew's Church, Vepery, on the 9th of February, 1858, at which some of the speakers indulged in declamation rather of a violent than of a Christian character; but he directly contravened a despatch from the Court of Directors, dated 19th July, 1854, which expressly states that the assistance given by the Grants-in-aid is to "depend upon the periodical reports of the inspectors, selected with special reference to their possessing the confidence of the native communities, and that in their periodical inspections no notice whatsoever shall be taken by them of the religious doctrines which may be taught in any school." In the face of these very explicit instructions Lord Harris thought proper to appoint a Government chaplain and a missionary preacher to the post of inspectors, and another missionary preacher to be Professor of Sanscrit and Vernacular Literature and Registrar to the Senate of the University. On becoming acquainted with this strange selection of "impartial" witnesses and reporters, the Court gave orders for the immediate cancellation of these various appointments. The Government chaplain, however, was alone removed, Lord Harris maintaining that the charge of proselytism was certain to be brought against the Government whatever course of policy it pursued, and that consequently it was idle to pay any attention to murmurs excited by a few "unprincipled Europeans." Instead, also, of no notice whatsoever being taken of the religious doctrines taught in the schools assisted by the Grants-in-aid, the inspector especially commends certain schools on the ground of the spiritual instruction imparted to the pupils. Nor was it the Governor alone who presumed to depart from the system of strict neutrality enjoined by the Home authorities. We find a member of the Madras Government, the hon. Walter Elliot, presiding at a Wesleyan Missionary Meeting, and on another occasion moving a resolution pledging the Colonial Church Society "to make especial exertions and sacrifices for the extension of Christ's kingdom over the dark places of this earth, and to use renewed efforts to support and extend the operations of the Society." This demonstratively aggressive resolution was seconded by Mr. C. R. Baynes, a judge of the Sudder Court, while the chairman of the meeting was the Bishop of Madras. If the highest functionaries of the State thus mix themselves up with proselytising movements, it is useless to expect that the natives will place any confidence in the public declarations of the Government that no attempt will be made to interfere with their religious opinions and practices. So long as the Executive acts in direct antagonism to the professions of the Administrative, it is impossible that any reliance should be placed in proclamations which are not carried out, or in despatches which are set at naught. No objection can be made to the conscientious preaching of the missionaries, provided they are not supported by the ostensible or covert influence of the Government. They have an undoubted right to teach the truths of Christianity and to expose the errors of all other religious systems, but they have no right whatever to call upon the State to violate its solemn engagements towards the great body of its subjects. There can be but one consequence to persistence in the system of agitation at present pursued in the Madras presidency. Before many years have elapsed our Indian empire will again be involved in a wide-spread rebellion, far more terrible than the one recently suppressed. Sir John Lawrence's quotation from the "Lays of Ancient Rome" may then have a more appropriate significance when, from one end of India to the other, the Hindoos driven to despair shall seek a glorious death in battling for the ashes of their fathers and the temples of their gods. And let it not be thought that we exaggerate the danger. At a Missionary Conference lately held on the * "Letter to William Ewart, Esq." By John Warden, Esq. London: J. Kenny.

Neilgherries, "a series of Resolutions on Public Morals and the Government" was unanimously passed, and subsequently presented to the Madras authorities in the shape of a Memorial, the receipt of which was acknowledged in terms of evident satisfaction. Now, one of the resolutions was to the following effect:—"That all Christian missionaries shall have access to all jails with a view to afford religious instruction to such of their inmates as may be willing to receive it." It may be said that attendance at such instruction is expressly stipulated to be optional. But among the "Proceedings" of this same meeting we find a paper on Hindoo Caste, by the Rev. E. J. Hardley, of Mysore, who thus explains his idea of freedom of action. "Let every central jail in this country," writes this reverend gentleman, "have its missionary chaplains, who shall call them together morning and evening for reading the Word of God and prayer. Every Sabbath-day let the prison bell call them all twice to divine service. If it be objected that this would be forcing religion upon them, we ask in return, who are they? and where are they? Are they slaves or freemen? Place your missionary chaplains in all jails and not only will caste prejudices die away, but they will leave the jail with a thorough knowledge of the Christian religion, and in thousands of instances as baptised Christians." This may be zeal, but it is the zeal of Jehu, the son of Nimshi, and rather characteristic of one who "driveth furiously" than of a minister of the Prince of Peace. Lord Canning, to his credit be it said, has indeed interdicted the officious interference of missionaries with the inmates of jails, whom the Rev. E. J. Hardley appears to regard as "slaves," but it is absolutely necessary that stringent instructions be sent out by the Secretary of State, strictly forbidding all public servants from meddling with what does not concern them, and enjoining them to adhere to their positive duties, the proper discharge of which will fully occupy all their time and attention.

THE "WESTMINSTER REVIEW" ON INDIA.

It is wonderful how easy it is to solve the most difficult State problems—at least on paper—by the aid of unconscious ignorance, a cheerful misapprehension of facts, and a large share of assurance. We are told on high authority that a very small modicum of wisdom suffices for the government of mankind, so that we may not be surprised if public journalists and essayists presume on quite an infinitesimal amount of knowledge to lay down precise rules for the solution of questions that challenge and confound the sagacity of experienced thinkers. And yet one might have thought that so clever and influential a review as the Westminster would have taken some pains to be sure of the grounds upon which its contributors proposed to construct their theories before it devoted upwards of one hundred pages to such a lame and impotent exposition of the liabilities and resources of India as appears in its July number. It is not that we accuse the writer of the article in question of any lack of industry or want of research. On the contrary, he has crammed himself with most commendable perseverance for the completion of the task he had so rashly taken in hand, and there is no reason whatever to doubt his thorough sincerity and conscientiousness. Still the fact remains that his acquaintance with the subject is theoretical and superficial, and acquired from a laborious collation of three or four well-known books on Indian matters, and not from personal experience or from residence in that country. Among the many proofs that might be adduced of his incompetence to deal with such a puzzling and important question, it may suffice to select his definition of a talookdar as "a sort of zemindar, but usually of inferior rank." But let us examine the article on its own merits, and without reference to the shortcomings of its compiler. The points on which the reviewer insists are thus summarised at the conclusion of his paper:—

"That having annexed India to the British Empire, and destroyed the governing power of its native princes, we are responsible to 184,000,000 of people for their political well-being. That until a recent date our taxation in various parts of India has been so oppressive as to keep the majority of the people in poverty and debt. That in the yearly account of income and expenditure, notwithstanding our exactions, deficits form the rule, surpluses the exceptions. That after exercising the utmost economy, and having recourse to fresh taxation within the limits of safety, the expenditure will still continue to exceed the income. That the alarming prospect of a continually increasing debt justifies, indeed renders imperative, a revision of the principles and settlements according to which the land-revenue is collected. That in strict equity the land of each nation belongs to the people as a whole, and cannot be alienated in perpetuity to individuals. That as this principle has been recognised and practised in India from immemorial antiquity until the present day, and is essentially just, the Anglo-Indian Government ought to act upon it. That it ought to cease forthwith from all further alienation of the absolute proprietary right in the soil, whether by redemption of the land-tax or by actual sale; and that wherever such absolute proprietary right has been already alienated, it ought immediately to be resumed, a payment for it, according to its market value and the validity of the holder's title to it, being made in Government stock. That were the Government to act as supreme landlord, the national estate might be so managed as to yield at no distant time a land-revenue more than equal to the whole national expenditure. That of the holders of the vast territories throughout India, distinguished as enams, jagheers, or lakhiraj, and which are rent free, a large proportion have no sufficient claim to be exempted from assessment. That if these usurped freeholds were resumed, and their tenants constrained to contribute their fair share to the revenue, the prospective deficit in the national balance-sheet would become insignificant. That therefore the Enam commissioners ought to continue their labours, and that the area of their investigations ought to extend over the whole of British India. That as more than three-fourths of the Presidency of Madras, or about 100,000 square miles, yield no rent to Government, as a third of Bengal, and a third of the culturable lands of the North-West Provinces are lying waste, as the proportion of waste land in the other provinces is probably equally great, and as by reducing the assessment in various parts of India the demand for land and the total land-revenue have been increased, the potential resources of the Government in these waste lands alone are virtually inexhaustible. That by a systematic extension and ramification of common roads, railroads, and canals throughout India, and in consequence of the increase of the population, the land will steadily rise in value, and that the demand for it and the rent derived from it will proportionately increase. That the land revenue may also be immensely augmented by means of works of irrigation. That whereas the construction of public works by private companies who depend solely on the direct profits derived from them frequently result in loss; the State, which enjoys the large indirect profit derived from them, can construct them without risk. That when their existence would greatly augment the revenue, it is the duty of Government to construct them, even though there is no prospect that they will yield a direct profit. That considering the enormous amount of land still unlet, or resumable from holders having no title to it, the increasing demand for it, the certainty that it will rise in value from natural causes, and still more from the extensive construction of roads and works of irrigation, and that such works themselves often yield a large direct profit, the potential wealth of the Anglo-Indian Government is inexpressibly great. That it holds first-rate security for the re-payment of the utmost amount it can judiciously spend in the improvement of its estate. And finally, that in order to ensure the welfare and prosperity of the millions of human beings in India over which it presides, to rescue the Indian Government from insolvency, and to extend the sphere of English manufacturing and commercial enterprise, on which a large proportion of our home population depends, the Imperial Parliament, by the offer of its guarantee, ought to enable the Government of India to borrow on the most advantageous terms whatever money may be requisite to enable it to develop the vast resources, and thus rapidly to increase the revenues of our Indian Empire."

The proposition to raise money in this country to pay off the Indian debt on the guarantee of the British Government, is utterly impracticable in the present state of European affairs. Twelve months ago it might have been both expedient and possible to call upon capitalists at home to take the place of the usurious native money-lenders, and thus to effect a saving of three-fourths of a million per annum. But what man in his senses could now rise in his place in Parliament and advocate the addition of one hundred millions sterling to the funded debt of Great Britain? The motion might, indeed, find a seconder, but it would make little progress beyond that preliminary step.

Another point on which the reviewer lays great stress is the large saving to be effected by organizing the entire native army on the irregular system. His authority is a Captain Evans Bell, of the Madras Cavalry, the writer of some ill-conditioned letters to two of our London contemporaries. This gentleman, who, by the way, has a supreme contempt for the officers of the Bengal army, observes that by this means "the services of at least 1,500 English officers, who add nothing to the strength or to the influence of the Government, or to the efficiency of the service, whose pay amounts to at least £450,000 a year, and whose pensions form an ever-increasing prospective burden on the revenues of India would be dispensed with." Captain Bell, who happens to be in political employ, omits to mention from what quarter he proposes to take the "selected" officers for the irregular regiments, or for the staff, or even for political duties. He has evidently no fellow feeling for regimental officers, of whom, indeed—at least so far as the Bengal service is concerned—he presumes to speak in slighting terms. Still when he talks of giving "three selected English officers" to each regiment of infantry, he might have condescended to inform us from among whom they were to be chosen.

The reviewer is also strongly in favour of commissions to inquire into the titles of all enams and jagheers throughout the three presidencies. To this we have no objection, provided that a reasonable limit be stated beyond which the simple fact of possession shall be held to constitute a fair title.

He writes, too, in big, swelling phrases upon the extent of uncultivated lands in Madras and Bengal, but makes no allowance for mountains, and swamps, and dense forests—the last in themselves a source of wealth and power. At the same time we do not dispute his position that under a milder and more equitable assessment, and with improved means of communication, vast tracts of waste land would be brought under profitable cultivation. In this respect his error is only one of exaggeration.

On the subject of public works, however, we have the misfortune to differ from him entirely. According to this writer it is the duty of the Government, as owner of the land, to undertake on its own account all kinds of improvements, whether roads, railways, or canals of irrigation. He forgets, indeed, to explain how funds are to be obtained for all these purposes, and apparently finds it much easier to say that such or such a thing should be done than to point out how to do it.

There are many other points to which we could raise yet stronger objections, but we care not to weary our readers. We cannot, however, pass over unnoticed the reviewer's strange opposition to Lord Stanley's scheme for the redemption of the land-tax. The Indian journals, without exception, have expressed the highest opinion of its sagacity, and have prophesied great things of the effectiveness of its operation. The Friend of India, one of the best authorities on such a subject, and therefore ignored by the reviewer, has kindled into enthusiasm at the idea of freehold land being obtainable in Bengal. But the Westminster Reviewer is apparently content to doze over two or three second-rate books in the reading-room of the British Museum, and to acquire his local colouring from the tropical department of the Crystal Palace.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JULY 28.
COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS.

MR. HANKEY asked the Secretary of State for India whether the recent regulation with respect to candidates for admission to the Civil Service in India, limiting the ages for final examination to twenty-two years, was intended to be applied rigidly, so as to exclude any native of India who might have come to England expressly as a candidate for the Civil Service when the former limit of age was twenty-three, and who might be precluded by this new regulation from now entering the service of the Queen in India?

Sir C. Wood replied that the noble lord who preceded him in office laid down some time ago a rule limiting to twenty-two the age of candidates for admission to the Civil Service in India. It was obvious that any regulation which established a limit would be liable to complaint. He believed it had worked well; and he thought he should not be justified in reversing the decision of his noble predecessor.

THE PERSIAN WAR.

MR. ADAM asked the Secretary of State for India if the usual grant of batta had been made to the troops employed in the Persian war; and, if not, what steps Government had taken, or intended to take, in the matter?

Sir C. Wood replied that he had received no communication from the Government of India on the subject.

THE FINANCES OF INDIA.

There was issued on Thursday morning with the other parliamentary papers a return relating to the public debt, the expenditure, and the revenue of India, in continuation of that issued about the same period in the session of 1858. India deficit, 2,04,34,582rs.; home charges, 4,29,96,067rs.; deficit, 7,24,31,249rs.

A table is annexed exhibiting an estimate of the gross revenues on the one side, and the entire Indian charges on the other, with the estimated increase or decrease under each head in 1859-60, as compared with 1858-59.

The aggregate receipts from land revenue in 1859-60 are estimated at Rs. 18,27,29,500, being an improvement to the extent of Rs. 72,07,080 as compared with 1858-59, for which year the land revenue has been estimated at Rs. 17,51,62,420. The increase of Rs. 57,60,000 in Oude has been estimated on the supposition that peace will be fully restored to that province. The increase of Rs. 19,50,000 in the North West Provinces is attributable partly to the expected realisation of a large amount of arrears, and partly to the collection of ten lacs of additional revenue from confiscated estates. The decrease of Rs. 1,41,000 in the Punjab is looked for in the Delhi territory, consequent on the grant of lands rent free, as rewards for faithful or loyal services.

Under the head of Customs, exclusive of salt, which will be noticed separately, there is an expected improvement in the receipts for the whole of India in 1859-60, as compared with 1858-59, of Rs. 1,05,08,100.

The revenue to be derived from salt sales and duties, after deducting advances and charges, is estimated at Rs. 3,13,56,000, being Rs. 14,72,060 in excess of the amount estimated for 1858-59. In Bengal a diminution of Rs. 3,06,230 in the amount realised from the sale of salt is expected to be more than met by an increase of Rs. 5,00,000 in the duty upon importations.

The receipts from opium are estimated at Rs. 5,23,84,000, being Rs. 41,73,600 in excess of the receipts estimated for the current year. The ordinary and extraordinary receipts from the public works have been assumed at Rs. 50,56,100, being Rs. 2,51,104 in excess of the estimate of 1858-59.

The miscellaneous receipts, deducting the receipts appertaining to the mints, show a probable improvement in 1859-60 of Rs. 9,52,955.

The aggregate anticipated improvement under the principal heads of revenue is Rs. 2,42,95,832. It is chiefly contingent on peace being maintained, and on the deliveries of opium at Bombay, and the exports and imports by sea at the several Presidencies not being diminished in consequence of the additional duties imposed upon them; but the prospect is, on the whole, encouraging, and it is probable that the general results will be much more favourable should it be determined in the course of the year to introduce the measures now under consideration, of a tax on tobacco, a stamp duty on checks and receipts, and an enhancement of the salt duties at Madras and Bombay.

With regard to the charges, it is observed the total charges expected to be incurred in India in 1859-60 amount to 39,13,38,073 rupees, being 1,91,95,981 rupees less than the charges estimated for 1858-59. Of these charges 1,34,71,100 rupees appertain to the territories of Nagpoor, Pegu and Martaban, Tenasserim and Oude.

The ordinary civil charges are estimated to exceed those of 1858-59 by 186,960 rupees, chiefly in consequence of an increase in the expense on account of deputy magistrates and the criminal courts, police establishments, and revenue surveys in Bengal, and the charges of the Enam Commission, police establishments, revenue surveys, and uncovenanted deputy-collectors in Madras.

The civil charges extraordinary (general, judicial, revenue, &c.), show a decrease compared with 1858-59 of 18,32,850 rupees. In the departments under the immediate control of the Government of India, the decrease is estimated at 9,31,500 rupees.

The military charges, ordinary and extraordinary, exhibit an estimated decrease of 2,32,01,300 rupees.

Under the head of "Interest," there is an estimated increase of 48,86,200rs., the bulk of which is under India.

The expenditure for public works during the year is assumed at 4,38,20,997rs.

After giving a tabular statement with regard to the debt as well, besides recapitulating the receipts and disbursements, the document, in its concluding paragraph, says:—"From these results it will be seen that a cash balance of 11,39,66,539rs. is looked for on the 30th April, 1860. This cash balance is only 60,33,461rs. below the amount (12,00,00,000) which it is thought desirable, under existing circumstances, to have at command in the treasuries throughout India at that period of the year."

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS

PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the gums employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

TEETH

WITHOUT SPRINGS.

110, REGENT-STREET, and 83, LUDGATE-HILL, Are the Dental Establishments of

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established DENTISTS, Patentees of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans.

In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, whole some, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which Messrs. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established 1804; and at 134, Duke-street, Liverpool.

GABRIEL'S TREATISE fully explains the system, and may be had gratis, for stamped envelope.

The Patent White Enamel, which effectually restores decayed front teeth, can only be obtained as above.—OBSERVE THE NUMBERS.

PREPARED WHITE GUTTA PERCHA ENAMEL, the best Stopping for Decayed Teeth or Toothache, 1s. 6d. per box, obtainable through any Chemist in town or country, or direct Twenty Stamps.

"Messrs. G.'s improvements in Dentistry are really important, and will well repay a visit to their establishments."—Sunday Times, Sept. 6th, 1858.

ALLEN'S*MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA, showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorate, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all stations, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been attained, while needless diffusiveness has been avoided.

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the boundaries of the three Presidencies, and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS. Erysipelas.—Much difficulty is often experienced in eradicating the cause of erysipelas from the system; till that is effectually done, this inveterate disease is always hovering about, ready again to take possession on the slightest derangement of the health of those predisposed to the disorder; hence the frequent erysipelatous attack encountered by one person. To remove the hidden source of this disease from the blood is the only rational mode of treatment, and this is effected once for all rapidly and finally by Holloway's Anti-erysipelatous preparations. These noble remedies correct so kindly yet so energetically the circulation and digestion that erysipelas soon departs, and the patient is charmed to find that the enemy is routed for ever.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT from the Second Edition (page 188) of the Translation of the Pharmacopœia of the Royal College of Physicians of London, by Dr. G. F. Collier, published by Longman and Co.—“It is no small defect in this compilation (speaking of the Pharmacopœia) that we have no purgative mass but what contains aloes; yet we know that hemorrhoidal persons cannot bear aloes, except it be in the form of COCKLE'S PILLS, which chiefly consist of aloes, scammony, and colocynth, which, I think, are formed in a sort of compound extract, the acidity of which is obviated, I suspect, by an alkaline process, and by a fourth ingredient (unknown to me) of an aromatic tonic nature. I think no better and no worse of it for its being a patent medicine. I look at it as an article of commerce and domestic convenience, and do not hesitate to say it is the best made pill in the kingdom; a muscular purge, a mucous purge, and a hydragogue purge combined, and their effects properly controlled by a dirigent and corrigent. That it does not commonly produce hemorrhoids, like most aloetic pills, I attribute to its being thoroughly soluble, so that no undissolved particles adhere to the mucous membrane.”

DR. JAMES'S POWDER for FEVERS, INFLUENZA, MEASLES, RHEUMATISM, and all Inflammatory Disorders. No Medicine Chest is complete without it. So simple and certain, so mild and peculiar, in its action, that it is fitted alike for domestic or professional use. The genuine has “F. NEWBURY, No. 45, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD,” London, engraved on the Government Stamp. Packets, 2s. 9d. each; Bottles, 11s. Be careful to ask for “NEWBURY'S” the Original Preparation. Established A.D. 1746.

PROPRIETOR OF THE COD LIVER OIL CAKES. HOOPING COUGH.—From Sir W. Cubitt's Nephew. “Sir,—Your medicine cured me in ten days, after trying every remedy I heard of without success.” CHARLES HARRISON, 32, Clifton-crescent, Old Kent-road.” Sold by G. LEA, 1A, South-street, Walsworth, Surrey, in bottles at 2s. 9d. and 4s. 6d., and sent carriage free to any Railway Station in the Kingdom, on receipt of the amount in uncut postage stamps. N.B.—Numerous references can be given to families who have tested the efficacy of this preparation, when every other means have totally failed.

GOLD REVIVER, 1s. 6d. per bottle; Electroplating Silver, 1s. Established preparations for rendering old gilt frames and worn off plated articles new by a single application.—C. Fox Smith, 251, Strand, W.C.; Deane, London-bridge; Barclay, Farringdon-street; Appleby, Soho Bazaar; Aplin, 23, Lowther arcade.

HAIR-CURLING FLUID, &c.—248, High Holborn.—ALEX. ROSS'S Curling Fluid causes the hair to curl immediately it is used: 6d.—sent for 54 stamps. ALEX. ROSS'S Hair Destroyer, or Depilatory, removes superfluous hair from the face or hands, without injury to the skin; 3s. 6d. ALEX. ROSS'S Hair Dye; 3s. 6d. Private rooms for its use.

JAMS, JELLIES, and MARMALADE, PRESERVED IN TINS, By BARNES, MORGAN, and Co. (the Originators of this method of preserving). Upper Thames-street, London, E.C. This mode of Preserving is now acknowledged to be far superior to any yet invented. The contents will keep good for any number of years without the tin imparting any metallic taste to the Preserve, and never candy or ferment. To Regimental Messes they are peculiarly adapted, being more portable than jars, and not liable to breakage. B. M. and Co. would also recommend their Pickles, Sauces, Tart Fruits, &c., and their large stock of York and Cumberland Hams, Cheese, and Bacon.

From THE HOME NEWS, March 3, 1859.

"Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. have just brought out the first number of a monthly periodical, called THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND SOCIAL SCIENCE. We confess that until we read this first number we had no very clear impression that we were in any need of any addition to our already heavily-laden monthly literature; but a careful examination of the contents of the work has satisfied us that its projectors are justified in the undertaking. If they cannot be said, in the slang of the book-market, to have supplied a want, there is little doubt that they will create an audience. The best brief notion we can give of the publication is to say that it promises to become to English readers what the Revue des deux Mondes is to French, with an indefinitely wider latitude of topics and freedom of opinion. The critical element predominates, but it admits of the essay in its pure form, and is sufficiently elastic in both departments to embrace every variety of subject of current or permanent interest. In politics it ranges with the progressive section of the Conservative party, which would preserve the constitution, by adapting it from time to time to the necessities of successive epochs. The soundness of its judgment on the question of Parliamentary Reform is displayed in the ablest and most thoroughly constitutional article that has yet appeared in any of our periodicals on the subject; an article which acquires additional value from the fact that it foreshadowed the whole scheme of the Government two days before the Reform Bill was brought forward. In social laws and morals, the object of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW will be to note the progress, and collect the results, of all movements tending towards the advancement or elucidation of those vague philosophical investigations which are clustered under the general head of social science. Good earnest is given of the resources at the command of the writers, and of the practical manner in which they are prepared to deal with them, in an excellent article on the 'Homeless Poor.' There are also capital papers upon 'Russia' and 'Indian Finance;' and some admirable literary articles. This last department is pervaded by a spirit of independence, and a high scholarly tone which, we trust, 'custom' may not impair. Let us have at least one English periodical, written with integrity and good taste, to which we may confidently look for fearless and honest opinions. The UNIVERSAL REVIEW promises to realise these expectations, and we heartily wish it the success it deserves."

From THE PRESS, May 14, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW contains seven articles, which, some for one reason, some for another, merit the attention of the public. The article on Mr. Robertson derives virtue from the excellence of its subject, but is nicely written as well. 'Women—neither Nice nor Wise,' is a protest against the smoking-clubbed, shooting-galleried, red-trousered style of young lady, of whom it is very truly said that all 'their efforts for the emancipation of women are in reality intended for the enslavement of men.' 'The Resources of India, and its Colonization,' has only one fault—it is greatly too short; and we confess if it had been extended over the space which 'The Philosophy of Fabulous Ages' now occupies, we should not have regretted the exchange. 'Michelet on Love' is a review of which it is difficult to determine the merit without having read with great attention the book of which it treats. The writer seems so entirely to agree with his author as to have abandoned any idea of criticising him in the literal sense of the word, so he gives us instead a very compact and clever abstract of his theory, expressed with great felicity, and enlivened by occasional touches of real humour. The writer of 'French Dramatists and English Adapters' took a good grasp of his subject, but laid it down again before he had squeezed it dry. His article contains a good deal, but might have contained more. For instance, he takes up some half-dozen hypotheses to account for the decline of the drama, turns them over, and leaves them, saying it is not his business to settle which is true. But we think this is just what his business was. The article is written in so agreeable a style, and evinces so much latent ability, that we regret more was not made of it. 'The Last of the Moguls,' though a little florid in diction, is well and strikingly executed. The article called 'How shall we vote?' after a summary of the policy of Lord Derby's Administration, proceeds to the delivery of a strong philippic against the Opposition leaders, and especially Lord John Russell. We observe this article has been reprinted in a separate form, and we trust may have contributed to blow away some of those delusions which the public mind has been carefully fed by the partisans of the 'Bedfords.' With the writer's remarks on Lord Palmerston we do not so fully agree. His lordship has performed great services, and what he may have done in a moment of irritation should not be too harshly criticised. The customary 'Session' and 'Books upon our Table,' conclude a very good number."

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW is, as usual, distinguished by discussing subjects of deeper and more permanent interest than are commonly entered on in monthly publications. The first article, on a book entitled 'Man and his Dwelling Place,' affords the writer an opportunity of professing his acceptance of the Idealistic theory of Bishop Berkeley, which, though supported by reasoning that it is admitted cannot be refuted, has hitherto made so little progress with mankind in general, chiefly on account of the misapprehension that has prevailed, or, perhaps, we may say, which does prevail, respecting it—a misapprehension that, doubtless, the writer is correct in ascribing to people picking up their notions of it at second hand, instead of resorting to the exposition of Berkeley himself. The article entitled 'A Reviewer's Parcel' is a lament over the degeneracy of the present age, especially made manifest by the vast number of new books published every month. Every one has a vague desire to go behind the scenes of a theatre, and by admitting, or pretending to admit, the public behind the scenes of reviewing, the writer of the article in question has produced a taking and readable paper, with which those who know little or nothing about the subject of which it treats will probably be best pleased. 'The Story of Microscopical Discovery' is an interesting article in which the progress of microscopical science is traced from its commencement to now. 'The Resources of India and its Colonization,' an article the first part of which appeared last month, is continued in the present number by a writer who has evidently devoted to the subject considerable care, pains, and research. An article on the picture exhibitions, a political article entitled 'The French in Italy,' 'Austria and the Slavonians,' with other papers, fill up the number."

"The new periodical, THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW, fully maintains its excellent start, and may be regarded as one of the cleverest exponents of sound, sensible, unbiassed views among the periodical press. Nothing can be fairer than the spirit pervading two of the articles of the new number, the one on the Divorce Court, the other in the shape of a review of a bad novel, 'Out of the Depths' on the Delicate Question; though, while giving the writer of the first-named pages every credit for sincerity, we deny the truth of his denunciation of a measure which undoubtedly has given the means of relief to scores of persons weighed down and lost here and hereafter by their tie to a worthless person. As regards the second article, every man of sense must go hand in hand with the reviewer, more especially in that portion of his paper where he deprecates the publication of such books as useless and demoralising. Other very readable essays are—a review of 'What will he do with it?' in which Bulwer is very honestly, and withal very favourably, judged; a pleasant paper on 'Charles James Fox;' an erudite dissertation on Mr. Norris's 'Erudite Book;' 'The Ancient Cornish Drama;' and three political articles, the best written of which is devoted to Louis Napoleon, and closes in the following words—'He said of himself, Je suis citoyen avant d'être Bonaparte. He might more truly have said that he was a political fanatic rather than a great prince; that his genius was a monomania; that his idea of internal order is that of a wolf who would muzzle the dog, and that his faith in foreign powers is that of a burglar in possession of a ticket-of-leave who surveys at his leisure his neighbour's premises, and chooses his own time to break in and seize the spoils.'"

BENGAL.

THE UNCERTAINTY OF CONVICTION
IN THE MOFUSSIL COURTS.

The report of the trial of four persons, for being concerned in an attempt to murder a Mr. Rainey, an Indigo planter in Furreedpore, is possessed of much interest. The case is remarkable, as showing that it is possible even in peaceful Bengal for an English gentleman, while taking his morning walk, to be stabbed from behind by a dastardly assassin, who runs off, and cannot afterwards be discovered or traced in any way. It is also remarkable, as an instance of the absolute uncertainty as to the result which attends all criminal proceedings in the Mofussil Courts, and which makes it wholly impossible to say, however weak or however strong the evidence may be, whether the prisoner will in the end be convicted or acquitted. And the case is further worthy of observation on account of the criticisms upon the conduct of the Lower Court which are contained in the judgment of the Sudder, and which show in how unsparing a manner the Court of Appeal at times considers it necessary to condemn the acts of subordinate judicial officers.

Mr. Rainey, in the end of January last, went out for a walk about seven o'clock in the morning, and, when about a mile and a half from home, in passing through a village, he stopped to look at some images in a Kallee-baree. He had proceeded a few paces on his walk when he was struck from behind. He turned round, and saw a man running down a bye lane into the village. Putting his hand to his side, he discovered he had been stabbed, of which he was not at first aware. He then became faint from loss of blood, took refuge in a boat-building yard which was at hand, and sent for the police, who came immediately. He was put into a palkee, and having shown the Darogah the spot where the occurrence took place, and the direction taken by the would-be assassin in his flight, he proceeded into Furreedpore for medical assistance. The police instituted inquiries which resulted in their arresting the four prisoners. Mr. Rainey could not identify any of them as being the man who struck him, although he said he thought from his general appearance that one of the prisoners whom he pointed out was the man. The case for the prosecution was that one of the prisoners, Dwarkanath Shah, who had had quarrels and lawsuits with Mr. Rainey about some lands, had got the other prisoners to join in a conspiracy to murder him, that they had all lain in wait for him behind a clump of trees that morning, and that as he passed, one ran out and stabbed him from behind with a short spear. The Sessions Judge, Mr. Abercrombie, believed the evidence for the prosecution, convicted all the prisoners, and sentenced Dwarkanath Shah, who was taken to be the originator of the scheme and Ramcoomar, who was supposed to have struck the blow, each to transportation for life beyond seas, and the other two who were present aiding and abetting, to ten years' imprisonment with labour in irons. The case then came before the Sudder Court, which disbelieved the evidence for the prosecution, acquitted all the prisoners, and ordered two of the principal witnesses for the prosecution to be committed to take their trial for perjury. There surely could not be a more wonderful piece of good luck for the prisoners than this. For, even supposing their case was a good one, what possible reason had they to know (except the fact of their having been convicted by the Zillah Court) that their appeal would be successful, and that the truth would be got at better by the Sudder than by the Lower Court. In the Sessions Court Mr. Abercrombie—who for aught we can say may by the service be looked upon as a first-rate judge, and may be the next for promotion to the Sudder—upon certain evidence comes to the conclusion that the accused are guilty, and hesitates not accordingly to impose the severest punishment upon them. In the Sudder Court, Mr. Samuells, upon the very same evidence, comes to the conclusion that the accused are not guilty, and orders their immediate release; and not only that, but he orders certain witnesses whom Mr. Abercrombie had examined personally and believed, to be tried for perjury. It is not a little extraordinary that two persons, who looking at the matter a priori have equal opportunities of forming a correct judgment, should upon the same facts arrive at such very different results. One conclusion the public must draw from such a difference—a necessary and inevitable conclusion—that in the trial of these four prisoners there has been a gross failure of justice somewhere. If the Lower Court was right, the Sudder Court has gone very far wrong. If the Sudder Court is right, the Sessions Judge has gone about as far wrong as it was possible for a man to go. We must not be understood as saying that the conclusion arrived at by the Sudder is wrong. We have no doubt that it is perfectly right, so far as the materials before it went. It is impossible, after seeing the case for the prosecution disposed of as it has been in the very able judgment of the Court, to say that the conviction could have been allowed to stand. At the same time, it is within the bounds of possibility that the Sessions Judge may have been right practically, although the case was not tried or put on paper by him with such care as to enable it to bear the searching scrutiny to which it has been exposed. Let us hope that this is so, for if it is not it is impossible to calculate the amount of injustice which may be done in the same Court in cases where there is no appeal, and no remedy of any kind. The truth of the remarks with which the judgment of the Sudder Court concludes is undeniable. The evidence of the witnesses was most imperfectly tested, and this is unfortunately by no means a rare occurrence in cases which come before the Sudder Court. And it is quite right that this should be brought to the notice of the subordinate judicial officers, and that they should be reprimanded for manifest negligence, and be kept to their duty by all reasonable means.

* * * * *

In the meanwhile, Mr. Rainey's assailant remains undiscovered, which is by no means a pleasant state of affairs for him. If the right men were not brought to trial, it shows that a very strong sympathy must exist between the intended assassins and the villagers. It is a great misfortune that the villain has not been found out and punished.—Hurkaru.

THE HILL KARENS.

The wild tribes of the East have yet their part to play in its future. It is from races out of whom caste has not sucked the young life-blood, that the British power in India must look for that support which failed her so miserably when she trusted to the twice born. It was from her border tribes on the North-west Frontier, with whom in March, 1857, she was at open war, that in May of the same year she organised regiments which stood by her when she had sent every European to Delhi. If we are to have a native army or an armed police let it be of such, of the despised pariah, of the native Christian, of the tough Cole, of the fighting Bozdar, of the wild Karen.

In an independent people like the Karens between the Sitang and the Salween, we see the elements of future strength for our rule, and of a glorious gain for humanity. The work which the late Court of Directors rebuked the Indian Government for attempting among the Santhals, has been carried out in the extreme east of its empire, by the assistance of the Commissioner of Pegu. Colonel Phayre, in February last, sent in a report to the Government of India on the state of the Karen mountain tribes of the district of Tounghoo.

On the hill plateau of the country east of the Sitang, extended over an area of 2,000 square miles, dwell the six great clans of Karens, who are to be distinguished on the one hand from their southern brethren of Pegu, and on the other from the independent red Karens to their eastward. They are 50,000 in number, scattered over mountains which rise to 5,000 feet above the sea, and living in small hamlets which seldom consist of more than from thirty to forty houses. There they maintain a hard struggle for life, painfully raising their trifling crops from the ashes of the grass of the hills and the timber of the forest which they cut down to afford them a soil like all the Indo-Chinese mountaineers, and the jungle tribes of the Western Ghats. One rainy season washes away their soil, and as for ten or fifteen years no crop can be again raised on the same spot, they have all the habits without any of the pursuits of a nomadic people. Their search for a scanty subsistence, and their utter poverty consequent on its scantiness, ever kept the several clans and the different villages of the same clan at open war with each other, and led them to enrich themselves by selling women taken in battle to the Siamese, while they put the men to death. Such were the Karens when we annexed Pegu.

Within a year after the annexation the American missionaries in the Tenasserim provinces resolved to visit Tounghoo, once the capital of the king of the district. There beginning in 1853 with one Karen, they laid the foundation of a work which saw Quala, a native, carried on alone with vigour. In January, 1854, was the first baptism; at the close of the year there were nine churches with 741 converts; in May, 1856, there were thirty churches and 2,124 members; and now Colonel Phayre writes in his official report, there are 20,000 professed Christians out of a population of 50,000, building their own churches, paying their own native ministers, raising their own schools, and contributing for the Christianising of their heathen brethren. Their languages have been mastered and reduced to writing, the Bible has been translated and a Christian literature created, village schools have been established, and female and male normal institutes erected, the materials for which the Karens themselves have given, as well as nearly 1,000 rupees in cash. In those institutes, teachers and preachers are to be trained in theology, philosophy, mathematics, and land-surveying, while in addition to the ordinary branches, the females learn "plain sewing, cooking, washing, and general cleanliness, together with nursing the sick and training children."

And these things an official Commissioner of Pegu officially reports to the head of the British Government in India. We draw our facts not from any missionary report, but from official statements. This and such as this would have been done for and among the Santhals had the Court of Directors been able to forget their traditional policy. What the American missionaries have done for the Karens, the Church missionaries would have done for the Santhals. But we would note that the basis was laid and the work largely carried out in Tounghoo, without any assistance from Government, and after a beginning had been made by one native. After five years' successful labour all that the Government gave was Rs. 2,000 for the translation and printing of useful works in the Bghai and Maunie Pagha dialects, and Rs. 1,400 for books and apparatus for the Female Institute as well as a site at Tounghoo. There is no reason why five years hence the same picture should not be drawn of the Santhals. Now Colonel Phayre asks:—

First.—That the sum of Rs. 3,000 be granted towards the building of a schoolhouse for the Karen young men. This school is proposed to be of brick, and one hundred pupils are to be educated therein.

Second.—That I be authorised to indent for, or otherwise procure, for the said school the following instruments:—

1. A telescope on stand of sufficient power to observe the eclipse of Jupiter's satellites.
2. A sextant and artificial horizon.
3. A pair of globes, one foot in diameter.
4. A prismatic compass and chain complete.
5. A set of school maps.

No one will suspect him of romance, or wild enthusiasm, or high-coloured representations. In the sketch that he, with cold official pencil, has drawn of the past and present of the Karens, we see England fulfilling the true mission in the East. In Burmah, and out of savage tribes hardly yet emerged from barbarism, that which the Churches have so long but in vain looked for has been produced—a real native apostle.—Friend of India.

SILK CULTURE IN THE PUNJAB.

A few letters from Mr. Cope, on the culture of the silkworm in the Punjab, were read at the last meeting of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society of India. Mr. Cope infers, from the results of the experiments he has been making, that the silkworm can be successfully reared in the Punjab, not only in the sub-mountain districts, but at a considerable distance from the foot of the hills. A parcel containing one hundred cocoons, picked at random, and sun-dried, was sent for presentation to the Society, and the cocoons were reported as being of a quality which induces the belief that the climate is very favourable to the culture of silk. Mr. C. S. Turnbull states in his report, that the cocoons are far superior to anything of the kind to be had in the North West Provinces. He says:—

"The silk obtained from 100 cocoons, weighing 5½ tola, is 9½ annas, which is something unknown. I reeled four to five cocoons, and should say it deniers ten, which is finer by two deniers than any silk shipped from Bengal. The silk I send is not reel picked, the cocoons reeling so beautifully and clearly. Another great advantage is five chitacks of fine silk could be reeled in a day whilst I reel 3½ chitacks. The silk I have no hesitation in saying ought to sell higher than any of the Bengal marks, with careful reeling, and not be far off the Italian silk. I consider it, I may say, to be faultless, having a good colour, gloss, and mellow, taking into consideration its fibre; but there is one thing wanting, it has little or no elasticity."

The secretary having asked Mr. Cope for further information regarding the cocoons reared by him, that gentleman, said in reply to some questions that were put to him:—

"I have the pleasure to state, in reply to your questions, that the silk cocoons I sent you as a sample of a quantity reared by me, were from the celebrated Cashmere stock. I obtained a supply, under many difficulties last year, and I can, after the most minute inquiries from Cashmere, and the most careful watching during the life of the worms reared by me, as well as during their period of existence as moths, venture to assert that this stock is entirely free from any symptoms of disease. I have carefully studied Count Freschi's diagnosis of this disease, and consider that my previous experience of silk-worm rearing during 1854, 1855, and 1856, gives me some title to form an authoritative opinion on this point."

"Being much occupied, I could not devote that attention to the feeding that silk cocoons undoubtedly required, but my worms were amply provided for, and I agree with Mr. C. Blechynden in his view, that a sudden change in the temperature, which occurred about the time the first worms began spinning, was no doubt the cause of the cocoons not being so full as they would otherwise have been. They lacked no food, but I purposely committed, what would otherwise have been, the great mistake of depending on the natural temperature for the hatching of the eggs. I wished to see how far into the season they would live and thrive. Had the whole stock been hatched simultaneously under the effects of artificial heat, as would have been done, but for such wish, I feel assured that the result would have been still more favourable than it has been pronounced; and if I live to carry out my proposed experiment next year, I hope to show such a result as will place, beyond the possibility of a doubt, the suitability of these and other parts of the Punjab, in point of temperature and food, to the successful rearing of the finest possible silk worms."

Silk is one of those rich productions of the East for which there will always be a large demand from Europe. Its culture at present, on a scale likely to answer commercial purposes, is chiefly confined to certain portions of Bengal. About fifty years ago, when the decrees of Napoleon occasioned an entire cessation of the customary importation of Italian raw silk into England, there was a meeting of the merchants at the Weavers'-hall, and it was resolved unanimously "that Bengal silk was become highly necessary, in many branches of manufacture, and that from experiments lately made it is found fit for purposes to which it had not before been thought suitable." Steps were immediately taken to encourage the culture of silk, and the experiment was continued until 1830, at which time the expense incurred was considered disproportionate to the results realised. There were, however, indications of improvement in the silk, and the quantity imported into England was gradually increased. In Behar, Assam, and Tusser, where the white mulberry has been cultivated, silk worms have been found in abundance. The wild silk worm is still more extensively diffused, though of course it is not much valued. It feeds upon different trees, such as the jujube, ficus religiosa or peepul, the castor oil plant, some of the laurel tribe, and others which are found in almost all the forests of India. There is every reason to believe that the mulberry and the silk worm, which flourish in the hot and moist climate of Bengal, might be carried into drier parts of India, which now appear unsuited to the culture of silk, and also along the valleys of the Himalayas, the low ranges that skirt the borders of the plains north of the Punjab, and into Cabul.—Bombay Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

NATIVE JURORS.—A trial curiously indicative of the value of native jurors came off in the Supreme Court on Saturday. A native was prosecuted for the theft of a quantity of wine, the property of a highly respectable Calcutta firm. He was found guilty, the jury being unanimous. However, immediately after the verdict had been delivered by the foreman, and recorded by the Court, one of the jurors informed the judge, that a native on the jury not understanding English, could not possibly have understood the evidence which had been tendered and recorded in the case, and upon which he was bound to base his acquiescence in the verdict. The native juror thus alluded to was summoned to the front, and questioned by the presiding judge. One or two queries made it evident that he did not understand English, and that the Court should interrogate him through the interpreter. This was done, and the man unhesitatingly acknowledged that he was ignorant of the language in which the trial had been conducted; that he had not understood what the witnesses, who spoke in English, had deposed to; and that all that he had understood were the answers of the native witnesses, given in the vernacular. Upon this the prisoner's counsel moved that the verdict should be set aside, but it was ultimately ruled by the Court that an opportunity should be afforded counsel of showing that the verdict was invalid, in consequence of the ignorance of the native juror. If such things happened in Calcutta, where "educated" natives are plentiful, and where so much care is taken to have the jury-lists what they should be, what may we not expect in the Mofussil, should the proposed subjection of Europeans to the country Courts ever take place, and the juries there be composed in part of Mofussil natives? We answer:—such a state of things as will, as far as Europeans are concerned, render it better for them to have trial by jury prohibited altogether in the Mofussil. In the present case the native juror, though it was impossible that he could have fully understood the proceedings, did not hesitate to concur in a verdict of guilty. His conduct was by no means singular, for we have heard that it is not unfrequent for native jurors to say, when the time for a verdict arrives, "I agree to whatever you (meaning the rest of the jury) think most correct!" This is truly a state of things pleasant to contemplate at a time when at least one Indian governor, and that governor possessed of great influence at home, is working hard to obtain the amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts of the Presidency over which he presides.—Phoenix.

SAUGOR, June 11.—The troops of this station were paraded on the anniversary of the birth of Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen and Empress of India. General Whitlock seemed much pleased with the appearance of the men and their right hearty cheers on the occasion, in which her Majesty's European Indian troops joined right loyally. The booming of the guns, the firing of musketry, and the sound of the bugle and drum, and above all, the sight of the horse artillery passing along at a tearing gallop, not to forget the presence of the ladies, lent a charm to the occasion which seemed to delight every one. But the same loyal demonstrations did not characterise the day at Jubbulpore, where the young Madras and 3rd Europeans behaved in a manner similar to that with which you have become acquainted by the acts of Her Majesty's Indian European troops at Allahabad, Gwalior, and elsewhere. The General, whose presence is to be seen ever at the point where danger threatens, went post-haste to Jubbulpore, where he is at present. Of course, the 3rd Madras Europeans go now through their duty as before, they behave respectfully to their officers, and there is a Court of Inquiry sitting. The octroi (or tax upon goods brought into the town) has recently been raised and extended to a greater number of articles than before, doubtless by order of Government, which has discovered at least one way of extending taxation to the natives. There is not a tax which could more easily and infallibly be levied than one upon weddings, a ceremony upon which natives are most lavish of their wealth. It would add an eclat to the occasion to be married by licence, and doubtless be considered an honour to spend a few extra rupees in obtaining this licence by the wealthier and, indeed, the greater portion of the native population. "We were married by licence," would be the boast of many a newly-wedded pair desirous of proclaiming the honour that attended their marriage day. Although we are comparatively free from sickness, our sanitary arrangements are as bad as one can imagine. One can scarcely walk, ride or drive by the barracks of the native troops without being nearly suffocated by the vile effluvia that is met there. The men have converted the passages left for ventilation between their houses into depositories for filth of the vilest odour. Our new and active cantonment magistrate, who is sweeping the station clean of every nuisance, and introducing many wise measures, will take this as a kindly hint. The young Rajah of Cooch Behar has attained his majority, and now wishes to leave the Wards' institution—where he has received his education, under Baboo Rajendra Lal Mitre—and proceed to his ancestral estates. The Government have accordingly appointed Captain G. Holroyd, of the 43rd N.I., to accompany the young Rajah in the capacity of guide, philosopher, and friend, and to stay with him for a period of three months, after which he is to be left alone to his own devices for the management of his extensive property. Captain Holroyd is to draw a personal allowance of three hundred rupees per month, chargeable, of course, to the Rajah.—Phoenix.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT.—The late Officiating Director General of Post-offices in India, before making over his office to his successor, submitted the annual report of the operations of the Postal Department for the year 1857-58. It exhibits a gross annual income of nineteen lakhs of rupees, exclusive of all service letters, and an annual expenditure of rupees thirty-four lakhs, leaving a deficit of about fifteen lakhs of rupees a-year. The above-mentioned officer, however, anticipates by probable calculations that in the course of eleven years the income will more than square the annual expenses.

THE 58TH N.I.—A letter in the New Punjabee states that the 58th N.I. arrived at Peshawur, from Rawulpindee, late in the past month, re-armed; also, on the 9th of June the 33rd arrived from Jullunder, re-armed; these regiments have relieved the 21st and Kelati Ghilzie regiments of N.I. The change is not at all appreciated in Peshawur, as the two former stood fast through the whole of the mutiny, and the latter had to be dealt with like their brethren down country.

ASSAM.—Government has resolved to re-establish steam communication with Assam, by the despatch to that province, as until latterly, of a steamer and flat at intervals of six weeks. This determination has been arrived at after sore trial and heavy endurance of the high demands of the private companies, whose freight charges have been exorbitant of late; and it is proposed that for some time yet to come rather to rely in such matters upon vessels constructed expressly for the service of the State than to entrust its interests to such tender mercies.

COUNCIL OF CALCUTTA.—Lieut.-General Sir James Outram, Bart., G.C.B., of the Bombay army, is, we are positively assured, to succeed immediately to the Government of Bombay, and it is reported that on an expected vacancy taking place he will also be appointed Commander-in-Chief of the forces serving in that Presidency. Lord Elphinstone's term of office expired last December, but his lordship would probably have remained still longer, had he not himself expressed a desire to be relieved. Lieut.-General Sir Henry Somerset has still nine months to serve as the Commander-in-Chief at Bombay. The departure from Calcutta of Sir James Outram will leave the Supreme Council of India without a single ordinary member, as Mr. Grant's vacancy has never been filled up, and Mr. Ricketts has gone away for six months; moreover, the extraordinary member, Mr. Peacock, is Chief Justice, and therefore liable to be transferred at any moment to his proper place on the bench of the Supreme Court. Under these circumstances, Lord Canning has nominated Mr. H. B. Harrington to a temporary seat in the Supreme Council, which will render it necessary for the Lieutenant governor of the N. W. Provinces to depute a representative to the Legislative Council of India in the room of that gentleman. A seat in the Supreme Council is now worth £8,000 a year, and in the Legislative £5,000. It is said that Maj. gen. Birch is to be Sir James Outram's successor in the Council, and as none but officers in the late Company's service are eligible, it would probably be difficult to name a Bengal officer with superior claims, for Bombay and Madras have each had their turn in the two last incumbents. The Secretariat is after all the general stepping stone to the Council chamber, seeing that out of the three military Councillors selected from the Bengal army two gained their seats by the pen, while only one did so by the sword. The junction of the two offices of Governor and Commander in Chief is by no means without precedent in India. In Bengal the united appointments have been held by Lord Clive, Lord Cornwallis, Lord Hastings, and Lord William Bentinck; and in Madras by the Marquis of Tweeddale.—Mofussilite.

ALLAHABAD.—The New Times regrets to hear of continued cases of coup de soleil in Allahabad. They are matters of almost daily occurrence among the European regiments, and one day no less than six men died from this cause. The brigadier has issued a strong warning to the soldiers against exposing themselves to the sun.

TELEGRAPH LINES IN INDIA.—There are now 8,000 miles and 138 officers in full operation, excluding the great line from Kurrachee to Lahore, and the Central India line from Mirzapore to Nagpore, Hyderabad, and Bellary, very nearly completed. Every possible effort has been made to strengthen all the lines, to prepare for the approaching monsoon, and Sir Wm. O'Shaughnessy, in a letter received from him last month, states, that although numerous interruptions must take place, he has every hope that correspondence will be maintained with fair speed and regularity through the operation of the alternative lines now connecting all the great capitals of the empire. As an illustration of the present satisfactory working of the lines, Sir William states, that the first bulletin of the mail news by the Candia from Suez was despatched from Point de Galle on the 21st April at 10.30 A.M., and was received in Calcutta at 1.15 P.M. It reached Benares, Agra, Delhi, and Umballa before 2 P.M., and Bombay and Indore by the Madras and Bangalore line at 1.40 P.M. Thus the news was spread over more than 5,000 miles of line, and delivered in all the great cities of British India in less than four hours.

THE LATE MR. LONGDEN.—There is a short notice in the Delhi Gazette of the late Mr. Longden, who was for many years connected with the press in Agra. He was latterly employed as superintendent of the Government press at Allahabad. It seems he killed himself at Futteh-pore, whither he had proceeded for change of air; but no reason is assigned for this rash act. He was the only man in the uncovenanted service who enjoyed Rs.1,000 a month in the North-Western Provinces. He held a good many appointments in Agra, was superintendent of the press, editor of the Government Gazette, curator of the Government library, and deputy-commissioner for the reception of claims for compensation. "In his last capacity," says a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette, "his services deserve special mention. The task entrusted to him was a most invidious one. He was expected to scrutinise closely every statement sent in to him, and to reject items not supported by sound and sufficient proofs. He accomplished the task in a singularly successful manner; he has been praised by his Government, and has not made a single enemy among the community. Since the removal of the press to Allahabad he has had many formidable difficulties to contend with, all of which may be laid at the door of Lord Canning, but the action of the press, though overwhelmed with work, has been remarkably quick and regular, and a type foundry, superintended by professional men from Germany, has recently been established on a very large scale. Mr. Longden was pre-eminently the leading spirit in these and numerous other operations connected with typography and lithography, and it will be difficult to find a fit successor to him. There were upwards of five hundred native Christians, including men, women and children, who looked upon Mr. Longden as their father and patron, and the adult male portion of which were employed of the press. The grief and affliction into which these poor helpless creatures have been plunged can be better imagined than described. I almost think the loss sufficiently great and public to justify the issue of a notification on the subject by Government."

MORAR, June 20.—At daybreak this morning the whole of the 1st brigade Gwalior field force, consisting of H.M.'s 17th lancers, 2nd regiment Mahratta horse, No. 21 light field battery, H.M.'s 71st highland light infantry, 3rd Bengal European regiment, 9th Bombay N.I., and 1st Gwalior infantry, were paraded to witness the presentation of the Victoria Cross to Lieutenant Hugh Gough, 1st Bengal light cavalry, second in command of the 2nd Mahratta horse. Brigadier Sir Charles Stuart, K.C.B., drew up the troops in quarter distance column in front of the cantonments. A salute of seventeen guns from Major Ommaney's battery royal artillery announced the arrival of his highness the Maharajah of Gwalior to view the ceremony. Shortly afterwards the brigade, deploying into line, took open order for the inspection of Brigadier General Sir Robert Napier, K.C.B., commanding the division, who was saluted on his approach by Major Light's battery. Immediately afterwards the different regiments were formed up in quarter distance column, enclosing a square which was occupied by the General with a very brilliant staff, many ladies of the station, and Scindiah himself. Lieutenant Gough having been called to the front, the General addressed the troops as follows:—"Soldiers of the Gwalior Brigade, we have met together this morning to witness the decoration of a gallant officer with that special mark of distinction the Victoria Cross. Her most gracious Majesty Queen Victoria would have bestowed this with her own hands, had circumstances permitted, but the Indian service having kept the gallant lieutenant out here, the honour of giving it in the presence of you all has been delegated to me by her most gracious Majesty through his lordship the Commander-in-chief. It is bestowed for deeds of gallantry in front of the enemy, performed by Lieutenant Hugh Gough, more especially on the 12th November, 1857, when he charged through a swamp and captured two guns from a greatly superior force. On this occasion Lt. Gough engaged three of the enemy with his own hand, and had his horse shot under him. Again, on the 25th February, 1858, he performed a similar deed of valour, and had two horses killed under him, and was severely wounded. Nor are these the only services of this brave young officer. Throughout the siege of Delhi, with the pursuing column under Brigadier Greathed, at Rohtuk, Boolundshuhur, Agra, Allypore, Lucknow, Cawnpore, Futtehghur, and, finally, at the capture of Lucknow, Lieutenant Gough has shown to his comrades an example the most distinguished and the most brilliant for bravery and military bearing. To have earned this mark of her most gracious Majesty's approval is an honour to be coveted by us all; for it is an order which is not confined to one class alone. Rank cannot procure it—wealth cannot buy it. It is attainable by the youngest soldier on this parade, as by any officer, however distinguished, or however well connected; and, besides the intrinsic merits of the order itself, we all know how much its value is enhanced as being the especial gift of her most gracious Majesty, distinguished beyond all the sovereigns in the world for her high appreciation of the soldier's worth; her gentle thought of them when sick or wounded, and her ever-ready regard for their welfare. There are, I doubt not, old soldiers present here who either in the Sutlej or Punjab campaigns have added lustre to the British army under that noble and distinguished leader Viscount Gough—it is to me, who had the honour of serving under him there, a pleasure peculiarly gratifying in thus honouring one of his name and lineage, and well was it to be expected that a Hugh Gough should ever be found among the foremost, where fame and honours are the prize. Elèves of the Victoria Cross! advance and see your comrade decorated." The columns then presented arms, and taking up their former positions deployed into line—the General and staff took post at the flag, when the troops marched past and went to their lines.

THE LATE REV. W. SMITH.—We regret to hear of the death of the Rev. W. Smith, a Baptist missionary at Benares. We find in the Oriental Baptist for June an interesting notice of Mr. Smith's life and labours. He was born at Futtehghur in 1781. His father was a sergeant-major in a native regiment. He was educated in the Orphan School at Futtehghur, and joined the army in 1798. In 1810 he was converted through the preaching of the Rev. J. Peter, at Balasore. He soon commenced preaching to the native drummers of his regiment. For this he was reprimanded; his commanding officer said that such proceedings would cause a revolution. Mr. Smith continued preaching and distributing tracts, until he was put under arrest, and threatened with a court martial. He was however released, and afterwards, through the efforts of the Serampore missionaries, he obtained his discharge from the army. He laboured two years at Serampore, and on the 15th of February, 1817, arrived at Benares for the purpose of establishing a mission. For forty-two years he continued to preach the Gospel there and in the region round about, with no little success, commending the doctrines which he inculcated by the conformity of his life. He died on the 10th of May last, aged 78 years.—Guardian.

MEAN MEER.—The Lahore Chronicle says: "We regret to hear that during the few excessively hot days which we have lately experienced, no less than thirteen European soldiers have died at Mean Meer from the effects of the heat."

SERGEANT J. THOMAS.—On the 16th June there was a general parade of all the troops at Delhi to witness the presentation of a Victoria Cross to Bombardier (now Sergeant) J. Thomas, 4th company 1st Battalion Bengal Artillery, for distinguished gallantry at Lucknow on the 27th September, for having saved a wounded soldier from the hands of the enemy, and carried him on his back to camp when he was returning to the Residency from a sortie. The manner in which the distinction was conferred on Sergeant Thomas is thus described by a correspondent of the Delhi Gazette:—"The troops in quarter distance column were formed into a square, and Sergeant Thomas, who is a fine specimen of a British soldier, having been called into the centre, Brigadier H. Troup read to him a copy of the War-office despatch, and other documents, showing the desire of her Majesty that the cross should be delivered in such a public and formal manner as should best evince her Majesty's sense of the noble daring displayed by this brave soldier, and to testify her wish that a distinction in which the officer and private soldier may equally share may be highly prized, and eagerly sought after by all, of whatever rank or degree, in her Majesty's naval and military services; and especially desiring, as the absence of the sergeant from England on her service rendered it impossible that he should receive this mark of her Majesty's favour at her own hands, nothing should be omitted which should tend to redound to his honour, and enhance the value of this decoration, in the time and manner of its presentation. The brigadier then addressed the bombardier in a suitable manner, after which the brigade presented arms and gave three hearty cheers for the Queen."

FUTTEGHURH, June 20.—Ahmed Yar Khan, the Nazim of the ex-Nawab, is come in, and with Wuzer Khan, coachman, is under trial; Mohsum Aly Khan, the other Nazim, is also expected soon; they will probably be dealt with as gently as the other rebels have been. Of all the confiscated property of the ex-Nawab, Pye Bagh is the most beautiful building, and well adapted as a place of public resort. Instead of allowing it to go to ruin the Government ought to put it in repair, keep up the splendid garden, and make the house available for the purposes to which the Taj at your station is so well adapted, i. e. a place for the invalid to benefit by a temporary change of residence, or pic-nics. The income thus derived would soon repay all outlay which may be required to make it a suitable visiting place. The palace of the exiled rebel, which had splendid out-offices, would, if put in repair, furnish quarters for native infantry and cavalry, but, after the recent loot in the city by the military police, perhaps it would not be expedient to locate them there. The cartage of the materials and levelling of the ruins to the grounds would cost an immense deal, but as the native army at this station are unhoused, it would be cheaper to make use of the Nawab's property than take in other ground to build their barracks on. I trust in these clipping times, when reduction in general and economy in particular is the rule, some such plan may be adopted as above suggested. If the site and materials be sold it will fetch but a nominal price.

CAMP BARAITCH, June 15.—The head quarters of the 2nd battalion rifle brigade marched for Lucknow this morning; the two companies at Sidonia Ghat come in to-morrow and follow after; the only Europeans this side the Gogra, then, will be H.M.'s 20th regiment and Major Moir's troop B.H.A., the former and four guns of the latter at Gonda, and the other two guns at this place till further orders. The Ghats on the Raptée will be guarded at Bankee by the Oude police and Millett's jezalchees; Colonel Bradford, C.B., remaining opposite the Jerwah Pass with his regiment and some cavalry for the present. The Trans-Gogra force will be then, H.M.'s 20th and four guns B.H.A. at Gonda, with 1st Sikh infantry and 2nd regiment Hodson's horse. At Baraich two guns B.H.A., 1st Punjab cavalry, and 6th Punjab infantry, and the 3rd regiment Hodson's horse at Bulrampore and Toolseepoor.

They seem to say this part of the country is unhealthy, I do not believe it; I have not seen a nicer looking part of India, not even the Punjab, and believe if Europeans were properly housed and taken care of this would prove one of the healthiest parts of India; the rifles have only lost nine men since coming in here in March, and have been mostly in camp. They are now gone to, in my opinion, a far more unhealthy position, the old cantonments at Lucknow. Just before the small force at Nanparah left for here three elephants were found in the jungle near that place, supposed to have been turned loose by the rebels. I forgot to say the Moradabad Levy is to be stationed at Nanparah.

SIMLA, June 22.—The races at Annandale on the 20th were considerably marred by heavy rain. The threatening aspect of the weather deterred many from attending, and those who went came in for a good soaking, notwithstanding the various contrivances in the shape of overcoats, warranted to retain any amount of moisture. There were about a dozen ladies present. The sports, consisting of horse and foot races, bonnet and donkey races, created much amusement, and had the weather been favourable, a pleasant day would have been passed; as it was, people were glad to hurry away between the showers, and get under cover the best way they could. The 93rd Highland band was in attendance with a feast of music, while Mr. Berrill had provided more substantial delicacies for those who required them. The fancy dress ball, given by the officers of the 7th Hussars, was without exception the best Simla has seen for years. Dancing commenced at 10 p.m., and was kept up, with an occasional Scotch reel, till near 5 a.m. to day.

BERHAMPORE, June 18.—Yesterday the men remained perfectly quiet, with the exception of appointing a colonel, major, and adjutant amongst themselves. M. commands and issues his orders daily; they also put up, "Welcome to Civilians" over the barracks. This morning all the men who were in the right wing barracks have moved bag and baggage over to that inhabited by the left wing; I suppose to concentrate their forces. The men who have not mutinied, about 160, have been moved on off the square, next to the artillery. I hear the mutineers have also appointed officers. The lieutenants wear their ramrods stuck in their waist-belts for swords. No officer goes near them; they have their rations as usual, but no lights, rum, or punkah coolies. Last night the colonel told off a fatigue party to pull the punkahs. We were out calling this morning, and passed the barracks; the men were all perfectly quiet, lying within cots. I suppose we shall have General Hearsey here in a few days, and some Queen's troops. They all seem to think the 5th will be sent to some station where there is a Queen's corps. These mutineers walk all about the station, and are perfectly quiet. I cannot understand their remaining so, and not making rows in the bazaar. Yesterday they say the three cavalry men got off in an ekka, also some of the mutineers, and two of the prisoners escaped from the cells. I forgot to say that yesterday morning between sixty and seventy of the mutineers marched down to the main-guard, calling on the prisoners to come out. The sergeant on guard turned out his guard, and the prisoners said they would remain where they were, and were not such fools to get into a scrape for a few days so as to have double punishment hereafter. Sunday Morning.

—I must send this off; the men have done nothing but looting the bazaar a little, not to any great extent. On the 22nd June two steamers with flats proceeded up the river from Calcutta to Berhampore, conveying 500 men of H.M.'s 99th Foot and two nine-pounders. Let us hope the misguided men of the 5th Europeans will come to their senses before there is any occasion to use force. On Monday morning the Government received an express on the subject, but could not send troops away in less than two whole days.—Englishman.

THE RAJAH OF RAMGURH and his two sons have submitted to Government.

FYZABAD, June 23.—A few weeks past the rebel Ranee of Toolseepore came into Fyzabad, and is living here with a small retinue of servants and maidservants in a moderately large house near the Motee Mahal. From the style she lives in, it seems her residence in the city is countenanced by Government. She is accompanied by an old aunt of the notorious rebel chief Rajah Davee Buksh, of Gondah, who has fled into the Nepaul hills, with others of his comrades, and has not yet been caught. This old woman has been asked by our authorities to persuade Rajah Davee Buksh to come and submit himself to Government, which she said it was not in her power to effect; for she is for ever alienated from the rebel Rajah, in her not having followed his fortunes like the rest of his household. The Ranee of Toolseepore is intending to engage the services of an able English counsellor to try thereby, if possible, to get her estates back from Government, which have been confiscated and made over to the Rajah of Bulrampore for his fidelity to the British cause.

SHAHJEHANPORE, June 19.—The rebels have relieved the sub-Himalayan tracts adjoining the northern parts of this district of their presence. Hitherto they have much disgusted us with hovering about the neighbourhood of the Kowreeal river. Now they seem to have gone after the main body to Nepal by way of the Goruckpore teraie. Their chief leaders seem to have been Goolab Sing, a connection of Nurput Sing of Roodee, and two Peeleebheet Mahomedans called Choonna Moona. The season seems determined to keep up its eccentric character; after a strangely early commencement of the rain the westerly wind has set in with great force. The heat has been of a particularly stewing description; nevertheless, the European troops keep healthy; their long delayed barracks are still far off completion. The 82nd reside in temporary buildings and the artillery chiefly in the school-house. The American methodist episcopalians are about to establish a mission here; they seem to have chosen the east of the Ganges, Oude and Rohilkund, as the scene of their labours. The Rev. Dr. Butler of Lucknow appears charged with the organization of the mission.

HONORARY TITLES.—We are given to understand that the Government of India have been pleased to confer the title of Rajah Bahadoor on Baboo Sheorundun Singh of Shewur, in consequence of good services rendered to the State during the late rebellion; and for similar reasons the title of Rajah has also been conferred on a near relation of the Bettiah Rajah.

DUM-DUM.—Great complaints are made of the reprehensible conduct of some of the military at Dum-Dum. The charges against them are so serious, and the offence so utterly disgraceful to the character of a British soldier, that were we not in a position to be convinced of its truth, we should hesitate to publish it. It appears to be the practice for some of the European soldiers to turn out in armed parties at night, and molest and rob all passers by. On the 31st June two syces were severely beaten on the road to Cox's Bungalow, and on another evening a gentleman travelling in his carriage from Huldah to Calcutta was stopped, and the coachman wounded with a sword. The Dak-runners on the line from Dum-Dum to Barasett are constantly complaining of the attempts of these military marauders to stop them and open their parcels. So boldly is all this done that they do not take the trouble to divest themselves of their regimentals! We understand the Nuddea commissioners have made energetic remonstrances against this state of things, and searching inquiry is being made by the authorities at Dum-Dum. We trust the offenders will meet with condign punishment on their discovery.—Englishman.

JAILORS' PERQUISITES.—We have been informed that besides a small pay, a percentage on the proceeds of the sale of the gaol manufactures is usually allowed by Government to the officers in charge of the district gaols. The rate at which this commission is allowed is not uniform. In some places it is one-fourth, and in others one-third of the proceeds. In the Tenasserim and Martaban provinces the latter is the prevailing rate. The jailor of Moulmein, we hear, used to draw, for several years past, one-third of the proceeds of the sale of the gaol manufactures in addition to the substantive pay of his office. Since 1856-57, the manufactures of the local prison have, mainly through the exertions of that officer, greatly increased, so that in one year the sale of the manufactures amounted to nearly thirty thousand rupees, one-third of which is due to the jailor. The commissioner of the Tenasserim provinces, however, objected to the disbursement of the amount, on the ground that such heavy sums of money should not be paid to a servant of Government without the special orders of the supreme Government. The jailor applied to the Accountant general, who referred to the commissioner, and the whole case has been submitted to the Governor general in Council for final disposal.—Hurkaru.

COMPENSATION TO LIFE INSURANCE SOCIETIES.—We understand that another application has been submitted to the Government of India by a life insurance society soliciting compensation for the loss sustained by it on account of the death of a gentleman residing in the N. W. provinces, who was murdered by the mutineers, and whose life was previously insured by it. The Governor general, however, remarked that no final decision can be given with reference to the above application until instructions are received from the Secretary of State, to whom his Lordship in Council has written on the subject.

THE RANEE OF TIRWA.—Information has been received of the death of the Ranee of Tirwa. This lady's loyalty to our Government during the rebellion was never suspected by the authorities; it is not known what caused her death, perhaps she was much concerned about and afraid of the fate which awaited her after some ordinance, &c., had recently been disinterred from her premises. She dies intestate, and an adopted child only is left to represent the family.

A PLACE OF SECURITY.—The other day a letter was delivered to a friend at Allahabad, which had been lying in the post-office since last March. The peon said it had been in the "Amanut" (literally "place of security") all the time. This, in point of felicity of expression, is on a par with the playful humour of the Postmaster general, who publishes periodically a list of "unclaimed letters," coolly implying that the responsibility of their correct delivery rests on the addressee, and not on the post-office department.

TEA PLANTATIONS.—Six of the Government tea plantations in the Himalayan provinces are to be made over to private capitalists, and it is proposed to form a joint stock company in London, to work them.

THE LATE MR. TANDY.—The Government of India have granted a compassionate allowance of Rs. 240 per annum to the orphan boy O'Brien Tandy (now in Ireland), the son of the late Mr. B. Tandy, belonging to the Volunteer Cavalry at Agra, who was killed in an action with the mutineers.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE AMALGAMATION MINUTE.—The following is the letter of the Judges of the Supreme Court on the Amalgamation Minute of his Excellency the Governor. The communication is dated the 30th May:—"We have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Excellency's letter in Council, bearing date the 27th April, 1859, accompanied by a copy of a minute recorded by your Excellency in Council on the subject of the consolidation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts into a single high court, and on the remodelling of the provincial courts, and informing us that without our concurrence, the commission alluded to in the concluding paragraph of the minute will be at once appointed. We much regret that there has been any delay on our part in answering this communication. But we thought it due to the importance of the subject that we should personally confer together upon it, and it is only within the last few days that we have had the opportunity of doing so. We observe that the minute simply invites our concurrence in the appointment of a Commission "to prepare a statement of the arrangements under which the union of the Supreme and Sudder Courts and the remodelling of the provincial courts may with the greatest prospect of public advantage be effected." Our opinion is not now asked upon the policy itself of uniting the two courts, and we do not presume to offer any opinion upon it. But considering the variety of schemes which have been already proposed on this subject, and to some of which the term "consolidation" or "amalgamation" would in strictness scarcely be applicable, we would respectfully suggest that the matter should be referred to the proposed commissioners in more general terms, and that they should be requested to report what are in their opinion the evils existing in the present system of judicature and by what means they may be most effectually remedied. The gentlemen named as commissioners would have before them your Excellency's minute, together with any information on the question of consolidation which may be in the possession of Government. But it seems to us to be due to the great local and professional experience of those gentlemen and calculated to be advantageous to the public, that they should not be confined to a mere statement of the arrangements under which the union of the Supreme and Sudder Courts and the remodelling of the provincial courts may be effected. We are not aware of the existence of any spirit of antagonism between the Supreme and the Sudder Courts of this presidency, and are convinced that neither of them is open to the imputation of disparaging the other. But we have reason to believe that within the limits of its own jurisdiction, the Supreme Court enjoys the full confidence of the native community as well as of the mercantile class amongst the European inhabitants, and we do not think that any arrangement would be generally satisfactory by which the present original jurisdiction of the Supreme Court should be transferred to any tribunal of inferior weight or less independent of the local Government. This, however, is not a fitting occasion for entering into details, and we conclude by assuring the Government, that we shall at all times be anxious to co-operate with it in maturing and giving effect to any measures for the establishment of an improved system of judicature in this Presidency." The Governor in Council expressed his entire concurrence in the suggestions offered above. Our readers are aware that the Commission has been appointed. The questions to be brought under consideration have also been pointed out.—Spectator.

THE PHOTOGRAPHIC ESTABLISHMENT.—We learn from the Madras papers that the Government has closed its photographic establishment. Sir Charles Trevelyan has acted very properly in doing away with an unnecessarily expensive establishment. Captain Tripe has forwarded a report to Government of the work executed during the last twenty-six months, and states that the expenditure for that period was Rs. 28,360. Admitting that there was in store a stock of furniture, of the value of Rs. 8,618, and that many pictures had been supplied to Government and private parties, still Rs. 1,200 a month is too much for perhaps a few simple photographic delineations of old buildings and picturesque ruins. A good landscape painter might be engaged to paint similar views for Rs. 500 or Rs. 600 a month, and he would produce work of a more valuable description, and do his sketches more rapidly than the Madras photographers. The Madras Spectator, in noticing the Report of Capt. Tripe, says that "it conveyed information as to the work yet to be performed in this presidency, for the delineation of such ancient buildings or inscriptions as were rapidly falling to decay, and required being recorded photographically at an early date. Of these the most noticeable were Mahavellipooram, or the Seven Pagodas, Gingee, Hullabede; the Jain remains in Canara and Bejanuggur, but the list seemed to the Government to be far from complete. The Governor in Council, however, felt it to be his duty, in the present state of the finances of India, to bring the expenditure on account of the establishment to an immediate close. Capt. Tripe has been directed to undertake no new work, and to arrange for completing that on hand, and for the discharge of the servants at the earliest possible date. The apparatus and stock are open to purchase. Government state in their order, that they do not doubt that when the present resolution is publicly known, private photographers will not be wanting to occupy the field from which they have withdrawn, and that the work of recording the monuments and antiquities of the country may be safely left to their efforts.

THE HYDERABAD CONTINGENT.—It is reported that orders have been issued to horse all the companies of artillery in the Hyderabad Contingent, which is hereafter to be composed of Europeans.

INVESTITURE OF SIR HUGH ROSE.—On Monday, June 27, at 4 o'clock P.M., the troops paraded at the quarters of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, for the purpose of the investiture of Major-general Sir Hugh Rose with the Insignia of a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath. The cavalcade, with the gallant general in an open carriage, left his bungalow at half-past 4 o'clock, his old campaigners, the 14th light dragoons, taking the lead, and the 6th (Inniskilling) dragoons, with their standard, brought up the rear. On alighting from the carriage at his Excellency's quarters, Sir Hugh Rose was received by the officers of the staff of army headquarters, the divisional and brigade staff, and supported by two companions of the Order of the Bath—Colonels Green and Tapp—one on each side, who conducted him to the upper room, where were assembled the whole of the ladies of the stations of Kirkee and Poona, and the chaplains, with Bishop Hardinge, all in full canonicals; the European Professors of the Poona College; and the principal civil officers. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief was seated at the head of the room on a dais adorned and covered with a canopy of crimson cloth. On Sir Hugh Rose's arrival, the military secretary, Colonel Somerset, C.B., read aloud her most gracious Majesty's commands, on the conclusion of which Sir Henry Somerset, in a brief address, passed a high eulogium on Sir Hugh Rose's valour, and the eminent services he has rendered to his Queen and country, and concluded by investing him, in due form, with the Red Ribbon, and brilliant Star of a Knight Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath. The word was then passed to the troops, who gave the general salute by presenting arms, the bands playing "God save the Queen," and the artillery firing thirteen guns, the usual salute of a major general commanding a division. After a cordial greeting and shaking of hands, the gallant general took his departure, and was attended to his carriage in like manner as he was received by the various military officers, and was escorted to his bungalow, as before, by the Light and Inniskilling dragoons, and thus ended a pleasing and well-earned ceremony; and in the concluding words of Sir Henry Somerset's address we wish that Sir Hugh Rose may live long to enjoy his honours. The troops looked remarkably well, and the Jagers for the first time appeared in their new uniform, the scarlet tunic, and were headed by a fine brass band. As the 25th N. L. I. were returning to their lines they were met by their old companions in arms, the 14th dragoons, who greeted them with a loud and hearty hurrah, which was returned by the sepoys in like good manner, and the notice thus taken of them by the 14th made them both proud and happy. Previous to the investiture, Sir Henry Somerset addressed Sir Hugh Rose in the following terms:—"Sir Hugh Rose, I have been honoured by her Majesty's commands, under her royal warrant, to represent her on the occasion of investing you with the Insignia of the Division of the First Class of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath, omitting nothing which can tend to evince her Majesty's regard towards you for your devotion and gallantry in her service. I feel myself highly honoured in having been selected as the medium for conferring upon you this great dignity and distinction. Your career during all the important operations of the troops under your command in Central India, which have rendered such eminent services to the Empire, has been marked by a series of gallant deeds and successes which have been observed with pride and admiration by the Government, the army, and your countrymen, and are now rewarded by our gracious Sovereign by conferring on you in this public manner the highest military order in her Majesty's gift. May you live long to enjoy her Majesty's continued favours. I now proceed to invest you in the name of her Majesty the Queen." His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief entertained Sir Hugh Rose at a grand banquet on the night of the 28th, to which all the leading members of society were invited. —Poona Observer.

NUGGUR PARKUR.—The following telegram regarding the operation of the forces near Nuggur Parkur has been received at Bombay:—"Coolies attacked Nuggur in force; on the 21st June sharp fight; rebels completely defeated; Johnstone's Belooches behaved nobly, about twenty rebels killed; many more carried off. The casualties on our side, Lieutenant Fraser wounded." It is said that on the night of the attack upon our troops the coolies came down by surprise and released all the State prisoners that had been secured by our forces since the commencement of operations in this quarter. The particulars of the attack by the coolies have not as yet transpired. It is said that Tyrwhitt's levy, who were in charge of Nuggur at the time, behaved well.

THE NEW STEAM TRAIN organized by Mr. Bourne for the navigation of the Indus has turned out a complete failure.

H.M.'s 61st REGIMENT.—The head-quarters wing of H.M.'s 61st regiment, consisting of 1 field officer, 4 captains, 9 subalterns, 4 staff officers, 500 rank and file, 25 women and 41 children, arrived at Bombay from Poona by rail on the morning of the 28th June, and embarked on board the P. and O. Co.'s steamer Oriental, which left this port for Mauritius the following morning. The left wing, consisting of one captain, 4 subalterns, 1 staff, 266 rank and file, 10 women and 13 children, left Bombay on the 30th by H.M.'s steamer Prince Arthur.

CRIMINAL SESSIONS.—The second criminal sessions of this year commenced on the 5th July. The puisne judge, Sir Joseph Arnould, presided on the occasion. The calendar is light, there being but thirty cases and forty-three prisoners committed for trial by our magistrates. Of these twelve cases are of larceny, five of stealing in dwelling-houses, four of embezzlement, two of breach of trust, two of perjury, three of cutting and wounding, one of manslaughter, and one of murder. Six of the prisoners have been committed for trial by Mr. Crawford, sixteen by Mr. Oliver, and eight by Mr. Leeke. Of the forty-three prisoners, nine are Christians, three Parsees, twenty Hindoos, and eleven Mahomedans.

VICTORIA MUSEUM.—From the report on the Government Central Museum for the year 1858-59, it appears that the subscriptions towards the Victoria Museum have reached the gross amount of Rs. 70,000. This is the largest subscription that has ever been raised in the island of Bombay itself, and considering that the Europeans of the town have not contributed Rs. 2,000 towards it, is most creditable to the native community. Jugonath Sunkersett, Munguldass Nathoooboy, and Framjee Nusserwanjee, Esqrs., have subscribed Rs. 5,000 each, and the brothers of the Cama family nearly Rs. 23,000 between them.

RAILWAY JUNCTION.—The question of the point of junction between the Madras N.W. line and the Bombay railway across the Rachore Doab has been referred for the final decision of the Government of India, it having been settled by the authorities of the presidency in communication with the Madras Government that it should be fixed at Moodgul.

THE CAZEE OF BOMBAY.—Government have requested the commissioner of police and four moulvies from out stations to form themselves into a committee, to hear the complaints preferred by a portion of the Mahomedan community against Mahomed Yoofoof Moorgay, Cazeer of Bombay.

BREVET COLONEL T. WILLIAMS, C.B., of H.M.'s 4th (King's Own) regiment of foot, is appointed a brigadier of the 2nd class to command the brigade at Neemuch.

PARELL.—A public library and reading room has been opened at Parell, and the infant institution has received donations from Colonel Bates, Lord Dangan, Dr. Giraud, and Bomonjee Jejeebhoy, Esq.

LIEUTENANT WILLIAM BANNERMAN, of the 3rd regiment, N.I., has been appointed to act as second in command of the 2nd regiment Southern Mahratta Horse, vice Kerr, proceeded to Europe on furlough.

THE STRAITS.

THE MASSACRE AT BORNEO.—Additional intelligence has been received of the fearful tragedy acted at Banjermassing, on the south coast of Borneo, in the shape of a brutal massacre of the Europeans. It appears that for some time past great discontent existed among the natives at the election of the new sultan, who was not the lineal descendant of their late ruler, but had been adopted by him as a son; and a conspiracy was formed to depose him unknown to the Dutch resident, Count Bentheim Feckenburg Rheda. At the head of the conspiracy was a certain Aling, a native of Muning, who aspired to the sovereignty of Banjermassing, calling himself in his proclamations by the style and title of Radja Kuning. On the breaking out of the conspiracy, a general massacre of the Europeans was to take place. The flag of the conspirators was unfurled on the 1st of May, and the European workmen employed in the coal mines of "Julia Hermina," belonging to a joint-stock company, and situated near Kalangan, were suddenly attacked, overpowered, and brutally murdered, with the exception of two or three women, who managed to conceal themselves with their children. An attack was then made on the establishment at Pangeran, but the assailants had to draw off with some loss, having met with a very warm reception. In other parts of the island the massacre of the Europeans was general and simultaneous. Amongst the unfortunate victims of this brutal and wholesale murder which, if not so numerous, was as deeply laid as the revolting massacre of Cawnpore or Lucknow, are five German missionaries, Messrs. Hammer, Rott, Wiegand, Kind, and Hofmeister, with their wives and children. The total number of Europeans murdered and missing is between seventy and eighty. Most providentially, Colonel Andresen had arrived a few days previously (April 28) with a detachment of 150 men of the 9th battalion, to relieve Count Bentheim of the civil government as a resident, and to take the military command of the station. This probably preserved Tatus, the chief town of Banjermassing, from a similar horrible fate; but a party of fifty men, sent for the protection of Pangeran, were intercepted by a strong band of rebels, and obliged to return. Orders were immediately after dispatched by the resident to send over the other five companies of the 9th battalion, some artillery, and half a company of sappers, by the Dutch war steamers Montrado and Ardjuno, to Banjermassing, as a reinforcement and protection. Later accounts had been received from Pangeran, stating that the little band of Europeans shut up there were defending themselves most heroically, and had successfully withstood and driven back the assailants ten different times. Great complaints had been made against the government, or at least against the resident, for not affording the workmen of the coal-mining company the protection they were promised by their charter; and the Governor General had ordered an official investigation to be made, with a view of ascertaining whether these charges had any foundation. The following also were among the victims of this cold-blooded outrage:—Mr. Wijumalen and family (except the three youngest children), Mr. and Mrs. Motley and child (English), Dr. Hinzenger, Messrs. Van Hercken, Eisenger, Brood, and other European residents.—China Telegraph.

MR. J. JARVIE.—The King of Denmark, to mark his appreciation of the services of Mr. J. Jarvie, consul for Denmark at Singapore, in negotiating a treaty of friendship and commerce between Denmark and Siam, has recently created that gentleman a Chevalier of the Royal Order of Danebrog. A Danish man-of-war may be expected here about September, which, after carrying the ratified treaty to Siam, will proceed to Japan with a plenipotentiary empowered to negotiate a treaty with the government of that country.

FORTIFICATIONS OF SINGAPORE.—We are glad to see from the Singapore Free Press that that settlement is being strongly fortified. Government-hill is being surrounded by batteries with from twenty-five to thirty guns each, Fort Fullerton is being enlarged to nearly three times its former extent, and small works are contemplated on Pearl's Hill and Mount Sophia. The cost of the works already authorised is about 840,000 dollars. The Russians have a large force at the mouth of the Amoor, and the French on the coast of Cochin China.

JAVA.

The Dutch papers received by the last Overland Mail state that three gentlemen, some resident at the Hague and some in the East Indies, have applied for permission to bring into cultivation the Obie islands, lying on the east coast of Java. These islands are described as being peculiarly adapted for the cultivation of spices, while the richness and fertility of the soil produce sufficient provisions to maintain a great number of coolies.

The death of Mr. F. Zollinger, well known for his scientific and ethnographical researches in the Indian Archipelago, is recorded as having taken place at Probolinggo on the 19th May.

Accounts from Macassar state that the health of the troops forming part of the Boni expedition who had been sent there is not at all satisfactory, much sickness prevailing among them. The troops left in occupation of Bajoa, on the coast of Boni, were also suffering greatly from sickness, and the Bugis were thereby emboldened to keep up a constant system of annoyance. The steam-vessel of war Groningen unfortunately grounded close to the shore, near Signy, where the Bugis have their camp. They immediately threw up a battery opposite the steamer, on which they mounted a cannon, and opened fire upon the vessel. The range of the gun was too elevated, so that all the shot passed over the vessel without doing any harm. From the position of the Groningen the enemy's fire could not be answered. In the evening the Bugis surrounded the ship with a great many prahus and opened a heavy fire of musketry upon her, but without inflicting any injury. A couple of discharges of case shot from a 30-pounder drove the enemy away. The Groningen succeeded in getting off the next morning without any apparent damage. The interior of Palembang was still in an unsettled state, although no general gathering of the rebels had taken place. The troops were harassed by marching through the jungle in different directions against parties of the rebels, who were dispersed only to reappear in another quarter. It was reported that the dethroned Sultan of Jambi had collected a force of 1,500 men from Korinchi, with which he intended to attack Jambi after the Puasa or fasting month was ended. No further particulars had been received from Banjermassing; but the Java Courant, of the 8th current, states that according to a telegram received from Sonrabaya more tranquillising intelligence might be expected regarding the state of affairs in the kingdom of Banjermassing.

Shocks of earthquake were experienced on several occasions at Banda and Ternate in March and April, and very heavy rains, accompanied by strong winds, had prevailed. The quantity of nutmegs collected during the month of March and April at Banda was about 104,260 lbs. of nuts, and 25,085 lbs. of mace.—Singapore Free Press.

Her Majesty's Indian Forces.

Fort William, June 20.—No. 883.—H.E. the Viceroy and Gov. Gen. of India in Council calls the attention of the English soldiers of H.M.'s Indian forces to this General Order:—

On entering the service of the East India Company, every soldier was attested in the following manner:—

Among the "Questions to be put separately by the justice to a recruit on enlisting," was this one:

"8. Are you willing to be attested to serve in the East India Company's (infantry, cavalry, or artillery, as the case might be,) for the term of ———, provided the said Company should so long require your services, and also for such further term, not exceeding two years, as shall be directed by the commanding officer on any foreign station?"

He then made the following declaration before the justice on attestation:

"I, ———, do declare, that the above questions have been separately put to me; that the answers thereto have been read over to me; and that they are the same that I gave, and are true."

He then took the following oath:—

"I ——— do make oath, that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and that I will, as in duty bound, honestly and faithfully defend her Majesty, her heirs and successors, in person, crown, and dignity against all enemies, and will observe and obey all orders of her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and of the generals and officers set over me."

"And that I also will be true to the said Company, and will duly observe and obey all their orders, and the orders of their generals and officers who shall be lawfully set over me."

The first part of the oath is not a mere oath of allegiance, but an oath both of allegiance and of military service. It is not an oath taken by civilians; for when a civilian takes an oath of allegiance, he swears that he will be faithful and bear true allegiance to the Queen, and nothing more. But it is precisely the same oath as that under which every soldier of H.M.'s service, enlisted in England and elsewhere, engages to serve in the royal army, and it is the only oath administered to a recruit on attestation for H.M.'s service.

The second part of the oath binds the soldier to serve the East India Company faithfully, and to obey orders, precisely in the same terms as those in which in the first part of the oath he has sworn to serve the Queen.

Every man who took this oath bound himself to serve the Crown as well as the Company, but with a clear understanding that he was to serve in India only, and exclusively in the British forces of the Company, as distinct from the ordinary service of the Crown.

It having been deemed expedient by the Legislature of the United Kingdom that the East India Company should cease to administer the Government of India in trust for the Crown, an Act of Parliament was passed on the 2nd of August, 1858, "For the better Government of India"—the Act of the 21st and 22nd Victoria, Chapter 106.

Of this Statute, the Fifty-sixth Section enacted as follows:—

"The Military and Naval Forces of the East India Company shall be deemed to be the Indian Military and Naval Forces of H.M., and shall be under the same obligations to serve her Majesty as they would have been under to serve the said Company, and shall be liable to serve within the same territorial limits only, for the same terms only, and be entitled to the like pay, pensions, allowances, and privileges, and the like advantages as regards promotion and otherwise, as if they had continued in the service of the said Company; such forces, and all persons hereafter enlisting in or entering the same, shall continue and be subject to all Acts of Parliament, laws of the Governor General of India in Council, and Articles of War, and all other laws, regulations and provisions, relating to the E.I.Co.'s Military and Naval Forces respectively, as if H.M.'s Indian Military and Naval Forces respectively had throughout such acts, laws, articles, regulations, and provisions been mentioned or referred to instead of such Forces of the said Company; and the pay and expenses of and incident to H.M.'s Indian Military and Naval Forces shall be defrayed out of the revenues of India."

Under this section of the Act the forces of the East India Company are not transferred to the Crown, so as to place them on the same footing as H.M.'s troops of the line; but the most careful provision is made to preserve inviolate the terms of service under which the men enlisted, so that no man shall be required to serve out of India, nor in any British regiments other than those which composed the army of the Company; and that the pay, pension, and all other rights and privileges heretofore enjoyed by them in the service of the Company, shall continue in every respect to be enjoyed by them.

The sole change made by the Act of Parliament is in the designation of the troops. It is enacted that they shall be deemed to be "the Indian military forces of her Majesty."

The service is precisely what it was before; its local limits, its peculiar advantages, its entire distinctness from the ordinary service of the Crown, are exactly what they have heretofore been. But the forces which bore the name of the Hon. E.I. Company's forces, so long as that Company administered the Government of India in trust for the Queen, have now the honour of being known as the Indian forces of the Queen herself.

Some portion, however, of these troops, shortly after the Act of Parliament came into force, came forward to claim a bounty or their discharge, on the ground that they had been transferred without their consent from the service of the Company to the service of the Crown, as to a different service from that into which they enlisted.

This claim received all proper consideration where it was becomingly made; it was submitted by the Government of India to H.M.'s Government; it was the subject of careful deliberation, and it was pronounced inadmissible by the law advisers and ministers of the Crown.

The bulk of the English soldiers of H.M.'s Indian forces is composed of men who well represent those who, during the administration of the Company, have shed their blood side by side with the royal troops serving in India, to establish the supremacy of the British power, and to sustain the glory of England; and many amongst them have, by their valour and discipline during the last two eventful years, rendered invaluable service in the repression and punishment of mutiny and rebellion. The Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council has placed reliance on the loyalty and good sense of the great body of these men, and he has looked confidently to their setting a good example to their younger comrades. He has not been disappointed.

But a strong feeling prevails among some, chiefly the younger soldiers, that they have not been dealt with justly, and some have been guilty of acts of disobedience and misconduct.

These were quickly put down. Afterwards, by order of the Right Hon. the C. in C., Courts of Inquiry were opened, before which the men were called upon to make their representations, and to state unreservedly the grounds of their claims. The proceedings of these courts are now before the Government.

The Government is satisfied that the objections of the men are founded, in the case of many of them, on an honest conviction that their rights have been overlooked. This conviction has been strengthened by the expression of opinions from high authority in England, which naturally have had a powerful effect on the minds of the men. It has been put forward by the men for the most part in a soldierlike and respectful manner, after the first excitement had passed away, consequently upon the orders and warnings of the C. in C.

Such being the case, and it being the desire of the Government of India that there should not be even an appearance of injustice done to any soldier, his excellency the Viceroy and Governor General of India in Council has determined, with the full concurrence of the C. in C., that every non-commissioned officer and soldier in the three presidencies who enlisted for the East India Company's forces, shall, if he desire it, be allowed to take his discharge, under the provisions of the act for limiting the time of service in the army,* which directs that soldiers taking their discharge shall be conveyed to England, and there finally discharged; and that in the mean while they shall continue to be subject to the Mutiny Act and Articles of War.

Each man will be duly paid up and settled with to the date of his embarkation; from which date, according to the Regulations of the Local Forces, pay will cease.

The representations of the men, as recorded by the Courts of Enquiry assembled for this purpose of Meerut and other stations, will be transmitted for the consideration of H.M.'s Government. But the Viceroy and Gov. Gen. in Council distinctly announces, that he is not authorised to hold out any hope that the Government of her Majesty will recede from the decision to which it has already come in regard to re-enlistment and bounty.

The offer of discharge now determined upon, will be made under arrangements to be ordered by the Commanders in Chief, respectively, at the three presidencies; and the decision of every man who elects to remain in the service is to be entered in the regimental records, and will be considered final.

Men accepting their discharge under this order will not be permitted to enlist into any regiment in India, whether of the line or of H.M.'s Indian forces. They will be sent to the port of embarkation, under the orders of their Excellencies the Commanders in Chief in Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, and will be provided with passage to England.

Circumstances having recently come to the knowledge of H. E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council, which shows that the 5th Eur. regt., stationed at Berhampore, has conducted itself in a manner which leads him to doubt whether the privilege conferred by the G.O. No. 883, of this day's date, can properly be extended to that corps, H. E. in Council has determined that the 5th European regiment shall be excluded from the operation of the said order, until inquiry shall have been made into its conduct, and a report received thereon.

Reductions in the Strength of the Bengal Army.

Fort William, June 13.—No. 844.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to resolve that the following reductions in the numerical strength of the undermentioned branches of the Bengal army shall be carried into effect:—

The establishment of each armed corps of the line of the Loodianah and Ferozepore regiments, of the Sirmoor, Kumaon, and Nusseeree battalions, of the * 10th and 11th Vict., cap. 37.

Extra Ghoorkha regiment, and of the Kumaon levy: to be gradually reduced to 700 sepoy's formed into ten companies of seventy sepoy's each, but with the present proportion of native commissioned and non-commissioned officers.

The establishment of the various levies noted in the margin* to be gradually reduced to 600 sepoy's, divided into eight companies. Each company will consist of 1 subadar, 1 jemadar, 5 havildars, 5 naicks, 2 drummers, and 75 sepoy's.

The establishment of the various regiments of irregular cavalry noted in the margin† to be gradually reduced to 420 sowars each, or to seventy sowars per troop, the present proportion of native commissioned and non-commissioned officers being continued.

All recruiting in corps which are above the complement now authorised is forthwith to cease.

H.E. the C. in C. is requested to issue such subsidiary orders as may be necessary.

Public Works.

Head Quarters, Simla, April 28.—The attention of all officers commanding stations is called to the following extract from the Code of Regulations, Public Works' Department, chap. 4, section 1, para. 16, in regard to the procedure to be observed in directing the execution of works of an emergent nature:—

16. "In cases of actual emergency, however, where the interests of the State would suffer by the delay of a reference, the commanding officer, after obtaining the report of the executive engineer, may issue an order directing the immediate execution of the work. But he shall, on the same day, send a copy of the order and make a detailed report to the chief engineer of the circumstance which constituted the emergency, which will be forwarded by the chief engineer, with his observations, to the Local Administration. In these cases, if the executive engineer shall not concur in the emergent necessity for the work, he shall record his opinion to that effect, and the entire responsibility of the execution shall then rest with the commanding officer, whose orders, however, the executive engineer will meanwhile carry out.

Leave to Simla.

The attention of all officers visiting Simla on leave, whether general or temporary, is called to para. 43, part I., section xlv., of the Military Regulations, requiring them to report their arrival and place of residence to the adjutant general of the army.

2. Officers will also report their departure from Simla to the adjutant general of the army.

Officers' Salary on Leave.

Fort William, June 15.—The following extract is published for general information:—

No. 4692.—Extract from the proceedings of the Government of India, in the Financial Department, dated June 3.

Read the following:—

From W. P. Palmer, Esq., civil auditor, Fort William, to C. H. Lushington, Esq., sec. to the Government of India, Financial Department (No. 1,537, dated 20th May, 1859).

Sir,—I have the honour to request you will be good enough to submit the following case for the consideration and order of H. E. the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council, to remove doubts which may arise, and especially when there exist no definite rules for guidance.

2. An officer is permitted to resign the service and obtains the usual preparatory leave to reach the port of embarkation, drawing half salary for that period, but before the completion of the regulated time he reaches the port and embarks for Europe.

3. The question to be determined relates to the stoppage of his half salary, whether it shall continue to be paid up to the date of his being admitted to annuity or only to that of his embarkation, in virtue of the usual certificate of the pilot's leaving the vessel in which he may be a passenger. In case of furlough or medical leave, the preparatory leave terminates from the date on which an officer reports his departure from India, and his allowance for that period ceases from that date, differing from the recorded practice of this office in cases of retirement from the service, when officers continue to draw a portion of their Indian allowance for some time after they have left India. I would propose that, for any interval between a retiring officer's embarkation and the 1st of May, the date from which annuities commence, that he should be permitted to draw only the regulated subsistence allowances of his rank, in lieu of half-pay, which seems anomalous, and should this arrangement meet with approval and sanction, the officers who are acting, or who may be permanently appointed to the post vacated by returning officers, will draw the full salary of that office from the date of the former officer's embarkation.

Preparatory Leave, C.S.

Financial Department, Resolution.—The Gov. gen. in Council is of opinion that the practice that prevails in the office of the civil auditor at Fort William, of considering officers of the civil service who obtain preparatory leave to reach the port of embarkation previous to resigning the service, and who embark for Europe before the full period of such leave has expired, as being entitled to be treated as on leave subsequent to the date from which their departure from the port of embarkation is reckoned, is wrong. Preparatory leave, H. E. in Council observes, is intended merely to give time for an officer to prepare to embark, and it is no more than fair towards the officer who is to succeed to the appointment about to be vacated by the officer intending to resign the service, that the preparatory leave granted to the latter officer should, as in cases of furlough and leave on medical certificate, be held to expire on the date from which his departure from the port of embarkation is reckoned.

Regulation of Sale of Lands.

June 15.—The Lieut. gov. has been pleased to extend Act No. VIII. of 1859, entitled "An Act for simplifying the Procedure of the Courts of Civil Judicature not established by Royal Charter," to the non-regulation districts of Hazareebaugh, Loharduggah, and Maunbhoom, in the south-west frontier agency.

2. As, for good and sufficient reasons, it is considered expedient that the present restrictions on the sale of landed property in those districts should continue in force, Section CCV. of the aforesaid Act is hereby declared subject to the proviso, that no sale of lands shall be made in the districts of Hazareebaugh, Loharduggah, and Maunbhoom without the sanction of the commissioner of the province had and obtained as heretofore.

Officers Temporarily Attached.

Hd. Qrs., Simla, June 2.—Officers commanding H.M.'s regiments of British infantry, of both the home and Indian armies, will send to the officiating Adjutant general of the army direct, with as little delay as practicable, a nominal return of young officers of the Indian army temporarily attached to their corps.

The Examination in Hindostanee.

The attention of all officers who have not passed the prescribed examination in Hindostanee (as laid down at para. 2, sec. XXXIV. of the Military Regulations) is directed to G.G.O. No. 734, of the 20th ult., by which it is announced that the provisions of the G.O. by the Gov. general, dated 25th June, 1850, will hereafter be strictly enforced, and no officer appointed to any station on the staff, or to any civil or detached employment, who has not passed this examination; as also that every officer now holding staff, civil, or other employment, who has not already passed in Hindostanee, or shall not pass in that language before the 20th November, 1859, will be remanded to his corps.

Court Martial.

ASST.-SURG. JAMES MCALISTER.

Hd. Qrs., Poona, June 28, 1859.

At a European general court martial assembled at Bombay, on June 28, asst.-surg. J. McAlister, Bombay medical estab., was arraigned on the following charge:—

Charge.—For conduct highly disgraceful, unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline in having at Bombay on or about the 10th day of May, 1859, knowingly made the following false statement before a committee of medical officers directed to inquire into matters connected with the late Lieutenant colonel Vincent's illness, viz., "Colonel Vincent never expressed to me any wish to call in Dr. Leith," whereas he, Assistant surgeon McAlister, well knew, at the time of making the above false statement, that Lieutenant colonel Vincent had on or about the 29th of the previous month (April), requested him, Asst. surg. McAlister, to call in Dr. Leith, and that he had declined to do so.

The above being in breach of the articles of war. Finding.—"Not Guilty" of the charge preferred against him, and the Court does, therefore, fully and honourably acquit him of the same.

Approved and confirmed.

(Signed) HENRY SOMERSET, Lieut. general, C. in C.

REMARKS BY THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF.

Head Quarters, Poona, 1st July.—I am of opinion that the Court should have permitted the witness, Thomas Gowen, to correct a portion of his evidence, when he requested to be permitted to do so.

The extraordinary conduct of the prisoner while in attendance on the late Lieutenant colonel Vincent in refusing to meet Dr. Manisty when his patient was in so precarious a state, except on condition of giving over the case entirely, was a departure from all established rules, as clearly stated in the remarks of the director general after he had received the proceedings of the medical committee assembled to investigate the circumstances reported by Captain Day.

The prisoner had therefore placed himself in such a position that it became necessary that the case should be investigated by a court-martial.

That portion of the prisoner's defence in which he remarks that he had no opportunity of offering an explanation of his conduct before being arraigned before a court-martial is not justified by facts, as before the committee of inquiry, which was assembled to investigate the case, he made two distinct statements, dated 10th and 11th May respectively, both of which proved unsatisfactory.

The prisoner is to be released from arrest and will return to his duty.

(Signed) H. S. SOMERSET, Lieut. gen. C. in C.

Field Exercises.

By His EXCELLENCY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

The following general order, dated Horse Guards, S.W., March, 1859, is published for the information of the army; and the C. in C. directs that the system of field exercise and evolutions of the army to which it refers be adhered to by H.M.'s Indian troops serving under this presidency.

Officers of infantry are expected to provide themselves with copies of this work without delay.

General officers and brigadiers will be pleased to allow regimental commanding officers sufficient time to perfect their officers and men in the new exercise, before moving them in brigade under the revised regulations.

GENERAL ORDER.

The system of field exercise and evolutions of the army having been revised by a board composed of officers selected for that purpose, H.R.H. the Gen. Comd. in C. has received the Queen's commands to require of all general officers in command of troops the most scrupulous adherence to the system now promulgated.

It is to their superintendence and vigilance that her Majesty trusts for the enforcement of prompt and implicit obedience to all general orders and regulations, and H.R.H. reminds the officers of the army of the responsibility they will incur by introducing any deviation from a system which has been sanctioned by her Majesty.

By command of H.R.H. the Gen. C. in C.

Reduction in Light Cavalry Regiments.

Head Quarters, Mahabeshwar, June 6, 1859.

Under instructions from Government the C. in C. is pleased to direct that three regiments of light cavalry shall be reduced to their former strength of six troops, with the established proportion of native commissioned and non-commissioned officers and troopers as before the late augmentation.

All regiments of native infantry of the line, including the three extra battalions and Beelooch regiments and marine battalion, will be reduced to ten companies of 700 privates per regiment, with the proportion of native commissioned and non-commissioned officers and drummers and fifiers, as established before the augmentation ordered on the 14th July, 1857, G.G.O. No. 677.

The regiments still having twelve companies are noted below:—

1st grenadier, 4th regiment native infantry (rifles), 9th, 10th, 12th, 13th, 14th, 19th, 23rd, 24th, 25th, 29th, 30th, and 31st regiments native infantry.

The native officers, non-commissioned officers, drummers, fifiers, and privates of the 11th and 12th companies of these regiments will revert to the companies from which they were originally transferred, taking their places according to actual rank in the regiment.

In order to avoid the absolute stopping of all promotion which this measure would involve for a time on the occasion of casualties, one promotion will be made for every two vacancies until the supernumeraries be absorbed, but any casualties among the supernumeraries themselves will not be filled up.

The same course will be adopted in reducing the 7th and 8th troops of the three light cavalry regiments.

All ranks in excess of the establishment now ordered to be borne as supernumeraries with their troops, companies, and regiments.

In view to carry out the reduction of all ranks, general officers commanding divisions, and officers commanding separate garrisons, will be pleased to cause local committees to be assembled in order that native commissioned and non-commissioned officers and privates eligible for pension, and may desire it, may be freely discharged.

The performance of this duty will be in accordance with the rules which regulate the invaliding of native soldiers.

Inefficient men, whose retention in the army is not desirable, may be discharged with a gratuity of half a month's pay for every complete year's service, the minimum gratuity to be granted being one month's pay to such soldiers as may not have completed one whole year's service, but commanding officers are not to force this measure upon men who are unwilling to be discharged, as such would be obviously unjust.

Affair at Imleepanee.

No. 790 of 1859.—H. E. the Gov. Gen. in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the following report of the defeat of a body of rebels under Muckoond Sing, by the troops under the command of Capt. Wright, 2nd Sikh cav.

H. E. in Council concurs in the approbation expressed by the Rt. hon. the C. in C.

From Maj. gen. G. C. Whitlock, comdg. Saugor F.D., to Maj. gen. Sir W. R. Mansfield, K.C.B., chief of the staff, army hd. qrs.
Camp, near Nagode, 12th April, 1859.

Sir,—It affords me great satisfaction to forward, for submission to the Rt. hon. the C. in C., the accompanying despatch from Capt. Wright, comdg. the 2nd Sikh cav.

That officer has noticed the excellent conduct of all under his command in his attack on the enemy, and considering the strong position of the rebels and their numbers, I consider the affair to be most creditable to all, and I beg to recommend to the favourable consideration of the C. in C. Capt. Wright as a most excellent and energetic officer. Capt. Wright has named the officers in the margin,* from whom he has received every support, and I would beg to bring them to the notice of his lordship the C. in C.

Col. Apthorp has recommended Naib Ressaldar Khan Sing for the Order of Merit, and his conspicuous gallantry on this occasion, under the immediate eye of his commanding officer, induces me to express a hope that this soldier may be considered deserving of this distinguished honour.

G. C. WHITLOCK, Maj. gen.
Comdg. Saugor F.D.

From Capt. T. Wright, comdg. 2nd Sikh irreg. cav. and detachd. Saugor F.F., to the staff officer, Saugor F.F.

Camp Meriahdo, 29th March, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour to report, for the information of Colonel Apthorp, C.B., comdg. Saugor F.F., that the troops detailed in the margin,† which he was pleased to place under my command, attacked and defeated this morning a body of rebels under Muckoond Sing.

* Lieut. Johnstone, 1st N.I.; Lieut. Hunt, 3rd M.E.R.; Lieut. Taylor, 1st N.I.; Asst. surg. J. Brake, doing duty, 2nd Sikh cav.

† Gren'dr. co. 3rd M.E. regt.—1 lieut., 1 ens., 4 sergts., 64 r. and f. 1st M.N. inf.—3 lieuts., 3 native officers, 9 havildars, 90 r. and f. 2nd Sikh cav.—1 Euro. and 3 native officers, 3 duffadars, 60 sowars.

2. Having yesterday evening received intelligence that a large body of rebels had taken up their position at a village called Imlepanee, about twelve miles from my encampment, I marched at 4 A.M. from Syepoor, a village eight miles west of Kishenghur, situated among the Chutteepoor hills.

3. When within two and a half miles of Imlepanee I proceeded forward with the cavalry of the detachment to reconnoitre the enemy's position, and found them posted a little beyond the village in a deep hollow near the dry bed of a mountain torrent surrounded by dense jungle and steep rocks. It was, indeed, admirably situated for defensive purposes, and with a few resolute troops might have been held against vastly superior numbers.

4. The videttes of the enemy were posted in the village, and their announcement of our arrival was the signal for the whole of the rebels turning out to defend their position, a number rushed up the steep slopes in my front and right, and commenced a heavy musket fire on my party from behind rocks and jungle, within eighty yards, which induced me to retire my men about fifty yards, to place them under a slight shelter which there offered itself, until the arrival of the infantry.

5. Lieut. Johnstone, 1st Madras N.I., whom I had left in command of the infantry, on hearing the firing, brought up the column at the "double," and on its arrival I directed the grenadiers, 3rd Madras Eur. regt. to form up in skirmishing order, and subsequently reinforced them by the two companies of the 1st Madras N.I. The whole of this formation took place under a sharp fire from the enemy. After two well-directed rounds from the Enfield rifles of the grenadiers, I caused the whole of the troops to advance to the attack, a movement which the enemy no sooner perceived than a wavering was observed in their ranks, and they commenced making a most precipitate retreat.

6. I now pursued with cav. as rapidly as possible, and, in spite of boulder rocks and dense jungle, which gave the enemy considerable advantage, my men succeeded in cutting up a good number. When the pursuit, which was continued over five miles of this difficult country, was at last given over, owing to the distressed state of the horses, the rebels were so thoroughly dispersed that I do not think that a body of more than three or four men was in existence in any part of the field, and certainly not one remained in sight.

7. It was impossible to say accurately what was the actual loss of the enemy, but, judging from the number of bodies lying about, I should say there must have been at least fifty killed in the pursuit only, and many were doubtless killed or wounded by the well directed fire of the Enfield rifles of the grenadiers of the 3rd Mad. Eur. regt.

8. The jungles in the vicinity of Imlepanee were strewed with arms and property of all kinds, and tatoes and camels were straying about in every direction. These circumstances will show how thoroughly the rebels had been surprised and defeated. From one of the bodies lying on the field, jewels worth upwards of 2,000 rupees were taken by some of the troops, and it was afterwards ascertained from prisoners that the owner's name was Heera Sing, formerly subadar of the Kotah contingent, and performing at the time the functions of a military commander of the rebels under Muckoond Sing.

9. The enemy numbered about 800, of whom one hundred were said to be cavalry, belonging formerly to the Lucknow contingent and the infantry consisted chiefly of Gwalior and Kotah contingent mutineers.

10. The blow thus struck at the rebels will show them at all events that neither in dense jungles nor on steep rocks are they safe from the attack of British troops. The effects of it on the minds of the people in this neighbourhood is certainly that of instilling confidence, for whereas before the action I could gain but little or no information of the movements of the rebels, this is now volunteered on all sides.

11. The conduct of the whole of the troops during the action was admirable.

The eager and rapid advance of the grenadiers of the 3rd Madras Eur. regt. to the attack was perhaps the first thing to strike dismay into the enemy's ranks. The bearing of the men of this fine company was most praiseworthy.

The two companies of the 1st Madras N.I. emulated the excellent example set them by their European comrades in their eagerness to encounter the enemy.

The men of the 2nd Sikh irr. cav. also did their duty most gallantly, galloping over rocks and through dense thorny jungle, that few, under ordinary circumstances, would have ventured at a walk. In all parts of the field they engaged the enemy in desperate hand-to-hand conflicts and suffered none to escape who once came within their reach.

12. I am exceedingly indebted to the whole of the officers of the detach. for their efficient support.

Lieut. Johnstone, 1st Madras N. I., my second in command, ably commanded the infantry column whenever my presence was elsewhere required.

Lieut. Hunt, 3rd Madras Eur. regt. in command of his grenadiers, showed himself a most efficient officer and was foremost when leading his men to the attack.

Lieut. Taylor, 1st Madras N. I., and Lieut. Graham, 3rd Madras Eur. regt., excellently supported their respective commanding officers.

To Asst. surg. J. Brake, M.D., 2nd Sikh irr. cav., my particular obligations are due, for the zealous and devoted manner in which he performed the medical duties of the detachment. Under a heavy fire I observed him attending to the cure and comfort of the wounded.

13. I venture to request that Col. Apthorp will be pleased to recommend Naib Rissaldar Khan Sing, of the 2nd Sikh irr. cav, for the Order of Merit for conspicuous gallantry in the field. Under my own observation he attacked and cut down three of the enemy, all of whom fought with much determination. His own horse has been rendered useless from wounds. Other men of the troops behaved as well as the Naib Rissaldar, but I am aware of the impossibility of an extensive grant of this much-prized distinction, and I therefore make one nomination only.

14. I respectfully solicit also that Col. Apthorp will be pleased to bring the services of the troops under my command to the favourable notice of Maj. gen. Whitlock, comdg. the div.

T. WRIGHT, Captain,
Comdg. 2nd Sikh irr. cav. and detach.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT RESOLUTION. — The Governor General in Council is of opinion that the practice that prevails in the office of the Civil Auditor at Fort William, of considering officers of the civil service who obtain preparatory leave to reach the port of embarkation previous to resigning the service, and who embark for Europe before the full period of such leave has expired, as being entitled to be treated as on leave subsequent to the date from which their departure from the port of embarkation is reckoned, is wrong. Preparatory leave, his Excellency in Council observes, is intended merely to give time for an officer to prepare to embark, and it is no more than fair towards the officer who is to succeed to the appointment about to be vacated by the officer intending to resign the service, that the preparatory leave granted to the latter officer should, as in cases of furlough and leave on the medical certificate, be held to expire on the date from which his departure from the port of embarkation is reckoned.

A MERITED COMPLIMENT.—In consideration of the distinguished services of H.M.'s 61st regiment at the siege of Delhi, the Right Honourable the Governor directed a salute of twenty-one guns to be fired from the saluting battery on the embarkation of that corps from the Apollo bunder.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE LATE DR. HORSFIELD.

THE late Dr. Horsfield was born at Bethlehem, in Pennsylvania, on the 12th May, 1773, and had consequently completed his eighty-sixth year at the time of his death. His knowledge of the medical profession was acquired at the University of Pennsylvania, where he took his degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1798. Two years afterwards he made a voyage to Batavia as surgeon of a vessel from Philadelphia, and on his return to the United States he resolved upon undertaking a second voyage with a view to making a scientific exploration of the island of Java. During the next sixteen years Dr. Horsfield remained in that island, employed in collecting a vast number of zoological and botanical specimens, and in compiling a large mass of miscellaneous information regarding the productions and inhabitants of those comparatively unknown regions.

In 1819 Dr. Horsfield arrived in England and deposited his valuable collections in the India-house, where they formed the nucleus of the noble museum over which he so long and so ably presided. Two years later he commenced the publication of his "Zoological Researches in Java," and in 1828-29 he brought out the First and Second Parts of the "Lepidopterous Insects of Java," containing an elaborate introduction or a general arrangement of those insects founded on their metamorphoses. In 1838 he applied himself to the "Plantæ Javaicæ Rariores," and latterly he was engaged in superintending the publication of a series of scientific catalogues of the zoological specimens in the East India House Museum. In 1855 the University of Heidelberg conferred upon Dr. Horsfield the degree of Doctor of Philosophy and Master of Arts. He was likewise member of many learned and scientific societies, such as the Royal, the Geological, the Linnæan, the Zoological, the Royal Asiatic, and the Entomological. In addition to these he was associated with the following foreign societies:—Van Het Bataviaasch Genootschap van Kunsten en Wetenschappen, 1802; Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, 1826; Des Naturhistorischen Vereins für das Grossherzogthum Hessen, 1846; Des Entomologischen Vereins zu Stettin, 1854; Van den Naturkundige Vereeniging in Nederlandisch Indie, 1855; Societatis Physico-Medicæ Erlangensis, 1857. On Sunday, the 17th July, Dr. Horsfield was attacked by ulcers in the throat, which were pronounced by his medical attendant to be of a diphtheritic character, and the disease rapidly increased in intensity. Although it was impossible to administer any substantial nourishment, and in spite of his great age, he survived for a whole week after the fatal symptoms first appeared, and died on the morning of the 24th in the full possession of his mental faculties. On the 29th his honoured remains were committed to the earth in the Moravian burial-ground at Chelsea, but his name will long live in the memory of all to whom his private virtues were known, and who were capable of appreciating his accurate and extensive acquaintance with the different branches of Natural History.

THE FINANCIAL DIFFICULTY.

THE financial embarrassments of the Indian Government have reached to a degree that will allow of no further vacillation, or postponement of remedies. As Sir Charles Wood justly remarked, "if the financial state of a country be bad there are few dangers with which it may hope successfully to contend." At the same time, with singular inconsistency, he maintained that, "although the financial difficulties of India were of the most serious character, there was nothing in the future prospects of that dependency of the British Crown to inspire either hopelessness or gloom." But, whatever the future may bring forth, it is indisputable that the present moment is surcharged with matter for grave and anxious consideration.

Little more than two years ago, or—to speak more precisely—on the 30th of April, 1857, the Indian debt amounted in round numbers to fifty-nine millions and a half, the annual interest upon which slightly exceeded two millions and a half. The annual military expenditure was at that time estimated at twelve millions and a half. In the following year there was a deficiency of £8,520,000, and in the year after that of £14,700,000: making a total deficiency of £23,220,000, or two-thirds of the entire revenue for one year. To fill up this terrible chasm between receipts and expenditure recourse was had to loans, and between the 30th April, 1857, and the 30th April, 1859, no less a sum was borrowed than £22,118,000, of which £11,562,000 were raised in England, and £10,556,000 in India. By this time the Indian debt had increased to £81,580,000, subjecting the revenue to an annual charge of £3,564,000; and the military expenditure had risen from £12,561,000 in 1857 to £25,849,000, or rather more than double. For the current year the total expenditure is calculated at rather more than forty-six millions, to be defrayed by a revenue short of thirty-six millions, but, in point of fact, the total deficiency may be taken at £12,500,000. On the other hand, it is expected that £2,000,000 will be received from India, and £4,800,000 have already been realised by the issue of five million sterling of debentures. There still remain £2,000,000 to be raised by the late Parliamentary grant, and it is proposed to take power to borrow a further sum of five millions. Consequently, at the close of the financial year, or on the 30th April, 1860, the Indian debt will stand at the ever-increasing amount of £95,838,000, charging the revenue with the annual payment of £3,900,000. For the ensuing year a deficiency of ten millions is expected, and he must indeed be a sanguine man who can look with any sort of confidence to a proximate termination of the financial difficulty even then. No doubt a considerable reduction may gradually be effected under the head of military expenditure. The European force, for instance, which at present numbers 110,000 men may certainly be brought down to 80,000; and the native army may safely and advantageously be diminished in a far greater proportion. It appears that the native force under arms exceeds 200,000 men, exclusive of 90,000 police under a military organization, and who are quite as efficient, or dangerous, as the more regular soldiery. According to the intelligence received by the last Mail, Lord Canning has already taken some steps to avert the impending peril and reduce the ruinous expenditure. At the moment it may, perhaps, be impossible for his lordship in presence of this disastrous mutiny of the Company's European troops to act with still greater decision and firmness. But so soon as this alarming crisis has been overcome, there can be no reason why all, or nearly all, the extraordinary levies enlisted for temporary and special service should not at once be dismissed, with a handsome gratuity and abundant compliments, to their respective homes. So far from any troubles being likely thence to arise, we believe that quite a contrary result would be attained by such a display of independence and self-reliance. In common with all half-savage races, the people of India and of all Asia fear those who show no fear of them, and will tamely submit to a master where they would fly at the throat of a friend. With a permanent force of 80,000 Europeans, of whom one-half should belong to a local army, there can be no necessity for maintaining more than 100,000 natives under arms, exclusive of the police. It is obvious that so large a reduction can not be accomplished all at once, but it may certainly be commenced as soon as the European mutiny is quelled, on a far wider scale than seems to be contemplated by the Governor-general.

Sir Charles Wood indicates various sources whence he hopes to derive an income of at least one million per annum. These are an augmentation of the salt duty—against the very existence of which the Liberals were wont to declaim so vehemently during the Company's administration—an extension of the system of stamps, the imposition of trade licences, and, possibly, a succession duty. The last two items may, undoubtedly, be turned to good account, but the Government must go yet further and compel the wealthy Baboos of Bengal to contribute of their abundance to the necessities of the State. The time has come for a revival of the Cornwallis settlement. It is an act of simple justice to the other provinces of India, to call upon the most opulent district of Hindostan to pay its fair share towards the expenses of the Government that has enabled it to attain and to enjoy such unexampled prosperity. The Bengalees merit no peculiar consideration at our hands. Never have they come forward with offers of substantial aid in times of danger or adversity. They have allowed others to bear the heat and burden of the day, while they contented themselves with unmeaning addresses couched in inflated and ungrammatical phraseology. It is full time, then, that their necks too should be bent to the yoke, and that they should be taught to bear their share of the burdens of the Commonwealth.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

ADMISSION OF BRITISH SALT INTO CHINA.

LORD STANLEY OF ALDERLEY, in calling the attention of her Majesty's Government to the admission of British salt into China, stated that the supply of salt to a population of 300,000,000 had been hitherto a monopoly in the hands of the Chinese Government. It would be only fair in asking permission to import salt into China to make some compensation equal to the revenue that would be thereby lost to the Chinese Government. He concluded by asking what steps had been taken by the Government for the purpose of bringing the question for admitting British salt into China before the Court of Peking.

LORD ELGIN said he felt some difficulty in answering the question of Lord Stanley of Alderley because the correspondence which he (Lord Elgin) had entered into with the Government on commercial and other matters had not yet been made public. If, however, he had abstained from pressing on the notice of the Chinese Government certain commercial reforms, it was out of a consideration for the interests of the Imperial Government, whose influence so materially affected the fluctuations of trade. He concurred with all that had fallen from Lord Stanley of Alderley, but it was not so easy to make the Chinese Commissioner entertain the same views. The monopoly of salt was a very ancient one in China, and would on that account be difficult to overthrow, and in, addition to that, it was a very productive source of revenue. With respect to the appointment of a Russian ambassador at Peking, he thought it would be as well for this country not to press at first with too great a stringency on the Chinese Government our right secured by treaty of permanent residence. Should, however, other nations insist on that right he presumed we should not fail to do the same.

LORD WODEHOUSE explained that Mr. Bruce had been instructed, in any communications he had with the Chinese Government, to bring that subject as often as seemed prudent and convenient under their notice. For the reasons stated by his noble friend (Lord Elgin) it was not impossible that the Chinese Government, looking at the fact that a large portion of their revenue was derived from salt, would not be very willing to add this to the important changes they had already completed; but, at the same time, it would be the duty of the British Envoy in China to take advantage of any opening that might arise for inducing them to break through the monopoly. With regard to the Missionary College belonging to Russia in Peking, he might state that that mission was to be maintained, but without having attached to it any political character, while any permanent residence that might be enjoyed by Russia in Peking would rest not on direct treaty, but on the clause which gave them the same rights with the most favoured nations. Undoubtedly great care would be taken not to forego, on our part, the right of permanent residence by a British Minister at Peking, though, of course, the Government would in such a matter be ready to defer to the opinion of his noble friend, and would consider how often and for how long a period it should be exercised. Certainly, it would be most unwise for us to return to the old system, to let the right we possessed remain in abeyance, and to lose the advantage of direct communication with the high officials at Peking. Some moderation must, however, be shown towards the Chinese Government, which had made concessions to this country of a very great and important character.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—AUGUST 1.

EAST INDIA LOAN.

Sir C. WOOD called attention to the state of India with reference to its finances,—a subject, he observed, of vital importance, and requiring the most anxious consideration. The prospect, discouraging as it was, was not hopeless. If we surmounted the difficulties of the next two or three years, he saw no reason why India should not recover the prosperity it enjoyed before the mutiny broke out. Premising that it was impossible to bring down the financial statement to a late period with precision, as the accounts since April, 1858, were only estimates, and that he should deal with the sums in round numbers, converting the rupee at the uniform rate of 2s., he proceeded to state that on the 30th of April, 1857 (before the mutiny), the Indian debt amounted to £59,402,000, the interest to £2,525,000. The military expenditure, ordinary and extraordinary, was £12,561,000. In 1857-58 the general expenditure of India amounted to £40,226,000, the revenue to £31,706,000, the deficiency of revenue being £8,520,000. In 1858-59, the expenditure was £43,500,000; the revenue £33,800,000, leaving a deficiency of £14,700,000. The total deficiency to be provided for in the two years amounted, therefore, to £23,220,000. The sums borrowed in India in 1857-58 and 1858-59 amounted to £10,556,000, and in England to £11,562,000, making together £22,118,000, the difference of £1,102,000 being made up by the diminution of balances. This was the state of things up to the 30th of April last. The debt of India, there and in England, was £81,580,000, the interest being £3,564,000. The military expenditure in the year ending the 30th of April last was £25,849,000. The expenditure on India for the year 1859-60 was estimated at £38,380,000, the charge at home at £5,851,500, the interest on railway capital he took at £900,000, and the compensation for losses in India at £1,000,000, making the total estimated charge £46,131,500. The revenue for the same year was estimated at £35,850,000, including the additional taxes; deducting this sum from £46,131,500, and adding to the deficiency £2,000,000 on account of further demands, there would remain £12,500,000 to be provided for. The loans in India had produced much less than had been expected, but he hoped to receive in India £2,000,000, and this, added to £4,800,000, the produce of the £5,000,000 of debentures issued under the authority given by Parliament to raise £7,000,000 (making together £6,800,000) still left £5,700,000 to be provided for to make up the £12,500,000, and he proposed to take power to borrow £5,000,000, in addition to the £2,000,000 under the former power, it being necessary that he should have a margin of £7,000,000 in order to meet the expenses of the year. At the end of 1860 the Indian debt would be £95,836,000, and the interest upon the debt £3,900,000. In the course of the year 1860-61 it would be unnecessary to provide a sum for compensation for losses; on the other hand, the interest on the debt would have increased, so that he could not take the expenditure of that year at less than £46,000,000, and the revenue he took at £36,000,000, which left a deficiency of £10,000,000. How the expenditure and the receipts could be balanced was an embarrassing question; it must be effected either by a reduction of the former or an addition to the latter. The reduction of expenditure depended upon the state of India. The first item of expenditure was the Civil establishments, and he should deceive the House, he said, if he held out a hope of any considerable reduction in this item. He did not think it just or fair to reduce the salaries of civil servants now in office, though a reduction might be made on new appointments, but, considering the demand for European supervision, he did not think there could be a material diminution of the civil expenditure. The next item was public works, and some saving might be made in this item, though not large, and some reductions might be made in the home expenditure. But the great item in which a saving might be made was the military expenditure. The whole military force in India, and including depôts at home, Europeans, natives, and military police, at the present time consisted of 431,600 men. It was clear, he thought, that we must maintain a larger European force in India than we had hitherto done. It was clear, too, that the mutiny had been almost entirely a military mutiny, prompted by religious feelings, the native population, generally speaking (except in Oude), having taken little or no part in it. From this fact we might learn, he observed, two things—first, that we should carefully avoid giving the natives any reason to believe that there was a design to attack their religious prejudices; secondly, that we ought not to maintain so large a native force as before. The question as to the amount of force required in India was a very difficult one. The military expenditure before the mutiny being £12,000,000 and the present expenditure £21,000,000, the difference being £9,000,000, there was room for a very large reduction upon this item of expenditure, and he thought the reduction might extend to £3,000,000 or £4,400,000. It was impossible, however, to say how soon this reduction could take place, but the utmost care would be taken to keep down this branch of the expenditure. With regard to the augmentation of the revenue, authority had been sent to the Government of India to raise the salt duty in Madras, Bombay, and the North West Provinces, and to impose stamp duties and a tax upon licences; and possibly a succession duty. He could not, of course, form an estimate of the probable amount which these duties would produce; but when all was done that we could hope to do, there must still be, for a year or two, a considerable deficiency that must be provided for, and £5,000,000 or £6,000,000 would have to be provided for by Parliament. It was the intention of the Government to select a person versed in finance to be sent to India, to take the revenue and financial department under his charge. In conclusion, he showed that there had been a progressive improvement in the revenues of India, and declared he by no means despaired of its future. He moved a resolution enabling the Government to raise in the United Kingdom for the service of the Government of India £5,000,000 to meet the demands of the present year.

Mr. CRAWFORD observed that Sir C. Wood had not stated the mode in which he proposed to raise the £5,000,000. If by debentures, he would fail; the debenture-market—he said it with confidence—would be overdone.

Lord STANLEY, in reviewing the statement of Sir C. Wood, took a comprehensive survey of the whole subject of Indian finance.

Mr. BRIGHT, in a strain of strong censure and invective, condemned the entire system of the Indian Government, and censured the Secretary of State for India for contenting himself with figures and abstaining from going into the question of the government of India, and the policy on which, he said, could alone be based a solid hope of the improvement of the people. There was, he said, no government in India. He recommended that there should be a Governor for every 20,000,000 of its population, with large independent powers, responsible only to the home authorities, decentralising the Government in India. He spoke in condemnatory language, he said, because it was the only language the case deserved.

Mr. T. G. BARRING briefly replied to Mr. Bright. With respect to his scheme for improving the Indian administration, he was of opinion that the whole control of the Government of India should rest with the Governor General; but he admitted that there would be a great saving of time in not fettering the Governors of the minor presidencies in matters of detail.

Mr. H. D. SEYMOUR complained of the apathy of the Central Government in India, which was unable to attend at Calcutta to all the details sent to them. The military force required in India, he agreed with Mr. Bright, depended upon the principles upon which it was governed. The proposed taxes were, in his opinion, open to very great objections, especially the salt-tax. He suggested other sources of revenue.

Observations were made by Mr. VANSITTART, Mr. GREGGON, Mr. KINNAIRD, Mr. CONINGHAM, and Mr. HANKEY, and,

Sir C. WOOD having replied,

The resolution was agreed to, and ordered to be reported.

MADRAS RAILWAY.

The report of the directors of this company states that the contracts of the company with the Government comprehend about 850 miles of railway, consisting of the main line running south-west from Madras to Beypoor on the Malabar coast, with its branches to Bangalore and the Neilgherry-hills, making together about 515 miles; and the Bellary, or north-west line, extending from the Arcotum station, at 42 miles from Madras, on the main line, by Cuddapa and Bellary to Moodgul, where it will form a junction with the Great Indian Peninsula Company's line coming from Bombay. Its length will be about 330 miles. The main line has now been for some months open as far as the station of Goriatum, 96 miles from Madras. Its further opening has been unexpectedly retarded by the non-completion, through unforeseen difficulties in construction, of the bridges over the Goriatum and Palar rivers. The former, however, may now be considered finished, and the latter is so far advanced as to give every prospect of its being ready by the end of the year. In the meantime, a temporary way is being laid for the passage of waggons and locomotives across the bed of the river. On the further side, as far as Salem, which is 206 miles from Madras, a considerable extent of the permanent way has been laid, and the whole of this part of the line is reported as sufficiently advanced to insure the opening for traffic to that important station by the end of the year. By that time also the chief engineer expects to complete so much of the western portion of this line as lies between Beypoor and Palghat; and soon after the section between the latter, and Coimbatore, a distance of 90 miles from the Malabar coast. There will then remain to complete of the main line the intermediate distance between Salem and Coimbatore, the most important work of which is a bridge over the Cauvery river, near Errode, 240 miles from Madras. Its length between abutments is 510 yards, the openings are 22 in number of 50 feet wide each, to be spanned at the height of 50 feet above the bed of the river by iron girders placed on stone piers. These piers are well advanced, and will be ready to receive the girders when they are sent up from Madras, where they now are. The other works on this central part of the line being also in a forward state, and all the permanent way materials required from England being in store, it is confidently expected that by this time next year it will also be completed, when there will be through communication by railway across the peninsula from Coromandel to the Malabar coast, 405 miles in length. With the exception of the bridges, the works of this line have not been generally of a heavy character. There are no tunnels, and not many heavy cuttings or embankments. The Madras Government have resolved to take immediate steps for the construction of a harbour at Beypoor, sufficient to secure the safe landing and shipment of the overland mails and passengers. The engineers are now engaged in setting out the Bangalore branch. It forms a junction at the main line at a point about 125 miles from Madras, ascends by a very favourable pass to the tableland of Mysore, and, having reached the level, pursues an easy course through a productive and well-peopled country to Bangalore, a distance of 81 miles. The steepest gradient will not exceed 1 in 81, with moderate curves. The proposed branch to the foot of the Neilgherry hills would branch from the main line near Coimbatore, and be from 28 to 30 miles in length. The Bellary or North-West Railway branches from the main line at Arcotum, 42 miles from Madras, proceeds by Cudapa, Gooty, and Bellary, to the town of Moodgul, where it is to form a junction with the Bombay line. The entire distance from Madras is upwards of 370 miles. A capital of £2,500,000 will probably be sufficient to complete it in every respect, including rolling stock. The share capital raised at present for the main line consists of £1,500,000 5 per cent. stock, £1,000,000 4½ per cent. stock, and £500,000 4 per cent. stock, together £3,000,000, leaving £1,000,000 of the estimated capital still to be raised. Debentures for £500,000, convertible into stock, have been issued at 5 per cent. interest, payable in five years. Estimating the cost of the main line and branches at £4,000,000, and the length at 515 miles, the cost would be £7,767 per mile. But the cost of the 96 miles actually completed and at work, including stations, &c., does not exceed £5,600 per mile, to which, if, £1,200 per mile for rolling stock be added, the total expenditure would be £6,800 per mile. But from the great rise which has taken place in wages and prices throughout the country the cost of the uncompleted portions of the railway, it is apprehended, will exceed that of the first constructed section. The amount of capital issued for the Bellary line is £1,000,000, of which one-fourth has been called up. On the 1st July, 1858, the main line was opened for traffic to Arcot, a distance of 65 miles; on the 7th of May, 1857, it was opened to Vellore, making 81 miles open; and on the 19th May, 1858, to Goriatum, 96 miles from Madras. The traffic for the half year ending December, 1856, amounted to £11,720; ending the 30th of June, 1857, to £14,245; ending the 31st of December 1857, to £18,480; ending the 30th of June, 1858, to £18,001; ending the 31st December, 1858, to £21,760; and ending the 30th June, 1859, as estimated, to £23,870. The net receipts were respectively £5,665, £7,309, £10,046, £9,970, and £13,143. Taking the aggregate cost at £6,800 per mile, and the working expenses at 50 per cent. of the gross receipts, it would give a result of above 3½ per cent. on the capital expended.

MISCELLANEOUS.

INDIAN MUTINY RELIEF FUND.—The committee of this fund have received a letter from the Cape of Good Hope, enclosing a remittance of £1,000 from the local committee of that colony to the central fund. This sum is in addition to £5,430 remitted immediately after the outbreak of the mutiny through his Excellency the Governor of the Cape of Good Hope to the Governor-General of India. The liberality of the colonists and residents, and their sympathy with the sufferers in India, were thus nobly manifested by a subscription amounting to £7,387. A portion of this fund was applied to furnish rations to the children of soldiers who had proceeded from the Cape to India for the suppression of the mutiny, as well as gratuities to the widows and children of many who had died there. Upwards of £500 still remain in the hands of the treasurer of the local committee to meet further claims of a like nature.

INDIAN FINANCE.—The "Home Accounts" of the Government of India have just been published. The receipts of the Home Treasury from the 1st of May, 1857, to the 30th of April, 1858, amounted to the sum of £12,354,234, plus a balance in favour on the 1st of May, 1857, of £3,041,044. The disbursements amounted to £11,041,577, and there is thus a balance in favour on the 1st of May, 1858, of £1,351,600. The receipts of 1858-9 were estimated at £13,897,522, plus the aforesaid balance in favour, and the disbursements at £15,429,724. The debts of the Government of India in England on the 1st of May, 1859, were £20,486,005, and the credit, £6,114,271, leaving an excess of debt amounting to the enormous sum of £14,371,734. The "Establishment" of the Secretary of State in Council of India, and the salaries payable in respect thereof, cost the country £127,511 a-year for 355 persons, besides sundry allowances, the expenses of the Military College, and the depot at Warley. There is a long list of compensation allowances for services performed in India.

THE DEBT OF INDIA.—The amount of the debt of India on the 1st of May, 1858, is returned at the sum of £60,704,084, of which £53,165,605 was "registered" debt, and the rest floating.

THE INDIAN ARMY.—The total sums charged against the Government of India on account of her Majesty's troops (exclusive of her Indian forces) since the 1st of May, 1857, up to the date of the returns received, amount to £4,614,563. For 1858-9 statements have not yet arrived from India. The above sum includes claims in respect of disbursements in India on account of Queen's troops serving in India and retiring pay, pensions, &c.

INDIA.—A Bill to amend the Act for the better government of India, brought in by Mr. Baring, M.P., and Sir C. Wood, M.P., authorises the Secretary of State for India in Council, from time to time, with the concurrence of a majority, to delegate to the Governor-General and the Governors of the Presidencies, &c., certain powers to sell and dispose of all real and personal estate whatsoever in India vested in her Majesty under the Act. The mode of executing contracts in India is also pointed out.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL EDWARD CORNWALL LEIGH, C.B.—The ravages of climate and of war are never more severely felt than when they cut short the career of men who have not yet attained the full distinction which their high character and their previous services appeared to promise. To this class of meritorious but unfortunate officers unquestionably belonged the late Lieutenant colonel Edward Cornwall Leigh, whose sudden and untimely death from apoplexy is announced in the last arrivals from the East. Colonel Leigh died in command of the 97th regiment, at Bandar, in Central India. His entire military life since he entered the army, without purchase, as a cadet from the Royal Military College, of Sandhurst, in July, 1839, had been spent in that gallant corps. He had served with it on the foreign stations of the Ionian Isles, Malta, the West Indies, and North America. He led it into action in some of the bloodiest actions in the Crimea, and especially in the attack of the ladder party on the Great Redan on the 8th September, 1855, when, of thirteen officers and 360 rank and file who went with him into action, 201 of the men were killed and wounded, and of the officers he and one other alone escaped unhurt. Having been promoted Lieutenant colonel in the army for his distinguished services in the field, he had the good fortune eventually to obtain the command of the regiment in which he had won his advancement. In this rank he was sent to India on the outbreak of the mutiny of 1857, and joined the Jaunpore field force, under Major general Sir T. H. Franks. He commanded the 97th in the action and capture of the Fort Musrutpore on the 26th of January, 1858, and in the actions of Chanda and Amerapore on the 19th of February, 1858, as well as at the battle of Sultanpore and the action of Fort Dhowrara on the 4th of March, 1858, on which day he joined the 4th division of Lord Clyde's army, took part in the last siege and final capture of Lucknow, and led his men to the assault of the Kaiserbagh. These services had been repeatedly acknowledged in public despatches and by the honours conferred on Colonel Leigh by the Crown, when, suddenly, on the 3rd of June, having scarcely completed the thirty-sixth year of his age, and being still engaged to the last in the active duties of his post, he broke down under the oppressive influence of the climate and expired in a few hours. Endured to him by his own gallant spirit, and by the devoted attachment he had on all occasions shown to the men and officers of the 97th, not a man was absent when it became their melancholy duty to follow the remains of their beloved commander to the grave.

BOOKS.

Wanderings in India. By John Lang. London: Routledge and Co.

This reprint of Mr. Lang's very clever and amusing sketches of "Life in Hindostan," originally contributed to the "Household Words," is offered to the public at a most opportune moment. A more pleasant companion on board of a steamer, or in a railway carriage, can hardly be met with anywhere. As descriptions of Anglo-Indian society in the times before the mutiny these papers are now invaluable. Allowing for artistic exaggerations they are perfect photographs of the old system of things, and if they had no other merit would for that reason alone increase in interest every year. But Mr. Lang possesses in such a pre-eminent degree all the best qualities of a story-teller, that those readers who look upon everything connected with India as an intolerable bore, will derive as much amusement as the most genuine "Qui Hye" from this collection of tales and "silhouettes." The most characteristic papers are those entitled "The Himalaya Club," "Indian Society," "Church-yards," and "Military Matters," including an exquisite sketch of a court-martial. It is not easy to make any extracts that would give a fair idea of Mr. Lang's easy and graphic style without transgressing the limits assigned to light literature in this journal, but we can honestly recommend both those who take an interest in India, and those who do not, to possess themselves of a copy of this most readable little volume and resign themselves for a couple of hours to the entertainment there provided for them.

Up among the Pandies; or, a Year's Service in India. By Lieut. V. D. Majendie, R.A. London: Routledge and Co.

It is to be regretted that Lieut. Majendie should have adopted the conceited and artificial style of diction affected by the Dickens' school. There is a constant straining at effect, and a morbid desire to say something funny or smart, which are wearisome beyond endurance. But whenever he condescends to be simple and natural, his narrative is clear, manly, and spirited. Many of his descriptions, too, whether of scenery or incidents, are remarkably good, and, perhaps, more artistic than any which yet belong to the literature of the Indian rebellion. His sketch, for instance, of the monotonous aspect of the country is far more true to nature than the fine writing of the Times' correspondent, and nothing can be more amusing than his account of the désagrémens of travelling by bullock-train. The following notice of Sir James Outram is both truthful and complimentary:—

"A little to the left are gathered a group of officers of 'high degree,' and among them is one who, at this moment, is attentively observing through his glasses some of the enemy's videttes and cavalry, who are visible at a distance on some rising ground—a short, strongly-built man, black haired, with a keen, twinkling eye, and a cheerful bright smile, and a kind word for all—dressed in a blue frock coat, and everlastingly puffing away at a cheroot—quiet in manner, cool, unwavering, and determined, one whom neither the hottest and most deadly fire, the gravest responsibility, or the most perilous and critical juncture can excite or flurry—a knight sans peur et sans reproche—the 'Bayard of India'—General Sir James Outram—of all the host here assembled the kindest hearted and the gallantest."

Lieut. Majendie entertains no exalted opinion of the military qualities of the Nepaulese auxiliaries sent by Jung Bahadoor. He admits that they were badly led, and that discipline was almost unknown to them, and therefore charitably suggests that under the guidance of British officers they might have conducted themselves as well as the Ghoorkas from Kumaon. But it is now tolerably well ascertained that it was never Jung Bahadoor's intention to commit himself seriously to the support of his English allies. He was simply waiting upon fortune, and quite ready to declare for the winning party: moreover, he was probably disappointed by the actual result.

The Sikhs, when excited, seem to have been utter savages. Their treatment of an unfortunate sepoy whom they took prisoner in the "Yellow Bungalow" is too horrible to mention, and, sad to say, there were Englishmen looking on and rather approving than condemning. Indeed, the slight value set upon human life—that is, the life of a native—is almost appalling, and makes one question for a moment the humanising influences of civilisation. A decrepit old man, supposed to be a spy, was fired at by a sentry, and being wounded in the leg was soon surrounded by a crowd of soldiers. "Ave his nut off!" cried one; "Hang the brute!" cried another; "Put him out of mess!" said a third; "Give him a Cawnpore dinner!" exclaimed a fourth. His doom was sealed, and two men were commissioned to lead him away and "destroy" him—for such was the phrase employed on such occasions:—

"This point being settled, the soldiers returned to their games of cards and their pipes, and seemed to feel no further interest in the matter, except when the two executioners returned, and one of their comrades carelessly asked, 'Well, Bill, what did yer do to him?' 'Oh,' said the man, as he wiped the blood off an old tawlar with an air of cool and horrible indifference which no words can convey, 'Oh, sliced his 'ed off,' resuming his rubber, and dropping the subject much as a man might do who had drowned a litter of puppies; but it was disgusting to see any man—an Englishman especially—so callous after just launching a soul into eternity."

Making due deduction for his occasionally forced vivacity, Lieut. Majendie has produced one of the most amusing and interesting books that have been written on the subject of the Indian mutiny.

APPOINTMENT.—CEYLON.—The Rev. C. Merson has been appointed by the Queen, Chaplain of the Scots Kirk at Colombo, in the island of Ceylon.

PARSEE CRICKETERS.—We see from the Bombay papers that the Parsee youths there have taken to cricket. The "Zoroastrian" club was beaten by the "Juvenile," but a beginning has been made. It is well when Cowasjee can make nineteen ere he is "stumped by Ireland."

THE ICE-KING AT KURRACHEE.—The people of Kurrachee have built an ice house, but Mr. Frederic Tudor, of Boston, cannot afford to send them a cargo of ice, owing to the late revulsion in the India trade. He sends ice only to places where ships go in ballast for return cargoes, because the freight is low. He has recently lost £2,000 in supplying Colombo with ice, but is about to attempt to introduce it into Point de Galle and Singapore. In a pathetic reply, the secretary of the Kurrachee Ice Committee entreats the inexorable Tudor to reconsider the proposition.

TEETH. No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE. BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee. A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features. All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation. To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

RUPTURES.—BY ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS is allowed, by upwards of 200 Medical Gentlemen, to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of HERNIA. The use of a steel spring, so hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit), forwarded by post, on the circumference of the body, two inches below the hips, being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. JOHN WHITE, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON. A Single Truss, 16s. 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. Postage, 1s. A Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d. Postage, 1s. 8d. HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—Marvellous cures of sciatica, stiff joints, paralysis of the limbs, and other crippling diseases of the bones, sinews, and muscles, have been accomplished by Holloway's Ointment. It is the only unguent which produces any impression on these complaints. The Pills also work wonders. The Ointment and Pills should be both used at the same time, for the action of the one is greatly assisted by that of the other. Why should any human being suffer from the above-mentioned maladies when Holloway's Ointment and Pills are to be found in every city and town in the world? These noble medicaments are composed of rare balsams, and are as benign and safe as they are powerful and efficacious.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT from the Second Edition (page 188) of the Translation of the Pharmacopœia of the Royal College of Physicians of London, by Dr. G. F. Collier, published by Longman and Co.:—"It is no small defect in this compilation (speaking of the Pharmacopœia) that we have no purgative mass but what contains aloes; yet we know that hemorrhoidal persons cannot bear aloes, except it be in the form of COCKLE'S PILLS, which chiefly consist of rhubarb, scammony, and colocynth, which, I think, are formed in a sort of compound extract, the acidity of which is obviated, I suspect, by an alkaline process, and by a fourth ingredient (unknown to me) of an aromatic tonic nature. I think no better and no worse of it for its being a patent medicine. I look at it as an article of commerce and domestic convenience, and do not hesitate to say it is the best made pill in the kingdom; a muscular purge, a mucous purge, and a hydragogue purge combined, and their effects properly controlled by a dirigent and corrigent. That it does not commonly produce hemorrhoids, like most aloetic pills, I attribute to its being thoroughly soluble, so that no undissolved particles adhere to the mucous membrane."

NEWBERRY'S COD LIVER OIL CAKES.—"We have examined a specimen of gingerbread made by Messrs. Newberry—each cake containing a teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil. The gingerbread is extremely light and pleasant, the flavour of the oil being completely covered. This seems likely to prove a very useful mode of administering Cod Liver Oil to children, and to others who are nauseated by the offensive odour and flavour of the Oil as generally taken."—Medical Times, 12th Feb., 1859. Eight Cakes, 1s. 9d.; Sixteen (about 1lb.), 3s.—F. NEWBERRY and SONS, 45, St. Paul's-churchyard. Established A.D. 1746.

JAMS, JELLIES, and MARMALADE, PRESERVED IN TINS. By BARNES, MORGAN, and Co. (the Originators of this method of preserving), Upper Thames-street, London, E.C. This mode of Preserving is now acknowledged to be far superior to any yet invented. The contents will keep good for any number of years without the Tin imparting any metallic taste to the Preserve, and never candy or ferment. To Regimental Messes they are peculiarly adapted, being more portable than jars, and not liable to breakage. B. "Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. have just brought out the first number of a monthly periodical, called THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND SOCIAL SCIENCE. We confess that until we read this first number we had no very clear impression that we were in any need of any addition to our already heavily-laden monthly literature; but a careful examination of the contents of the work has satisfied us that its projectors are justified in the undertaking. If they cannot be said, in the slang of the book-market, to have supplied a want, there is little doubt that they will create an audience. The best brief notion we can give of the publication is to say that it promises to become to English readers what the Revue des deux Mondes is to French, with an indefinitely wider latitude of topics and freedom of opinion. The critical element predominates, but it admits of the essay in its pure form, and is sufficiently elastic in both departments to embrace every variety of subject of current or permanent interest. In politics it ranges with the progressive section of the Conservative party, which would preserve the constitution by adapting it from time to time to the necessities of successive epochs. The soundness of its judgment on the question of Parliamentary Reform is displayed in the ablest and most thoroughly constitutional article that has yet appeared in any of our periodicals on the subject; an article which acquires additional value from the fact that it foreshadowed the whole scheme of the Government two days before the Reform Bill was brought forward. In social laws and morals, the object of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW will be to note the progress, and collect the results, of all movements tending towards the advancement or elucidation of those vague philosophical investigations which are clustered under the general head of social science. Good earnest is given of the resources at the command of the writers, and of the practical manner in which they are prepared to deal with them, in an excellent article on the 'Homeless Poor.' There are also capital papers upon 'Russia' and 'Indian Finance;' and some admirable literary articles. This last department is pervaded by a spirit of independence, and a high scholarly tone which, we trust, 'custom' may not impair. Let us have at least one English periodical, written with integrity and good taste, to which we may confidently look for fearless and honest opinions. The UNIVERSAL REVIEW promises to realise these expectations, and we heartily wish it the success it deserves."

From THE PRESS, May 14, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW contains seven articles, which, some for one reason, some for another, merit the attention of the public. The article on Mr. Robertson derives virtue from the excellence of its subject, but is nicely written as well. 'Women—neither Nice nor Wise,' is a protest against the smoking-clubbed, shooting-galleried, red-trousered style of young lady, of whom it is very truly said that all 'their efforts for the emancipation of women are in reality intended for the enslavement of men.' 'The Resources of India, and its Colonization,' has only one fault—it is greatly too short; and we confess if it had been extended over the space which 'The Philosophy of Fabulous Ages' now occupies, we should not have regretted the exchange. 'Michelet on Love' is a review of which it is difficult to determine the merit without having read with great attention the book of which it treats. The writer seems so entirely to agree with his author as to have abandoned any idea of criticising him in the literal sense of the word, so he gives us instead a very compact and clever abstract of his theory, expressed with great felicity, and enlivened by occasional touches of real humour. The writer of 'French Dramatists and English Adapters' took a good grasp of his subject, but laid it down again before he had squeezed it dry. His article contains a good deal, but might have contained more. For instance, he takes up some half-dozen hypotheses to account for the decline of the drama, turns them over, and leaves them, saying it is not his business to settle which is true. But we think this is just what his business was. The article is written in so agreeable a style, and evinces so much latent ability, that we regret more was not made of it. 'The Last of the Moguls,' though a little florid in diction, is well and strikingly executed. The article called 'How shall we vote?' after a summary of the policy of Lord Derby's Administration, proceeds to the delivery of a strong philippic against the Opposition leaders, and especially Lord John Russell. We observe this article has been reprinted in a separate form, and we trust may have contributed to blow away some of those delusions which the public mind has been carefully fed by the partisans of the 'Bedfords.' With the writer's remarks on Lord Palmerston we do not so fully agree. His lordship has performed great services, and what he may have done in a moment of irritation should not be too harshly criticised. The customary 'Session' and 'Books upon our Table,' conclude a very good number."

No. 4 (JUNE) CONTAINS:—

1. MAN AND HIS DWELLING PLACE.
2. A REVIEWER'S PARCEL.
3. THE STORY OF MICROSCOPICAL DISCOVERY.

5. RESOURCES OF INDIA.—COLONIZATION, PART II.
6. THE ROYAL ACADEMY AND THE WATER-COLOUR EXHIBITIONS.

7. POPULAR HISTORY.—KNIGHT'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND.
8. THE FRENCH IN ITALY—A NATIONAL AND TRADITIONAL POLICY.
9. BOOKS ON OUR TABLE.

From THE GLOBE, June 3, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW is, as usual, distinguished by discussing subjects of deeper and more permanent interest than are commonly entered on in monthly publications. The first article, on a book entitled 'Man and his Dwelling Place,' affords the writer an opportunity of professing his acceptance of the Idealistic theory of Bishop Berkeley, which, though supported by reasoning that it is admitted cannot be refuted, has hitherto made so little progress with mankind in general, chiefly on account of the misapprehension that has prevailed, or, perhaps, we may say, which does prevail, respecting it—a misapprehension that, doubtless, the writer is correct in ascribing to people picking up their notions of it at second hand, instead of resorting to the exposition of Berkeley himself. The article entitled 'A Reviewer's Parcel' is a lament over the degeneracy of the present age, especially made manifest by the vast number of new books published every month. Every one has a vague desire to go behind the scenes of a theatre, and by admitting, or pretending to admit, the public behind the scenes of reviewing, the writer of the article in question has produced a taking and readable paper, with which those who know little or nothing about the subject of which it treats will probably be best pleased. 'The Story of Microscopical Discovery' is an interesting article in which the progress of microscopical science is traced from its commencement to now. 'The Resources of India and its Colonization,' an article the first part of which appeared last month, is continued in the present number by a writer who has evidently devoted to the subject considerable care, pains, and research. An article on the picture exhibitions, a political article entitled 'The French in Italy,' 'Austria and the Slavonians,' with other papers, fill up the number."

7. PARTIES, NATURAL AND ARTIFICIAL.
8. LOUIS NAPOLEON—PRINCE AND EMPEROR.
9. THE SESSION.

From THE ILLUSTRATED TIMES, July 9, 1859.

"The new periodical, THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW, fully maintains its excellent start, and may be regarded as one of the cleverest exponents of sound, sensible, unbiassed views among the periodical press. Nothing can be fairer than the spirit pervading two of the articles of the new number, the one on the Divorce Court, the other (in the shape of a review of a bad novel, 'Out of the Depths') on the Delicate Question; though, while giving the writer of the first-named pages every credit for sincerity, we deny the truth of his denunciation of a measure which undoubtedly has given the means of relief to scores of persons weighed down and lost here and hereafter by their tie to a worthless person. As regards the second article, every man of sense must go hand in hand with the reviewer, more especially in that portion of his paper where he deprecates the publication of such books as useless and demoralising. Other very readable essays are—a review of 'What will he do with It?' in which Bulwer is very honestly, and withal very favourably, judged; a pleasant paper on 'Charles James Fox;' an erudite dissertation on Mr. Norris's 'Erudite Book;' 'The Ancient Cornish Drama;' and three political articles, the best written of which is devoted to Louis Napoleon, and closes in the following words—'He said of himself, Je suis citoyen avant d'être Bonaparte. He might more truly have said that he was a political fanatic rather than a great prince; that his genius was a monomania; that his idea of internal order is that of a wolf who would muzzle the dog, and that his faith in foreign powers is that of a burglar in possession of a ticket-of-leave who surveys at his leisure his neighbour's premises, and chooses his own time to break in and seize the spoils."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 5th July brings the gratifying intelligence of the suppression of the mutiny of the 5th Bengal Europeans at Berhampore. This desirable consummation appears to have been effected with very little trouble; nor would the men ever have proceeded to such gross insubordination had the commanding officer exercised somewhat more tact and judgment. Instead of calling upon them to state their grievances, Major Maitland exasperated them still further by very unnecessarily ordering all the officers to withdraw from the men, which was interpreted by the latter to indicate a fear of assassination. They therefore elected their own officers, and appointed a private named Marshall to be their colonel. Their choice was evidently a good one, for their new commander acted with great energy, and succeeded in maintaining a strict discipline by the occasional administration of the cat-o'-nine-tails. He also prevented a collision from taking place between the mutineers and the Queen's troops who were sent to bring them back to their duty. In obedience to his orders the men piled their arms and gave up their ringleaders on the summons of Colonel Kenneth Mackenzie, who arrived at the scene of disturbance on the 26th of June, with H.M.'s 99th regiment, the Buffs, and four guns. Taking up a commanding position, he allowed the mutineers twenty-four hours to make their submission. Only thirty-nine refused to return to their duty, and these were immediately placed under arrest. It is probable, however, that they will be lightly dealt with, while the rest of the regiment will be simply discharged. The recruits at Barrackpore, the men employed at the arsenal, and even the Governor-general's band have signified their intention of resigning the service. In short, it is expected that fully 8,000 trained soldiers will be lost to the service, because Lord Canning grudged the paltry sum of £30,000 to Europeans, while he was lavishing princely gifts on natives of doubtful fidelity.

The Governor-general has appointed Thursday, the 28th of July, as a day of thanksgiving for "the restoration of peace and tranquillity to the Queen's dominions in India." "War"

—says his lordship, or his secretary—"war is at an end; rebellion is put down; the noise of arms is no longer heard where the enemies of the State have persisted in their last struggle; the presence of large forces in the field has ceased to be necessary; order is re-established; and peaceful pursuits have everywhere been resumed."

The proposal to give a public dinner to the Calcutta Volunteer Guards has fallen to the ground. The Governor-general, the Lieutenant-governor, and various other high officials having put down their names on the subscription list, the volunteers expressed a disinclination to accept such a compliment from those who had formerly slighted them. Mr. Cecil Beadon thereupon withdrew his name, and the project was entirely abandoned.

Sir Erskine Perry, we perceive, has been appointed Member of the Council of India. The next vacancy, we therefore presume, will be filled by Mr. Ayrton.

From China we learn that Admiral Hope sailed for the Gulf of Pechellee on the 11th June, and that the Plenipotentiaries were to follow on the 15th. As an imposing force will accompany their excellencies, it is not very likely that the Chinese will attempt to oppose their progress.

BENGAL.

THE ISLANDS IN THE BAY.

It is upwards of a year since we drew attention to the Andaman Islands as the spot selected for the penal settlement of the captured refuse of the mutineers of the rebellion. The report of the committee appointed to examine the shores of these islands, and to fix upon a site, has just been published, and reads like a volume of Captain Cook. The islands, of which a detailed account is given, are the Andamans, the Nicobars, Barren Island, and the Cocos. Beginning with the Great Nicobar, to the north-west of Sumatra, they stretch in a direction parallel with the coast of Tavoy, from the seventh to the fourteenth degree of northern latitude for a distance of 500 miles, ending in the Great Coco. Between the Nicobars and the Little Andaman there is a distance of seventy miles, and this is the one considerable gap in the long wall of coral reefs, among which only native craft can move with freedom, and which have so often been the scene of the wrecks of our richest merchantmen.

If the Bay of Bengal is as much an English sea as the Channel, with its great marts of commerce on either coast, stretching from Singapore past Malacca, Moulmein, Rangoon, Akyab, and the mouths of the Ganges, to Madras, then these islands have a new interest in our eyes, and are, if not essential to the existence of our Eastern empire, necessary for its external peace, for the security and extension of its trade, and for the spread of that civilisation for the sake of which it has been established and still exists. At present they are the abode of savages who are, of all human beings, next to the beasts in the scale of humanity—of men who, if not cannibals, have all the ferocity of such, and who, since the ships of Europe have visited their seas, or the junks of China and the Archipelago have attempted to touch at their coasts, have proclaimed war against all outside of their own tribe, and revelled in the work of wrecking, brutality, and death. Such savages are a blot on the map of our Eastern possessions; and if, as hitherto, they reject every attempt at friendly intercourse, every overture of kindness, they must yield to the operation of that law which, in spite of all fostering care, is sweeping their milder brethren out of Australia—they must disappear.

It will be well if in their case, as with almost all our colonies, the introduction of convict labour is the beginning of progress. The object of the Government of India and the policy of Dr. Walker, in founding and organising the penal settlement at Port Blair, have been to make it finally a free native colony. The sepoys on their arrival are put in a position analogous to that of convicts of the third class in the Straits Settlements, degradation to the lowest class and the imposition of irons being reserved for the refractory. Every step is taken to raise in their breasts some sort of self-respect, of self-reliance, of hope. They are grouped into gangs of twenty-five each, under a section gangman of their own body; four of these constitute a sub-division under a convict head, and a free overseer accompanied by a native doctor. To each division, consisting of four of these hundreds, a shop managed by themselves is attached. The shop-keeper procures his goods from the settlement stores, and sells them at a profit of about three per cent.; making weekly remittances to account. Each man is allowed two annas a day, out of which he supplies himself with every necessary, medicine alone being given free of cost. The industrious may easily earn three annas, and even more, when employed in clearing jungle and felling forest trees at contract rates. When in hospital they are allowed one and a half anna a day, but their section may give them the full share of its earnings. Idlers are tried by their fellow sectioners, who form themselves into a punchayet or jury, and their wages are reduced according to their deserts. Section gangs-men have a commission of one per cent.; sub-division gangs-men, four rupees a month and one half per cent.; and division gangs-men, four rupees a month and one quarter per cent., on the earnings of their respective divisions. This commission is paid by Government when the earnings denote average industry. Thus are the habits of economy and self-management taught.

The formation of the colony depends, however, on what is called the family emigration scheme. With difficulty 25 of the convicts were induced to send for their families. They are promised permission to reclaim and cultivate land free of rent during their own and wife's lifetime. During the first three years, when the produce of the land must necessarily be scanty, four, three, and two rupees a month successively are allowed to each man, two rupees to each woman, and one for each child. Still farther to lay securely the foundation of a future colony, Dr. Walker asked for a company of native infantry, composed of Sikhs and Ghoorkas, or of Madrassees, accompanied by their families. These men would receive assignments of lands and become free settlers, or, if it were impossible to induce a company of soldiers of the line to bring their families to the islands, a local corps might be raised with this view. Many of the free artificers from Moulmein had expressed a desire to send for their families, and the Burmese and Malay convicts of the Peninsula would be happy to settle, with the hope of ultimate comparative freedom. The convict scheme has meanwhile succeeded, at least so far as to give fair hope for the future. The number of desertions, suicides, and deaths at the hands of the savages has been small, while the sickness has not been greater than might have been expected in the case of men who arrived in jungly islands, dispirited, debilitated, and worn away by dysentery and fever. Out of 773 sepoys, landed in the two months after the foundation of the settlement, there were 292 casualties. Of these 64 died in hospital, 140 escaped uncaptured, 87 were executed, and one committed suicide. In June, 1858, 54 died, and in July only 15. We regret that Dr. Walker's reports are not given after the 8th of August last year, but with the experience of such places as Norfolk Island on record, and remembering that these are Asiatics whose crimes are of a somewhat different character from those of the life convicts of England, we should express a conviction that the discipline and health of the settlement at Port Blair have been much better than could have been looked for, and that if the family emigration scheme succeeds in even a small degree, not this generation but their successors will rise up a vigorous young colony, to clear the wastes, to abolish barbarism, to develop the riches of the soil, untrammelled by caste, and free from the sullen hate which impedes progress and deadens energy.

The time may yet come when we shall have to maintain our supremacy in the Bay of Bengal, and dispute on its eastern coasts the advancing wave of French conquest. The time must soon come when in the Bay we shall have something more worthy of the name of a fleet than our wretched Indian marine. The harbours of the Andamans and the Nicobars will then be of value to the empire. But they are certainly now of value as the repositories of a trade that will yet rival that of Borneo and Penang. The only mode by which at first to clear their surface, and tap the wealth of their virgin soil, is largely to introduce convict labour. The Straits Settlements have obtained that position which will lead them gladly to dispense with the off-scourings of our Indian population. Let the Nicobars and the Andamans be the great penal settlement of India. The four Andamans have an area of nearly 2,500 square miles, and not a few good harbours. A new establishment might at once be formed at Port Mout on the East Coast, which is only two miles distant from Port Blair, and both settlements could gradually work up the South Andaman to Port Campbell. The two Cocos, thirty miles to the North, afford the safest anchorage in the Bay, with their fine sandy beach and position sheltered from the South-west swell. The Nicobars have their coasts fringed with industrious Malay settlers, before whom the Negrillo aborigines have retired into the interior. The soil, the climate, the products of all these islands are those of Penang. Even Barren Island, with its slumberingly-active volcano, may yet be valued for its sulphur. All that they want is cultivators, and in their present state the best cultivators would be life convicts.

Generations hence, when the land has been cleared, and the atmosphere made healthy, the Coolies and Klings of Hindostan and the Malays of the Straits will flock to the Islands in the Bay, and make them yield the wealth of a second Java. Our merchantmen will no longer flee their shores, but fill their harbours, and bear away their fancy woods, their rich spices, their coarse rice, their fibres, their cane, their Cannel coal, and their sulphur; while the wreckers, who now make their coasts so dreaded, will find wealth in their rich fisheries.—Friend of India.

THE MUTINY OF THE EUROPEAN TROOPS.

Letters from Berhampore inform us of a decided improvement in the state of affairs: the "Colonel" (a man named Marshall elected by the men to command them) has ordered that any one found looting shall receive fifty lashes on the spot, and the men are perfectly quiet and respectful, saluting their officers and coming to "attention" when they go to the barracks. There is much less drunkenness and disturbance than there used to be. We are also told that Marshall has issued orders that when the Queen's troops arrive, the men shall march out, pile their arms, and retire quietly and steadily to their barracks, but not do any work until they receive "their rights."

Had the orders of Government been carried out, and the men asked by Major Maitland if they had any grievances, as was done at the up-country stations, in all probability these disgraceful proceedings would not have taken place. The men do not seem more to blame than the men of the other regiments up-country, but being raw recruits they have been more decided in the way of showing their grievances than the old soldiers. General Hearsey will doubtless put all to rights.

The following is an extract from a private letter, dated Berhampore, 22nd June:—

"The truth about the 5th Europeans is, that about 400 of them have struck work. They have separated themselves from the loyals, have taken possession of the south upper-room barracks, appointed their own officers, told off fatigue-parties for punkah pulling, water carrying and other menial service, and in short, started a small republic of their own, far better organized and better behaved than for a long time past. A man named Marshall, known by the nick-name of 'the Editor,' has been appointed colonel, with a major, three captains, and eight lieutenants, with sergeants and corporals for duty. Any man getting drunk or looting in the bazaar is immediately flogged. An absurd occurrence took place the day before yesterday. 'Colonel Marshall' flogged a man for disrespect. The major interfered, and was ordered a flogging for his trouble, but the rest would not stand their second in command being ill-used; they put the colonel in confinement all night, and only liberated him next day, after he had made an ample apology to the major. The 'armed civilians,' as they call themselves, are very respectful, and very many of them anxious to return to their duty, but dare not do so on account of the rest."

We hear from Berhampore that the troops were landed, and marched up to the barracks on the 25th, as soon as the steamers arrived. Their commandant (Col. Mackenzie) then addressed the men of the 5th, and dismissed the troops.

Afterwards a parade of the 5th was ordered, but only those who had remained "loyal" attended; next day another parade was ordered, and all the men of the 5th, except some forty, joined their companies—those that would not join were marched off and put in confinement. The commanding officer of the 5th, and the adjutant, have been superseded. A court of inquiry is sitting, and altogether affairs look much more satisfactory.

We hear from Meerut that the Court of Inquiry held there as to the recent discontent among the late Company's troops has closed its proceedings and submitted them to Lord Clyde.

The same stereotyped questions were put to every man, and we understand all the answers were pretty much of the same nature.

About 250 of the artillery were examined, the majority of whom insist, we are told, on their discharge, and a still greater proportion, no less than 530 men, of the 2nd Dumpy cavalry expressed their discontent with their condition and claimed discharge or bounty.

The men generally were very cautious in replying to the questions put to them, evidently fearing to commit themselves.

The following is a copy of the questions, and a pretty accurate "general average" of the replies:—

Private John Smith, a native of London, attested at Westminster, a shoemaker, is called into Court, and asked by the Judge Advocate General:—

What is your complaint?—I listed to serve the Company for ten years, and for two years if required; and as the Company is done away with, why, of course, my bargain is done away with too; for I don't know nothing about the Queen, so I have a right to my discharge, and I want it; but if you do keep me to serve the Queen, you must give me bounty.

Which of the two, bounty or discharge, would you take if you had the choice?—Give me my choice, and then I'll tell you.

Have you any attestation paper?—No.

Do you remember what oath you took when attested? Look at this paper, &c.—Why, I swore something or other, but what it was all about I didn't exactly know. They told me it was "all right;" so, of course, I swore, but I am sure there was nothing in it about serving the Queen.

Have you anything more to say?—I don't understand being turned over like a horse or cow, from master to mistress, against my own wish. That's all about it. [Witness retires.]

Some men declared that nothing would induce them to remain in the service, others hesitated when the bounty was mentioned, and said, perhaps, they would take it, though none, we believe, positively agreed to do so; but making allowances for a few trifling differences in the answers, chiefly verbal, the above is, we are assured, the general nature of every one of them. A few men complained of bad bread, insufficient beer or grog, ill-treatment, and dislike of the country and climate, but these men were the exceptions.

Copies of some of the original attestation papers were in possession of the Court, and showed that the recruits had sometimes taken, and sometimes not taken, the oath of allegiance; but, strange to say, the soldiers enlisted after the Government was transferred to the Crown were almost without exception sworn to serve the non-existing Company. We believe the men honestly believe they never engaged to serve the Crown under any contingency, and we are of opinion that, whether or not, no care was taken at any time to explain the matter to them.

If Rs. 50 in coin were placed before each man, and he was asked whether he would accept that bounty to serve the Queen or take his discharge, and at the same time it was distinctly explained to him that it was perfectly optional with himself to stay or go, nine men out of ten would pocket the money for choice. But should the men be detained contrary to their free choice, notwithstanding bounty may be given to them or forced upon them, there will be the devil to pay, for the men are already exasperated with the attempt which they say Government has made to impose upon them.—Englishman.

THE BAMBOO.—The Indian Field contains some facts regarding the growth of the bamboo. In the Royal Botanic Garden, at Edinburgh, the average growth of one specimen was six inches a day in a temperature of from 65 degrees to 70 degrees. The Burmah bamboo (Bambusa gigantea) is considered the prince of bamboos. It attains the height of 100 feet, each joint ranging from 20 to 24 inches in length, and as much as 36 inches in circumference. It has been known to grow 18 inches in 24 hours. This bamboo in Bengal attains a height of 65 feet. Of indigenous kinds the Bambusa tulda rises to its full height of 70 feet in about one month. This is at the rate of about an inch an hour, and should be visible. The "Balcoo bans," chiefly used in house building on account of its toughness and solidity, averages from 50 to 60 feet in height.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING.—The Englishman learns that the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has ordered that the cost of printing in the Bengal office be reduced one-third, or, failing such reduction, that it be given up altogether. The confusion and expense attendant on the introduction of printing into the various Government offices in Calcutta will ultimately result in the establishment of a great central press like that at Allahabad. All really important work could there be printed, and mere letters and memoranda might be copied as before. If Sir Charles Trevelyan's reforms were introduced into the office correspondence and routine of the presidency, one establishment, even smaller than the Secundra press, would easily overtake the work.

A GOLD CURRENCY.—The Calcutta Chamber of Commerce recently addressed Government, urging on them the expediency of introducing a gold currency into India. They wished to make gold legal tender to the extent of Rs. 200, recognising the sovereign as the equivalent of Rs. 10. Their letter was accompanied by a similar request from certain native bankers, who asked it on the ground of the greater convenience of carrying gold from place to place, of the greater facility for hoarding it, of the diminution of difficulty in obtaining silver from England, and of the derangement in the money markets of Europe. The Governor-general replied that the proportional value of a gold coin with the standard silver coin would be fluctuating, and obligations existing between debtor and creditor, and between the Government and its creditors, would be disturbed. There is no parallel between England, where gold is the standard, and silver a legal tender only to the extent of forty shillings, and India, where silver is the standard, and gold would be a legal tender to ten times the extent of forty shillings. The Government already places gold coins within reach of the public, to be used at their option. The fact that 5s. 2d. an ounce is the price paid for the silver lately sent from England is no evidence that there is difficulty in obtaining it, nor is the evil of the derangement of the market in Europe so great as to call for the adoption of a measure that would be hurtful in India.

BEHAR.—From the Englishman we learn that matters are more settled in the Behar district, and along the Grand Trunk Road, the latter of which was represented by a correspondent to be unsafe for travelling. The outrages that were recently committed were the acts of starving men, and the result of a failure of the crops among the half civilised tribes inhabiting the low ranges of hills which skirt the Grand Trunk Road in that district. The persons who plundered some Government carts on the occasion alluded to were armed with no other weapons than lathies, and were composed of Rajwars, and other original tribes inhabiting Behar, and were not mutineers.

THE NEW TARIFF.—The Government of India have authorised the exemption, from the new rates of import duty, of goods which were bonded previous to the New Tariff Excess; payment, in all cases in which duty has been levied on such goods at the enhanced rate, is to be refunded.

SCHOOLS FOR EUROPEAN CHILDREN.—The Bishop of Calcutta has circulated among the clergy and laity of his diocese a proposal for founding public schools for the education of boys of European or mixed descent in India. The scheme embraces a school for the Punjab, another for the N. W. Provinces, and a third for Bengal, to be established at the most suitable of the Hill Stations. The schools are to be in connection with the Church of England, and to have as trustees the bishop, and officials such as the Lieutenant-governor of each province. Some general principles are enunciated, the most important of which is, that the trustees "should leave the internal management entirely to the head master, as the constant interference of trustees and committees only leads to confusion. The head master should also nominate and remove the assistant masters." The scheme is important, and, if carried out with unsectarian liberality, may ultimately succeed, under efficient masters. But we fear it must be in abeyance until access to the Hill Stations is much easier and cheaper than at present. The Presidency cities are the centres of population, and there alone, with a community excessively attached to their children, large public schools will succeed. For a long time schools in the Hills will be nothing more than unremunerative boarding establishments on a small scale.

THE SILKWORM.—The Collector of Salem has drawn up a report on the breeding of the silkworm at Denkencottah in his district. 10,000 worms produce a pound of silk, which is sold at the rate of Rs. 2½ per seer. The mulberry trees on which they are fed last with care for ten years, and yield fresh leaves six times a year. One yield of leaves on an acre of ground suffices for worms sufficient to yield seven seers of silk. The net profit per acre is reckoned at Rs. 27-4.

THE PESHAWUR EURASIAN REGIMENT and the remnants of the Allahabad garrison are to be amalgamated with the East India Rifle Regiment at Raneeungee. We believe the Peshawur corps has rendered good service to Government during the late crisis, and the Lahore Light Horse, composed chiefly of Eurasian, distinguished themselves under Lord Clyde at Bareilly, and we find their services handsomely acknowledged by the Commander-in-Chief.

THE BENGAL COAL COMPANY held their half-yearly meeting on Thursday, June 16. The deliveries from their depots amounted, during the six months ending 30th April, to 15,04,669 maunds, being an excess of 3½ lakhs of maunds over the deliveries of any previous half year. The directors recommended a dividend of Rs. 80 per share, or at the rate of 16 per cent. per annum. They complain that the East Indian Railway Company is still unable to meet the wants of the coal traffic, and affirm, in answer to twaddle about the exhaustion of the mines, that they can supply coal at the present rate from one mine alone for three thousand years.

A PROVIDENT "SKINNER."—Sheik Wazeer has been sentenced in the Calcutta Supreme Court to fifteen months' imprisonment with hard labour, for feloniously killing three cows with arsenic. The prisoner had charge of the "skinning" ghaut, which he rented from the municipal commissioners at Rs. 375 a year. This entitled him to all the skins and horns of the dead animals brought to the ghaut. Since he rented the ghaut his neighbours found that their cows were dying off very fast.

WASTE LANDS.—A Darjeeling resident has applied to the Revenue Board for an explanation of the term "waste lands" in the new rules for granting freeholds there. The superintendent holds that these rules are applicable only to lands which have never been cleared. He retains land which has been partly cleared for re settlement with the former lessee on other terms than those offered in the rules. Waste lands are evidently "uncleared" lands, but it is to be hoped that both the Revenue Board and Dr. Campbell will carry out the instructions of the Home Government in a liberal way. The time for a petty adherence to words and rules has gone.

CHUPRA.—The Chupra correspondent of the Hurkaru states that much sickness is prevailing at that station, and that numbers of the natives are daily carried off by the cholera. Mozufferpore is likewise suffering from the same scourge. The same correspondent mentions that a body of rebels had recently made an excursion from the Goruckpore jungles, and threatened the villages of Nuggra, on the other side of the river.

H.M.'s 75th.—The Englishman states that her Majesty's 75th continues notorious for the number of its officers that are placed under arrest. A private letter from Meerut informs our contemporary that the assistant surgeon of the corps is now in that position, charged with having written a letter to the commanding officer, complaining of the conduct of the adjutant in having tampered with his servants, to obtain the domestic secrets of the family. He is also charged with having made the same accusation in the hearing of several officers of the corps.

AKYAB.—The Akyab correspondent of the Hurkaru gives an account of a storm which visited that station on the 12th June, and lasted till the 14th. Houses have been injured, and large trees uprooted. The vessels in harbours have also suffered. Two or three Chittagong vessels were driven several miles up the river, and a barque has been cast on Flat Island, a few miles to the east of Akyab. The tides became so high that several houses on the river side were in danger of being swept away. The Government wharf, which is described as eight or nine feet above high water mark, was completely inundated. The steamer Baltic, which arrived there on the 12th, was unavoidably detained by the storm till the 19th.

DINAGEPOR.—The commencement of the rains has been the harbinger for closing all field work, as well with the revenue surveyors as with the professional surveyors. But up to the first week in June the Dinagapore division was still under canvas, the rain pouring in torrents and the ground reeking with wet. We know not to whom the blame may be attributed; but a little foresight in beginning earlier and stopping sooner might have prevented the exposure which is likely to endanger health if not life. The work itself is sufficient to induce disease. Both the superintendents, Mr. Waterfield and Captain Sherwill, were compelled from ill health to come in to the station some days previously to the arrival of their establishments. The professional surveyors, under Captain Sherwill, have made Darjeeling their head-quarters, where they must remain the next six months. Should Government have directed this measure without regard to the consent of the subordinate officers of the establishment, they have virtually inflicted an injury amounting to a forfeiture of half their salaries, by placing them in a remote and isolated part of the country, where the bare necessities of life are scarcely procurable, except at famine prices. Is it just to tax these officers in this way, seeing that their beggarly salaries scarcely suffice to feed and clothe them in the plains? The revenue survey of Dinagapore has, however, been finally closed. The superintendent, Mr. Waterfield, has been transferred to the finance department in Madras, and his establishment may probably be removed to Tippera. The professional surveyors will be detained another year, as they are intentionally kept back a year in their work, to enable the revenue departments to provide work enough to keep them employed. The closing of the revenue survey of the district has been a subject of rejoicing with the people. The Ameens let loose upon them have well fleeced the zemindars, without excepting the talookdars and the lakhirajdars, the latter having suffered most from their extortions. Mr. Morris, when in charge of the survey, though mostly on horseback, relieving the peasantry from the destruction committed by the boars and pigs, had fire and energy enough to keep these Ameens in sufficient awe to prevent much of their depredations. His successor will now be more pleasantly employed than in superintending such a set.—Englishman.

CALCUTTA VOLUNTEERS.—The dinner which was to have been given at the Town Hall to the volunteer guards has been abandoned. This is attributed to some letters that appeared in the Calcutta journals on the subject, which have created an angry feeling among the members of that corps, and to some of the names in the subscription list being objectionable to them. Mr. Cecil Beadon, finding that he was the individual pointed at in the letters in question, withdrew his name as a subscriber. Mr. Mackinlay declared at a meeting which was held at the Town Hall, that as so little harmony prevailed, it would be better to give up the intention of giving the dinner, at least for the present.

LITTLE BY LITTLE.—Permanent way is thus supplied to the Lahore Railway. Hundreds of small native craft creep up the Indus, each containing from twenty to thirty yards of rail. Putting time out of the question, how many will be required to supply the whole line to Lahore, a distance of 210 miles?

CAPT. W. W. OSBORNE.—The Governor General in Council is pleased to appoint Capt. W. W. Osborne, political agent at Rewa, to officiate also as political assistant for Bundelcund, during the absence of Maj. Ellis.

THE EX-KING OF OUDE.—The Englishman states that some of the Bengal Baboos have entered into a combination with one of the musicians and a servant of the King of Oude to persuade the King that they have sufficient influence to procure his liberation. They require two lakhs as a fee for the Governor-general, a lakh and fifty thousand for the secretaries, and of course a moiety for themselves. It is stated that they have actually had an interview with the King.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, July 2).—After the departure of the last mail the market was in a somewhat healthier state, consequent on the exhaustion of stocks in first hands, and the delay in the arrivals of some vessels from home; but since last week, several arrivals having taken place have caused buyers to hold back, and the advices received from the upper provinces being of an unfavourable nature, business has been greatly restricted, and confined to immediate local requirement, and a gradual fall in price has taken place. Mule Twist has been sold very moderately by both first and second hands at reduced prices. Chintz and Turkey Red goods have been sold moderately, but the season for operation is close at hand. Grey Shirtings have been sold very moderately, and light and heavy muskies have fallen in price; medium 6 1/2 lb. to 7 1/2 lb. scarcely maintain former price. White and Figured without up-country demand and with a very limited local requirement. Grey Madapolams rather dull, and at slightly reduced price. Grey Jaconet season closing and expected to fall in price. Grey Mulls.—Market quiet, but without change in price. White Mulls in moderate local requirement at unaltered price. Lappets in local requirement at former price. Woolens, very little doing, but the season is close at hand. Metals.—Market quiet inactive in the absence of up-country buyers. EXPORTS (Calcutta, July 2).—The fortnight under review has been a very quiet one for exports. Value of almost all articles has a downward tendency, but buyers keep aloof. The Indigo accounts continue nearly as before. Sugar dull and lower. Sulphur in less demand, at lower prices. A fair business in Rice. Silk at about Rs. 2 decline from the highest point. La Coras nothing doing. Oil Seeds dull and declining. Jute without inquiry. Safflower neglected. Hides in fair demand.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE PEOPLE'S PARK.—There is little likelihood of the scheme of a people's park in Madras being soon carried out. The Madras Times says the Government look to defray the whole cost by the sale of the ground for villas, and failing that supply they must apply to the Supreme Government.

TINNEVELLY PEARL BANKS.—The Madras Superintendent of Marine recommends the Government to guard the pearl banks of Tinnevely. They should be buoyed off, and no fishing permitted within a mile of them. At the last examination in December last of six banks off Tuticoreen, the oysters were found to be healthy, and from four to four and a-half years old. They are seldom found with pearls till the age of five or six. If allowed to remain after seven years the oyster dies and is lost. It is expected that these banks will yield an excellent return in 1861. They were last fished in 1830. Since 1807 they have been gradually deteriorating as a source of revenue.

SUPERSTITION IN THE DECCAN.—The Bombay Times pictures the ravages of cholera in the Deccan, and the alarm of the natives. In many districts a fifth or sixth of the population has been destroyed by it. The villagers look only to the Devi, or goddess, to whose wrath they attribute its origin, for its removal. They fashion an image in which she may dwell, like a woman in duplicate, to which they give the names of Jhari and Mari, the cognomens of the pestilence. The image is clothed, put on a car, and taken round the village boundaries, surrounded by the shouting inhabitants. In the evening a buffalo is slain before her, and she is then turned out to the jungle, her devotees now flying from her as fast as they can, fancying that they have outwitted her.

TAMIL CONVERTS.—The third report of the mission among the Tamil coolies on the coffee plantations of Ceylon shows that the number of Tamils professing Christianity has risen from 381 in 1856 to 651 in 1858.

JAULNA.—We perceive a letter in the Bombay Standard of the 18th June, from Captain Cadell, commanding B Troop, M. H. A. at Jaulna, contradicting a statement which appeared in that journal regarding the disaffection of his troop. The writer states that the men were not disaffected on the occasion referred to, and that their riotous conduct originated partly from the annoyance occasioned to them by the orderly corporal, who, being drunk, read the names of those on duty who were not on duty, and partly by the indiscretion of the sergeant-major, who kept them on parade till a late hour in the evening. It appears that when the latter dismissed them they shouted and hooted. Captain Cadell was sent for by the sergeant-major, and immediately repaired to the spot. He sharply reprimanded the soldiers for their conduct, and threatened to punish severely those who should evince an insubordinate disposition. On inquiry, finding that the orderly corporal was to blame, he had the man confined, and the men quietly returned to their barracks. Captain Cadell states that having only two officers available for duty there was no officer on parade at the time, and that had one been present, the disturbance among the men of his troop would not have occurred.

THE DECCAN.—The following extract, contradicting the recent rumours regarding the disturbed state of the Deccan, is taken from the Madras Spectator. We only hope that the information is correct. "Our Deccan letter informs us that there is not a particle of truth in the absurd stories that have found their way into the Bombay prints respecting the Deccan, which is described as being in a disturbed state. We are assured that the country was never quieter than it is at present. The severe punishment inflicted on the Robillas and Arabs at Checumba will not permit of any combination to do us or the Nizam any mischief for a long time to come."

THE HARRIS TESTIMONIAL.—Rs. 5,764 have been subscribed to this testimonial.

THE NEILGHERRIES.—The residents on the Neilgherry Hills have established a public library, the want of which has long been felt by loungers and invalids. Visitors will find it a new attraction.

EUROPEAN TROOPS (INDIA).—A Government Bill limits the number of European troops to be employed in her Majesty's Indian army at 30,000 in the whole, including the officers, commissioned and non-commissioned, and authorizes her Majesty to enlist and retain 6,000 non-commissioned officers and men belonging to the said Indian army in the United Kingdom and the British Isles.

BOMBAY.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CONJUGAL BLISS.—The following case, given by the Bombay papers, affords a parallel to some in the London Police Courts, and an instance of the evil of boy marriages in the East. Ruttonbaee, a girl of twelve years of age, applied to a Bombay magistrate for protection from the maltreatment of her boy-husband and mother-in-law. When living after her marriage in her mother's house, she was dragged against her mother's consent to the boy's house, and there brutally beaten and starved. She appeared in court, with her features, which possessed great natural beauty, sunken, and her head gashed with a deep wound. As usual the matter had been first referred to a Punchayet of the caste, who decided that she should remain with her husband. But as the former inhuman treatment had been renewed, she had again fled to her mother's house. She expressed her willingness to return to her husband if she were properly treated. The magistrate put the boy and his mother under bail to keep the peace towards her. Such cases are not unfrequent, but they seldom appear on the surface of native society.

CHRISTIAN BOOKS.—The Dnyandipak of Surat states that the masters of some Government schools in Guzerat lately attempted to prevent their scholars from purchasing Christian tracts and books sold by colporteurs. They threatened them with the displeasure of Government if they bought or read such works. The same has been the case in the southern Concan, where the lads were taught that Government was very much opposed to a change of religion from Hindooism to Christianity. The educational inspector of the northern division sent a circular letter to the Guzerat teachers, informing them that they should not interfere except to prevent the purchase of Christian books in school and during school hours, and that it was not true that the disfavour of Government was incurred by reading such books. At the same time he went out of his way to add that the teachers should prevent the purchase of Christian books at any time if the parents and friends of the pupils were opposed to it.

THE BOMBAY PRESS.—From the communication of a correspondent of the Poona Observer, of the 11th June, we learn that great changes are shortly to take place in the press at Bombay. Mr. Knight, of the Times, it is reported, joins the Madras Athenaeum; a full-blown London editor, of the name of Craig, expected shortly from England, is to conduct the Standard; Mr. Stack, late of the Gazette, is about to return to England, and Mr. George Craig, of the Telegraph and Courier, has secured the farming of that paper for a period of five years. The whole of Mr. Craig's friends at Bombay are delighted with this arrangement, as that gentleman will be able to devote all his energy to the paper, and will be free from any proprietary coercion. We learn from the same communication that new types have been ordered out from England for the Telegraph and Courier, as Mr. Craig is resolved to "give to his journal that external appearance which its intrinsic merits demand."

PARSEE FEMALE EDUCATION.—The Bombay Standard notices the increasing interest of the Parsee community there in female education. Cursetjee Cowasjee Ashburner, the proprietor of the Bandhoop distillery, has founded a school for "Parsee girls and women." From their intercourse with Europeans, and their general intelligence gained in business, the Parsees begin to feel keenly the inferiority of their females in education and common sense.

THE PARSEES OF BOMBAY seem to be ardent lovers of theatricals. As acted lately at the Grand Road Theatre, the play of "Pizarro" appeared as a serio-comic drama. The farce is represented as "a simple story of the tyrannies and excesses of a Nawab over his subjects."

OPIMUM.—During the official year 1858-9 there was a decrease in the number of chests of opium exported from Bombay of 4,293, and in the revenue derived from the pass fees of Rs. 17,17,500' as compared with the preceding year, when an unprecedentedly large number of passes was granted. The Bombay Government is satisfied with the result, as the realisations are far in excess of the average, being Rs. 1,44,44,764 for 1858-59, against Rs. 1,10,76,493, the average of the five preceding years.

JEWS IN INDIA.—The Bombay Telegraph and Courier, referring to the great Jewish merchant in Bombay, Mr. Daoud Sassoon, states that he had been the means of bringing hundreds of Jews to that Presidency, whose industry and intelligence had rendered them most useful members of the community. A great number of the men and officers in the Bombay Guide Corps are Jews. During the disturbances of the last two years they were loyal to a man, and in several instances gave valuable information. It is said that the Jews have offered to raise and support a Jewish legion for England in the event of a general war. (?)

CHINA.

HONG KONG, June 22nd.—The London mail of the 26th April arrived here on the afternoon of the 9th; that of the 10th May has not yet arrived.

In our last overland summary it was mentioned that the British, French, and American Ministers had proceeded northward on their way to Peking with their ratified treaties. By our latest dates from Shanghai they were to leave that place on their way to Peking, by the Gulf Pechelee, on the 15th, and the admiral had already left with the greater portion of the English force.

It is now not improbable that obstacles may be thrown in the way of their advance. The Chinese Imperial Commissioners who were at Shanghai tried very hard to detain there the British and French plenipotentiaries, pretending that they alone were entrusted with the exchange of the ratified treaties, and that they wanted to be at the capital for about two months. However, two rather severe communications, addressed to them by their excellencies the hon. Mr. Bruce and M. de Bourboulon, succeeded in changing the opinions of Kwei-liang and his associate. The last despatch which the Prime Minister addressed to the representatives of Great Britain and France seemed to indicate that the way to Peking is quite open to the British, French, and American plenipotentiaries; and the Imperial Commissioners left for Peking on the 13th.

There have been various rumours among the Chinese concerning the matter in question. It was said at first that Senn-ko-lin-sin, one of the forty Mongol princes, and who is, or was, at the head of the opposition against the peaceful exchange of the ratifications, had been disgraced and had poisoned himself. Others say that it was Tan, viceroy of Chih-li; and now it is Senn Wang, who is said to have destroyed himself.

The most trustworthy accounts state that Senn covers Tien-tsin with about 50,000 or 60,000 of his Mongol followers. Notwithstanding that the British and French ministers resolved to proceed to Peking, and not to exchange the ratifications of the treaty anywhere but at the capital, where, it is to be hoped, some real success will be obtained by unflinching resolution, and the sublime countenance of the Celestial Dragon may be contemplated even by "unworthy barbarians."

Some evil will be done to European influence in the East by the withdrawal of the French force from Cochinchina before they have done much to impress the Annamese with respect for European power. The latter have made such a good resistance that they will be sure to ascribe the withdrawal of the French to their own powers; and, unfortunately, the orders which were sent to bombard Hue before withdrawing are little likely to be put in force, as an advance towards that place had not been made, and would be attended with great difficulty. Meanwhile, the Cochinchinese at Turon had been threatening the lines of the allied force. We learn from Manila that they had been gradually strengthening their lines of defences in the immediate vicinity of the allied camp (though on the opposite side of the river), and compelling the latter to maintain a daily cannonade of some hours. At length it was determined to force their position, and on the 8th June a force of 750 men commenced an attack on the outer lines of the enemy's defences. After a well-contested struggle of two or three hours, during which the Cochinchinese kept up a pretty well-directed fire, three of the lines were carried, and their defenders driven out, leaving behind them seventy guns, quantities of arms, and several dead bodies, which in their haste they had been unable to carry off. This success was not obtained without some loss to the allies; namely, eight killed (including a Spanish captain named Mahourat) and forty or fifty wounded, most of them seriously. From fishermen friendly to the allies the latter ascertained the Cochinchinese loss to be 700 wounded and 100 killed. The defences and arms that were taken have been burnt and destroyed. The Cochinchinese were actively employed in reinforcing the lines that remained to them, and it was said they had instructions from Hue to keep on the defensive.

In the neighbourhood of Nankin the rebels are again quiet, or at least have met with no more success of late.

The schooner under the command of Lieut. Brooke, which was despatched by the United States Government to examine a number of reported "dangers" on the route pursued by vessels coming from California to China, has reached Hong Kong, after finding only about one-fifth of the reported dangers.

The wet season commenced here soon after the departure of last mail, and has been accompanied by a great reduction of temperature, and by very heavy gales. It is to be feared that the first rice-crop in the south will be very deficient, if not spoiled altogether. There had been abundance of rain in the valley of the Yang-tze-kiang, but north of that the drought still continued, according to the latest advices, and was causing much distress.

Last mail we reported the export of tea to amount to 56,987,000 lb., and since then the following vessels have left:—From Shanghai, none. From Fuh Chan, the Fiery Cross, with 860,000 lb.; Bacchante, 889,700 lb.; and the Ellen Rodger, with 765,300 lb. From Macao the New Margaret, with 479,000 lb. From Canton, the Hoang Ho, with 652,000 lb. The total exports to date amount to 60,633,000 lb.

The only departure to the United States has been the John Jay, from Shanghai, with 529,600 lb., making the total to date 30,586,300 lb.

The Bell Rock took 102,600 lb. tea for the colonies. The Norma took 903 bales of silk for Southampton, and 445 bales for Marseilles, giving a total of 71,222 bales to the former port and 8,873 to the latter. The Malabar takes about 1,450 bales for Southampton.—Overland Mail.

THE DEBT OF INDIA.—A return to the House of Lords shows that the grand total amount of the sums borrowed in India since May, 1857 (down to June last), is 10,86,90,563 rupees, or £10,869,056. Another return shows that in 1858 the debt in India amounted to £60,704,084, and the interest payable to £2,666,275. The amount of home bond debt outstanding in 1857-8 was £3,894,400, and the interest payable £155,776.

Restoration of Peace in India.

PROCLAMATION.

The restoration of peace and tranquillity to the Queen's dominions in India makes it the grateful duty of the Viceroy and Governor General in Council to direct that a day be appointed for a solemn thanksgiving to Almighty God for his signal mercies and protection.

War is at an end; rebellion is put down; the noise of arms is no longer heard where the enemies of the State have persisted in their last struggle; the presence of large forces in the field has ceased to be necessary; order is re-established; and peaceful pursuits have everywhere been resumed.

The Viceroy and Governor general in Council desires that Thursday, the 28th day of July, be observed as a day of General Thanksgiving for these great blessings, and as a holiday throughout British India, by all faithful subjects of the Queen.

Especially his Excellency in Council invites all her Majesty's Christian subjects to join in a humble offering of gratitude and praise to Almighty God for the many mercies vouchsafed to them.

The Bishop of Calcutta will be requested to prepare a form of prayer, to be used on the day above-mentioned by the congregations under his lordship's spiritual authority.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THURSDAY, August 11, 1859.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION OF THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES FOR THE YEAR 1857-58.

THE report on the financial administration of the North-West Provinces during the year of trouble 1857-58, submitted by the Sudder Board of Revenue for the consideration of the Governor-general, is quite as favourable as could reasonably have been anticipated even by the most sanguine. The Land Revenue, nominally estimated at Rs. 4,20,63,102, yielded previously to 30th April last, Rs. 3,11,30,304, leaving a deficit of Rs. 1,09,32,798, which has been reduced by subsequent payments to Rs. 88,70,697. Of this, again, it is confidently expected that fully thirty-eight lakhs will be ultimately realised, so that the actual loss will not exceed half a million sterling. But even this loss is rather nominal than real, for it arises in a great measure from claims which should never have been made, or which could never have been enforced. "No inconsiderable portion," says Mr. Lowe, the Secretary to the Sudder Board, "consists of nominal items, the demands on estates which have suffered by diluvion, or on tracts of forest and waste which have been relinquished, or on estates in Bundelkund and in the Saugor and Jhansi divisions, subject to revision of assessment. To these, large additions have been made of nominal balances against estates of loyal landholders who have armed in defence and support of local authority." Recourse has been rarely had to coercive measures, and in only two districts have there been any sales of land for recovery of arrears, and in both instances because the proprietors had abandoned their estates and joined the rebels. Sequestrations have naturally been more numerous, but not so much as a punishment for default as from the necessity of protecting properties temporarily left without owner or occupier.

The loss of revenue under the head of Abkary, or Excise, is acknowledged to have been very considerable, not less, indeed, than 50 per cent. This is accounted for by the circumstance that "few of the abkars or distillers work on their own capital. They are dependent for advances and the materials of distillation on other parties, who have suffered largely from the general licence of plunder. The licensed distiller also has generally had little inducement to expose, and little support from authority against, the illicit manufacturer and smuggler." It was expected, however, that the former standard would be recovered in the course of the ensuing year. The stagnation of trade and the suspension of civil authority could not do otherwise than cause a serious defalcation of the stamp revenue, to the extent, it is stated, of two-thirds of the average return. The actual losses in cash resulting from the plunder of local treasuries, is computed at one million sterling—a large amount, no doubt, but not surprisingly so considering the large tract of territory for a time in the possession of the rebels, and the defenceless condition of the treasuries themselves. It is rather a matter of wonder and very creditable to the local authorities that so much was saved under such adverse circumstances.

One strange peculiarity of the rebellion has been that notwithstanding the constant marchings and countermarchings of armed hosts, and the still more destructive forays of predatory bands, agricultural operations sustained scarcely any check or damage. In Bundelkund alone was any serious injury done to the crops. Trade, of course, was generally annihilated for a time, with the exception of the traffic between Futtehghur and the districts of Rohilkund, which does not appear to have been interfered with.

For the most part the native officials remained passively loyal, watching the progress of events and prepared to regulate their conduct by the final issue of the conflict. The inferior employés, however, deserted their posts and "joined in the licence of plunder and crime." With regard to the attitude of the people generally, the various testimonies of the district officers are thus succinctly summed up by the Secretary of the Sudder Board:—

"The Mahomedans and the Hindoos of the dominant castes, especially in the districts from which the native army has been recruited, and on the borders of Oude, were generally actively disaffected. The inferior classes were passive and indifferent. Predatory clans, true to their traditions, relapsed at once into former habits of wanton licence, indiscriminate plunder, and ruthless violence. The baser populace of towns and villages followed their example, not unfrequently led on by those whose duty was to restrain them, for the gratification of private revenge, or at least having a licence to ravage elsewhere, so long as they did no mischief at home. The traders, the money-lenders, the men of substance, were either victims or compounded for their safety with parties strong enough to defend them. Old feuds were revived; transfers of landed property or occupation were summarily cancelled; all was anarchy and confusion. Yet with all this, agricultural industry went on much as usual."

THE CAREER OF LORD CANNING.

WHEN the pawn checkmates the king there must be something wrong. When the finances of a country are hopelessly deranged—when deep-seated discontent pervades all classes of the community—when every new measure produces some mischief—we may safely conclude that the ruler of such a country is unfitted for his post; and it becomes a matter of urgent and paramount necessity to remove him from it as soon as possible. Such is undoubtedly the case with India and its present Viceroy, and, as the people in this country are beginning to be aware of the fact, the time has arrived when we may properly take a short retrospect of the career of Lord Canning, which has been so fertile in disasters.

A very short time after his arrival in India, those acts called by the Europeans the Black Acts were introduced into the Legislative Council of India, and caused an immense excitement among the European portion of the population. The great privilege they had enjoyed of being exempted from the jurisdiction of the Native Courts in their criminal department, and being subjected only to that of the Supreme Court, presided over by her Majesty's Judges, was about to be taken from them, and the future evils in store for them, should these acts be passed, were of the most appalling description. Terrified by the prospect before them, and believing that Lord Canning could not be aware of the terrible consequences that might ensue, a numerous deputation of the most respectable inhabitants of Calcutta waited upon his Lordship, and explained the nature of the Acts, the corruption of the Native Courts, and the injustice and wide-spread misery that would infallibly follow their adoption. Lord Canning replied that, as the deputation was a respectable one, he would take their arguments into consideration, informing them, at the same time, that he considered them very unreasonable. The only consideration given to the arguments of the deputation was to hasten the passing of the Acts through the Legislative Council. The European residents then held an immense meeting in the Town-hall of Calcutta, where many angry speeches were made regarding the corruptness of Native Courts, the perjury of native witnesses, and the dreadful consequences to all Europeans should the Acts be passed. A few days afterwards a large meeting of natives took place in the same town-hall; and it is a well-known fact that that meeting was suggested by members of the Government, and encouraged by Lord Canning; and, although the Black Acts did not in the slightest degree affect their position, the most violent speeches were made by natives, in which abuse of the European was the principal topic. What statesman of any foresight, of any common-sense, would not have trembled at the idea of pitting the European and native races against each other, and rousing a natural antagonism which was fast fading away, and which time would have altogether obliterated? But Lord Canning, like the fiddling Nero, calmly beheld the alarming spectacle, and made no effort to allay a conflagration which might consume, not a city, but an empire. These meetings took place in the month of February, 1857, and the numerous native papers of Calcutta spread the news of the angry contest, with their own violent comments on the character and conduct of the hated Feringhees, through the length and breadth of the land. How much may not these events have contributed to the rebellion that followed so soon afterwards, and to the active and cruel part taken in it by almost all the inferior and many of the superior native officials of the Courts? When Khan Bahadur Khan, the Sudder Ameen, or native judge, of Bareilly, tried and hanged his superior Mr. Robertson, may he not have told him that he was merely carrying out the provisions and intention of the Black Acts?

Such was the commencement of Lord Canning's disastrous career. Then followed the mutiny of the 19th regiment. Had that regiment been annihilated, as it deserved, the whole movement of the mutiny would have been arrested, as a similar mutiny was suppressed by the vigorous act of Sir Edward Paget twenty-seven years before. But Lord Canning merely disbanded the regiment, paid the men to the last day of their service, and permitted them to depart to their homes, and spread their mutinous doctrines among the whole native army in the interior. The disbanded mentold their comrades they had mutinied, and that the sircar, or Government, was so weak and so much afraid of them, that instead of enforcing the articles of war and causing them to be shot, it had only dismissed them and had actually paid their wages to the day. No act of Lord Canning's administration has been so dangerous or so productive of mischief as the disbandment of the 19th regiment. The natural consequences followed. In May the Meerut and Delhi mutinies broke out, followed gradually by that of the whole native army of Bengal. When the danger became imminent, and was palpable to every European in the country, Lord Canning either could not, or would not, see it. He rejected the offers of service of the Europeans in Calcutta, and delayed for a considerable time to ask for reinforcements from England; and when he did ask for them, he did not represent to the authorities in this country the urgent nature of the case, so that troops were not sent off with that expedition which would have been observed had the magnitude of the danger been explained. Roused at last to a knowledge of his position by the terrible details from the interior, he accepted the services of the Europeans in Calcutta and called for reinforcements. But a long time had to elapse before they could arrive, and for months he, the ruler of a vast empire, had to sit in pitiable helplessness in his capital while the small body of Europeans in the interior were gallantly fighting against overwhelming numbers, and sustaining the authority of one who had done nothing to sustain it himself. From May, 1857, to the close of the year Lord Canning could do nothing; but the work of retribution and repression of the rebellion went on well. Delhi was taken, Lucknow was relieved, and the mutineers were beaten in all quarters by our victorious columns. Lord Clyde marched from Cawnpore to Futtehghur, driving the rebels before him, and was met by Sir Thomas Seaton's victorious column from Delhi, which had signally defeated the rebels in the Doab. On the 4th of January, 1858, a splendid army was encamped at Futtehghur, and the rebels had fled across the Ganges, utterly dispirited and disorganised. Had they been pursued at once, the whole rebellion would have been crushed during that cold weather, for then Lucknow was not entrenched, and the scattered and terrified rebels could not have made head anywhere. But Lord Canning suddenly made his appearance on the scene, having left Calcutta and arrived at Allahabad, and his pernicious presence was immediately felt. The army was ordered to halt at Futtehghur, and the months of January, February, and half of March, the most precious months of the year, were lost in inaction, or in preparing for a grand movement upon Lucknow, which, in the beginning of January, was defenceless. The rebels, finding that they were not pursued, recovered their spirits, raised enormous levies, and erected the formidable defences at Lucknow, and the whole business of crushing the rebellion had to be commenced again, and that, too, during the hot weather, which is so fatal to Europeans in the field. The halt at Futtehghur protracted the rebellion for a year and a half, and caused the loss of at least one-third of the British army, which perished chiefly from sun-stroke and diseases caused by heat and fatigue: and that halt, it is asserted, was ordered by Lord Canning.

The whole policy of Lord Canning, from the commencement of the mutiny to the present moment, has been that of clemency and positive cringing to the natives, while his treatment of Europeans has been sedulously neglectful and even contemptuous; and this policy, while it has failed to conciliate the first, has produced a mutiny among the latter. It is well known that the European soldiers at Meerut complained more of the curt and contemptuous style of Lord Canning's refusal of their demand for a bounty than of the refusal itself. They contrasted the peremptory language of his reply with the soothing words, lengthy arguments, and friendly intreaties of the Governor General's addresses to the discontented and mutinous sepoys. They were heard to say, "had we been niggers we should not have been treated in this way." Lord Canning, fortified by the expressed opinion of Lord Palmerston, could have settled the European mutiny instantaneously, and at a trifling expense, but the opportunity of showing his severity to Europeans was too good to be lost, and he indulged in it to that extent that the moment for a collision between the Royal and mutinous troops had almost arrived. What a spectacle to have afforded to the two hundred millions of natives who have hitherto been held in subjection by the invincible strength of our unity, and this, too, at a time when the people's hearts were "brimful of fear," and the whole empire had been "frightened from its propriety." Well might Lord Palmerston now say, "Canning, I love thee, but no more be officer of mine."

His financial policy, which has utterly destroyed the credit of the Indian Government, is too well known to be described by us, but it is not so well known that much of the want of confidence in the Government was owing to Lord Canning's obstinate rejection of many wise suggestions made to him by the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce. Mr. James Wilson has been asked to go out to endeavour to repair the finances, and restore the credit of the Indian Government, but he might as well attempt to resuscitate the dead as to achieve such a hopeless result. A Governor General who shall enjoy the confidence of the whole body of the people, and shall hold the scales of justice evenhanded between the European and native races, backed by the Imperial guarantee to Indian loans, can alone restore that credit, and for both these blessings India looks to England—is she doomed to look in vain?

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

INDIAN ARMY.

Colonel SYKES asked the Secretary of State for India whether, as the 50th clause of the Government of India Act, 1858, transferring the direct government of India to the Crown, guaranteed to the officers of the Indian army the rank, privileges, &c., they held at the time of the passing of the said Act, it was the intention of her Majesty's Government to cancel or alter the rank held by the field officers of the Artillery and Engineers of the Indian army at the time of passing the said Act.

Sir C. WOOD believed that it would be necessary to explain the circumstances under which this question had arisen in order to make his answer understood. Previous to the late mutiny the Royal Artillery had never served in India, and there was a difference of rank between the officers of the Royal Artillery and of the Indian Artillery. There was no rank of major in the Royal Artillery, but there was in the Indian Artillery; and when those two forces became associated in service in India, in order to put both upon an equality, it was decided to take away the rank of major in the Indian Artillery, which did not exist in the Queen's Artillery, and to make the officer rise at once from captain to lieutenant colonel, the same as in the Royal Artillery. But in the endeavour to place the officers then holding the rank of major on an equal footing they went a little too far, because they gave them back rank and made them lieutenant colonels from the day on which they had become majors. The result of that was, not that any injustice was done to the Royal Artillery, but that it became an act of great injustice to the officers of the cavalry and infantry of the Indian army. In one case, indeed, an officer was made a major general over the heads of a great number of other officers who had been promoted before him. The matter had been brought before his (Sir C. Wood's) predecessor in the Government of India, who determined to cancel so much of that order as directed them to give back rank, and to create them lieutenant colonels only from the day of the date of the order. He (Sir C. Wood) did not consider that there was anything in this which was inconsistent with the clause in the Act transferring the Government of India to the Queen. The true meaning of that clause was that, by the change, all officers should be left in the same position as if the rule of the East India Company had continued, and was not intended to prevent the Government from correcting a mistake in the same manner as the company would have done.

Colonel SYKES asked the Secretary of State for India upon what grounds deputy inspectors general of hospitals in the British forces of less than five years' service, doing duty at home or in the colonies, with the relative army rank of lieutenant colonel, were to have the local rank of colonel while serving in India from the date of their arrival in that country, agreeably to her Majesty's warrant of February 1, 1859, in supercession of surgeon majors and deputy inspectors of hospitals of her Majesty's Indian forces who rank as lieutenant colonels only, although of from twenty to thirty years' service.

Sir C. WOOD said that there had been two or three changes in the rank and designation of these officers. In the Indian army there were two different ranks, which corresponded with only one in the line; that was to say, there were two classes of deputy inspectors general in the Indian army, whilst there was only one in the Queen's. The fact was that it was quite impossible, so long as they had two ranks in the one service corresponding with one in the other service, to make the ranks move in parallel lines. There must be inequality one way or the other; and he believed that, on the whole, the arrangement which had been made after mature consideration between the Indian authorities and the Commander in Chief was less unequal than any other that could be made, unless the two ranks in the Indian army were merged into one, which the Government of India did not think advisable for the efficiency of the service there.

EAST INDIA LOAN BILL.

This Bill passed through Committee.

The European Troops (India) Bill and the Militia Pay Bill severally passed through Committee.

EAST INDIA LOAN BILL.

On the consideration of this Bill as amended,

Mr. CRAWFORD expressed his regret at the very confined and restricted view which seemed to have been taken, on a former occasion, by the Secretary of State for India of the pecuniary liabilities of that country, and the manner in which such liabilities were to be met. During the next four or five years it would be necessary to provide, not only for a large amount of East India bonds and debentures, but also, upon the security of the revenues of India, for the large sums required to complete the railways in progress in that country. He strongly objected, as he had done last year, to any guarantee being given by this country for a loan raised for the service of India. Parliament should do as it had done on former occasions of much less pressing emergency; it should interpose to borrow money on the credit of this country, and then lend it again for the service of India, taking some specific adequate security for the repayment of the debt. That would greatly relieve the market for Indian securities, and enable India to obtain loans to any amount at a rate of interest not exceeding 3½ per cent., instead of paying, as at present, 5½ or 5½ per cent. India was a source of great wealth to this country, and well entitled to the assistance he had suggested. Her imports of our manufactured goods alone during the first six months of the present year were upwards of £7,000,000 in value, her total imports of all articles for the same period being not less than £10,000,000. She also supplied, in the first instance, nearly the whole of the money required for carrying on our trade with China.

Mr. VANSITTART stated his opinion that Parliament would at an early date have to take into serious consideration the expediency of giving India the benefit of an imperial guarantee. Out of a loan of £5,000,000 attempted to be raised at 5½ per cent. India had been able to obtain only £1,000,000, although the loan had been before the public for a very considerable period. This country had not hesitated to go into the market for £20,000,000 sterling for the emancipation of the negroes in our West Indian colonies; it had also raised £10,000,000 for the mitigation of the sufferings of Ireland; and it had even pledged its credit on behalf of Turkey. Why, then, should it haggle and finesse rather than enter the market to procure the means of affording relief to 180,000,000 of our own fellow-subjects in India?

After some remarks from Mr. AYRTON,

Colonel SYKES said there could be no doubt that the present financial condition of India had produced great distrust. On the 10th of April last, the 4 per cent. Indian Loan was at 22½ per cent. discount; the 5 per cent. loan, though guaranteed for 15 years, was at 11½ per cent. discount; the 5½ per cent. loan now open, and obliged to be guaranteed for twenty years, was also at a discount; and the Treasury-bills were issued at the rate of 5½ per cent. Let them contrast that with the position of affairs under the East India Company. In April, 1854, the home bond debt was £3,890,500 at different rates of interest, the minimum being £2. 10s., and the maximum £3. 5s. In the same year the cash balances were £16,000,000; and they enabled Lord Dalhousie to offer to pay off the 5 per cent. loan, and £11,274,000 was accepted in the 4 per cents.; whereas now money could not be obtained at 6 per cent. Even after that a loan was opened at 3½ per cent., towards which £100,408 was subscribed. Why, then, the present revulsion? Was it that the revenue had been steadily decreasing? A table that he had in his hand gave the net revenue of India for the last fifty years. In 1809-10, it amounted only to £11,238,410; in 1819-20 it rose to £13,016,790; in 1829-30 to £14,200,005; in 1839-40 it stood at £13,742,360; in 1849-50 it increased again to £19,510,098. For 1859-60 the gross revenue was estimated at £36,190,319. If these figures did not afford any ground for the present distrust, could it be ascribed to any enormous increase in the military expenditure during the period to which he had referred? In 1809-10 the military charges absorbed nearly 59 per cent. of the revenue; in 1819-20 they absorbed 64 and two-tenths per cent.; in 1829-30, they took 53 and 7-10ths per cent.; in 1839-40 they were 57 and 7-10ths per cent.; in 1849-50 they were 51 and 6-10ths per cent.; while in 1859-60 they were estimated at 58 and 4-10ths per cent. of the gross revenue. The pressure of the debt in relation to the revenue in 1809-10 was 18 per cent.; in 1819-20 was 12 8-10ths per cent.; in 1829-30 was 12 1-10th per cent.; in 1839-40 was 9 7-10ths per cent.; in 1849-50 was 10 5-10ths per cent. For the year 1859-60 it was estimated at 13 9-10ths per cent. on the gross revenue. The Government of India was compelled to carry on expensive public works for irrigation, roads, bridges, and other undertakings.

Mr. GLYN expressed his satisfaction at one of the provisions of this Bill, which gave the Secretary of State a new power of creating either capital stock or annuities, which he believed would be attended with great advantage, and he would suggest to the right hon. gentleman whether it would not be advisable for him to obtain power, either by this Bill, or by another measure early in the next Session, to enable the present holders of debentures to convert them into this new stock.

Sir E. COLEBROOKE, Sir H. WILLOUGHBY and Mr. WILLIAMS, having joined in the discussion,

Sir C. WOOD stated that the Government did not think it advisable at present to extend the imperial guarantee to Indian loans. At the same time he had thought it incumbent on him the other night to intimate his opinion that circumstances might hereafter arise when it would be the duty of the House at any rate to give that subject its most serious consideration. He had also previously stated that the financial position of India opened so wide a question that he had not thought it expedient then to enter into the civil and military administration of that country. In the civil expenditure there was not much reduction to be made. Some of the civil salaries might, indeed, be reduced; but the chief source of retrenchment lay clearly in the military charges. Before the mutiny broke out the revenue and expenditure were almost equalised; and, now that India was rapidly resuming her former tranquil state, it was to be hoped that by the adoption of a system of government in accordance with the interests, the wishes, and the feelings of her people, a large diminution in the military expenditure would be effected. With regard to the sending out of a person to supervise, and he trusted to improve, the financial condition of India, he hoped that his right hon. friend the member for Devonport would be induced to undertake that task.

Mr. VANSITTART: Has he accepted the office?

Sir C. WOOD continued: He had not accepted it; but no other man in this country possessed the great commercial and financial knowledge combined with the great Parliamentary experience of his right hon. friend, or was so well qualified as he was to attain the end in view—viz., the improvement of the system of finance in India. If his right hon. friend the member for Devonport, or any other person, went out to India in the capacity he had described, he would not go as the alter ego of the Governor-General, and he would not be solely responsible for the finances of that country. He would be a member of the Council of the Governor-General, taking charge of the financial department; but the Governor-General and the Council would be responsible for his acts, because he could do nothing without their sanction and concurrence.

TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.—Newly-invented and Patented application of chemically prepared WHITE and GUM-COLOURED INDIA-RUBBER in the construction of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings, are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

TEETH

WITHOUT SPRINGS.

110, REGENT-STREET, and 83, LUDGATE-HILL, Are the Dental Establishments of

MESSRS. GABRIEL, the old-established DENTISTS, Patentees of the System for Insuring Perfect ARTICULATION and MASTICATION, without the impediments usually attendant upon the ordinary plans.

In their IMPROVED MINERAL TEETH and FLEXIBLE GUMS there are no springs or wires, no extraction of roots; the fit is of the most unerring accuracy, while, from the flexibility of the agent employed, pressure upon the gums or remaining teeth is entirely avoided. It is permanent, wholesome, and congenial to the mouth, and, when in use, defies the notice of the closest observer. It is only necessary to see them to be convinced of their superiority; and unless every satisfaction is given, no fee is accepted.

The best materials are used, which MESSRS. GABRIEL are enabled to supply at prices lower than are usually charged for common qualities, they having on the premises extensive laboratories for the manufacture of every speciality appertaining to the profession. Consultation gratis. Established 1804; and at 134, Duke-street, Liverpool.

GABRIEL'S TREATISE fully explains the system, and may be had gratis, for stamped envelope. The Patent White Enamel, which effectually restores decayed front teeth, can only be obtained as above.—OBSERVE THE NUMBERS.

PREPARED WHITE GUTTA PERCHA ENAMEL, the best Stopping for Decayed Teeth or Toothache, 1s. 6d. per box, obtainable through any Chemist in town or country, or direct Twenty Stamps.

"Messrs. G.'s improvements in Dentistry are really important, and will well repay a visit to their establishments."—Sunday Times, Sept. 6th, 1858.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.—

Cramps, Muscular Pains, Neuralgia.—At the change of seasons these distressing ailments are apt to prevail, as indigestion, sluggish circulation, or cold, produce and procreate the tortures of all affections of the nerves. Those wishing speedily, effectually, and permanently to extinguish their suffering from such causes, are earnestly recommended to use Holloway's Ointment and Pills, a few days' trial of which will prove to their delight that science can secure ease, and that art can substitute comfort for anguish. These remedies, once used, inspire implicit confidence, and thousands from personal experience of the ease afforded by them have relieved their afflicted friends by recommending the early employment and steady perseverance with these invaluable medicinal cure-alls.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT

from the Second Edition (page 188) of the Translation of the Pharmacopoeia of the Royal College of Physicians of London, by Dr. G. F. Collier, published by Longman and Co.:

"It is no small defect in this compilation (speaking of the Pharmacopoeia) that we have no purgative medicine, but what contains aloes; yet we know that hæmorrhoidal persons cannot bear aloes except it be in the form of COCKLE'S PILLS, which chiefly consist of plover, scammony, and colocynth, which, I think, are formed in a sort of compound extract, the acridity of which is obviated, I suspect, by an alkaline process, and by a fourth ingredient (unknown to me) of an aromatic tonic nature. I think no better and no worse of it for its being a patent medicine. I look at it as an article of commerce and domestic convenience, and do not hesitate to say it is the best made pill in the kingdom; a muscular purge, a mucous purge, and a hydropic purge combined, and their effects properly controlled by a dirigent and corrigent. That it does not commonly produce hæmorrhoids, like most aloetic pills, I attribute to its being thoroughly soluble, so that no undissolved particles adhere to the mucous membrane."

DR. JAMES'S POWDER FOR FEVERS.

INFLUENZA, MEASLES, RHEUMATISM, and all Inflammatory Disorders. No Medicine Chest is complete without it. So simple and certain, so mild and peculiar, is its action, that it is fitted alike for domestic or professional use. The genuine has "F. NEWBERRY, No. 45, ST. PAUL'S CHURCHYARD," London, engraved on the Government Stamp. Packets, 2s. 9d. each; Bottles, 11s. Be careful to ask for "NEWBERRY'S," the Original Preparation. Established A.D. 1746.

"Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. have just brought out the first number of a monthly periodical, called THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND SOCIAL SCIENCE. We confess that until we read this first number we had no very clear impression that we were in any need of any addition to our already heavily-laden monthly literature; but a careful examination of the contents of the work has satisfied us that its projectors are justified in the undertaking. If they cannot be said, in the slang of the book-market, to have supplied a want, there is little doubt that they will create an audience. The best brief notion we can give of the publication is to say that it promises to become to English readers what the Revue des deux Mondes is to French, with an indefinitely wider latitude of topics and freedom of opinion. The critical element predominates, but it admits of the essay in its pure form, and is sufficiently elastic in both departments to embrace every variety of subject of current or permanent interest. In politics it ranges with the progressive section of the Conservative party, which would preserve the constitution, by adapting it from time to time to the necessities of successive epochs. The soundness of its judgment on the question of Parliamentary Reform is displayed in the ablest and most thoroughly constitutional article that has yet appeared in any of our periodicals on the subject; an article which acquires additional value from the fact that it foreshadowed the whole scheme of the Government two days before the Reform Bill was brought forward. In social laws and morals, the object of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW will be to note the progress, and collect the results, of all movements tending towards the advancement or elucidation of those vague philosophical investigations which are clustered under the general head of social science. Good earnest is given of the resources at the command of the writers, and of the practical manner in which they are prepared to deal with them, in an excellent article on the 'Homeless Poor.' There are also capital papers upon 'Russia,' and 'Indian Finance;' and some admirable literary articles. This last department is pervaded by a spirit of independence, and a high scholarly tone which, we trust, 'custom' may not impair. Let us have at least one English periodical, written with integrity and good taste, to which we may confidently look for fearless and honest opinions. The UNIVERSAL REVIEW promises to realise these expectations, and we heartily wish it the success it deserves."

From THE PRESS, May 14, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW contains seven articles, which, some for one reason, some for another, merit the attention of the public. The article on Mr. Robertson derives virtue from the excellence of its subject, but is nicely written as well. 'Women—neither Nice nor Wise,' is a protest against the smoking-clubbed, shooting-galleried, red-trousered style of young lady, of whom it is very truly said that all their efforts for the emancipation of women are in reality intended for the enslavement of men. 'The Resources of India, and its Colonization,' has only one fault—it is greatly too short; and we confess if it had been extended over the space which 'The Philosophy of Fabulous Ages' now occupies, we should not have regretted the exchange. 'Michelet on Love' is a review of which it is difficult to determine the merit without having read with great attention the book of which it treats. The writer seems so entirely to agree with his author as to have abandoned any idea of criticising him in the literal sense of the word, so he gives us instead a very compact and clever abstract of his theory, expressed with great felicity, and enlivened by occasional touches of real humour. The writer of 'French Dramatists and English Adapters' took a good grasp of his subject, but laid it down again before he had squeezed it dry. His article contains a good deal, but might have contained more. For instance, he takes up some half-dozen hypotheses to account for the decline of the drama, turns them over, and leaves them, saying it is not his business to settle which is true. But we think this is just what his business was. The article is written in so agreeable a style, and evinces so much latent ability, that we regret more was not made of it. 'The Last of the Moguls,' though a little florid in diction, is well and strikingly executed. The article called 'How shall we vote?' after a summary of the policy of Lord Derby's Administration, proceeds to the delivery of a strong philippic against the Opposition leaders, and especially Lord John Russell. We observe this article has been reprinted in a separate form, and we trust may have contributed to blow away some of those delusions which the public mind has been carefully fed by the partisans of the 'Bedfords.' With the writer's remarks on Lord Palmerston we do not so fully agree. His lordship has performed great services, and what he may have done in a moment of irritation should not be too harshly criticised. The customary 'Session' and 'Books upon our Table,' conclude a very good number."

No. 4 (JUNE) CONTAINS:—

1. MAN AND HIS DWELLING PLACE.
2. A REVIEWER'S PARCEL.

6. THE ROYAL ACADEMY AND THE WATER-COLOUR EXHIBITIONS.

7. POPULAR HISTORY.—KNIGHT'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND.
8. THE FRENCH IN ITALY—A NATIONAL AND TRADITIONAL POLICY.
9. BOOKS ON OUR TABLE.

From THE GLOBE, June 3, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW is, as usual, distinguished by discussing subjects of deeper and more permanent interest than are commonly entered on in monthly publications. The first article, on a book entitled 'Man and his Dwelling Place,' affords the writer an opportunity of professing his acceptance of the Idealistic theory of Bishop Berkeley, which, though supported by reasoning that it is admitted cannot be refuted, has hitherto made so little progress with mankind in general, chiefly on account of the misapprehension that has prevailed, or, perhaps, we may say, which does prevail, respecting it—a misapprehension that, doubtless, the writer is correct in ascribing to people picking up their notions of it at second hand, instead of resorting to the exposition of Berkeley himself. The article entitled 'A Reviewer's Parcel' is a lament over the degeneracy of the present age, especially made manifest by the vast number of new books published every month. Every one has a vague desire to go behind the scenes of a theatre, and by admitting, or pretending to admit, the public behind the scenes of reviewing, the writer of the article in question has produced a taking and readable paper, with which those who know little or nothing about the subject of which it treats will probably be best pleased. 'The Story of Microscopical Discovery' is an interesting article in which the progress of microscopical science is traced from its commencement to now. 'The Resources of India and its Colonization,' an article the first part of which appeared last month, is continued in the present number by a writer who has evidently devoted to the subject considerable care, pains, and research. An article on the picture exhibitions, a political article entitled 'The French in Italy,' 'Austria and the Slavonians,' with other papers, fill up the number."

9. THE SESSION.

From THE ILLUSTRATED TIMES, July 9, 1859.

"The new periodical, THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW, fully maintains its excellent start, and may be regarded as one of the cleverest exponents of sound, sensible, unbiassed views among the periodical press. Nothing can be fairer than the spirit pervading two of the articles of the new number, the one on the Divorce Court, the other (in the shape of a review of a bad novel, 'Out of the Depths') on the Delicate Question; though, while giving the writer of the first-named pages every credit for sincerity, we deny the truth of his denunciation of a measure which undoubtedly has given the means of relief to scores of persons weighed down and lost here and here-ster by their tie to a worthless person. As regards the second article, every man of sense must go hand in hand with the reviewer, more especially in that portion of his paper where he deprecates the publication of such books as useless and demoralising. Other very readable essays are—a review of 'What will he Do with It?' in which Bulwer is very honestly, and withal very favourably, judged; a pleasant paper on 'Charles James Fox;' an erudite dissertation on Mr. Norris's 'Erudite Book;' 'The Ancient Cornish Drama;' and three political articles, the best written of which is devoted to Louis Napoleon, and closes in the following words—'He said of himself, Je suis citoyen avant d'être Bonaparte. He might more truly have said that he was a political fanatic rather than a great prince; that his genius was a monomania; that his idea of internal order is that of a wolf who would muzzle the dog, and that his faith in foreign powers is that of a burglar in possession of a ticket-of-leave who surveys at his leisure his neighbour's premises, and chooses his own time to break in and seize the spoils.'"

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE intelligence received by the Bombay Mail of the 21st of July chiefly refers to the suppression of the mutiny among the European troops. The flames, indeed, have been extinguished, but the edifice has been consumed. The local European army has virtually ceased to exist, and now the Government is called upon to find means of transport to England for nearly 10,000 soldiers who have accepted their discharge. Fortunately, the rumour that the Sikhs had followed the example of their Ferin-ghee comrades does not appear to have been well founded; but the evil is sufficiently great without any further accumulation of difficulties.

Sofar as can yet be known, the 5th Europeans at Berhampore have resigned en masse, and of the 4th regiment at Allahabad 750 men have thrown up the service. In the 2nd Light Cavalry only thirty men out of 818 stand by their colours, and at Meean Meer twenty-seven troopers represent the entire European cavalry. Of the 2nd Bengal Fusiliers at Delhi, a corps that took no part in the movement, 400 have claimed their discharge, and of the 650 men constituting the 3rd Bengal Europeans not 150 will remain. The Bengal Artillery, it is expected, will lose fully 700 men, including many of the best soldiers in that arm of the service. Indeed, it is by no means among the recruits alone that the spirit of disaffection prevails—or rather it should be called, the yearning for home. In the Bombay Presidency the same impatience of service in India has been exhibited, and the next Mail will probably bring news of the annihilation also of the Madras force. All these men, it is worthy of remark, gladly give up all title to pensions and gratuities—excepting prize money—provided only they can return to their native land. No doubt many of them will re-enlist in her Majesty's service, but the exaggerated accounts they are likely to spread abroad of military life in India cannot fail to act prejudicially against the recruitment for the local army.

Though tranquillity is said to be restored, there are still bands of armed vagabonds wandering about certain districts, living by plunder and disquieting the people. Near Seepree, for instance, Major Meade stormed a fortified village on the 1st July, and killed nearly a hundred of the rebels. Near Jhansi, again, some five hundred marauders, under the command of Burjore Sing, and his brother-in-law, Chutter, were surprised by Major Davis and Lieutenant Catania, and completely dispersed, though without much loss of life. Burjore Sing's foster-brother, however, was among the slain.

It is reported that the Rajah of Boondie has died of fever, and his family and followers have surrendered to the active commandant of police at Toolseepore. The rebels are described as suffering greatly from disease and starvation, and utterly unable either to fight or flee.

Another native prince, the Rajah of Ghurwal, is also numbered with the dead. Major Ramsay and Mr. Beckett have proceeded to the spot to prevent any disturbances being got up by the different claimants to the Raj.

According to the Bombay Gazette, it is proposed to remove the seat of government from Bombay to Poona, the climate of which is favourable to Europeans all the year round.

From the Deccan the news is satisfactory. The trial of the moulvie who instigated the attack on the Residency on the 17th July, 1857, has terminated in a conviction and sentence to transportation for life—three moulvies having been his judges.

POLICE BATTALIONS.

We might have stated a few issues ago that the Munnipooree regiment, which has lately been converted into the 7th or Dacca police battalion, arrived here from Jumalpoore under the command of Lieutenant Hitchins, but as there were some ugly rumours afloat at the time regarding the corps, we determined to leave it "alone in its glory." Captain Fagan, the new commandant, had been in Dacca some time awaiting its arrival. We cannot say much in favour of the corps, as we have never had an opportunity of seeing it together, but if we are to judge from stray parties that have passed us under arms, and individual sepoyes, we must say that a finer set of fellows never marched through Coventry, such long, lean, bandy-legged guys being rarely seen in that famous city. But they have no small opinion of themselves nevertheless. They thought it a degradation to become police, for which they were not enlisted, and stuck out for some time against the proposal, but now it is understood they have placidly given way. Captain Plowden, their late commandant, came to Dacca to take command of the 7th police battalion, which was not then in existence, excepting on paper. The Munnipoorees were not then the Dacca police battalion, and as no such body appeared to be in existence, a reference was made to Government on the subject. Go to Jumalpoore, was the reply; there you will find an armed police ready made to your hand; they are the Munnipooree regiment—no more. Some unpleasantness ensued, and two months ago we heard they were coming down here to experience the paternal solicitude of Government after their welfare. And here they are at last, as quiet as lambs, and equally contented. Some of them are bumptious at times, refusing to be shaved, or to comply with some other equally necessary order, and find themselves paid up and discharged "before they know where they are." We hear as many as seventy have been turned out in this way already. If they only go on weeding at this rate we shall soon see the end of them, and the back slums of Sylhet, which are not unknown to a great many of them, will be replenished once more. Another trial awaits them, and it is quite as well that they have been brought within the reach of civilisation before it was attempted. It is said their pay is to be reduced from seven to six rupees a month. If this be true, and we have heard it from a well-informed source, we shall not be able to compliment the Government on the manner in which it has managed this corps. Rather than incur the suspicion of breaking faith, it would have been better to disband the corps at once, and raise men for the police battalion on conditions that could not have been misunderstood. As usual, the Government has adopted a paltering policy, which has pleased nobody, and resulted in failure.

Ex pede Herculem. Let the reader, if he pleases, form an opinion of the new Bengal Military Police by the 7th battalion at Dacca. A more useless expenditure at a time when the State is hardly able to pay the interest of its debt was never incurred. We do not want this police. We do not want an undisciplined rabble with no firelocks and bayonets here, whatever may be the case elsewhere. Ciup-prassies, with no other weapons than their sticks, are quite enough for us. If we had no Europeans here, we should certainly be far safer without than with them. Either way, with or without Europeans in the station, they are useless for all good purposes, and only a source of distrust and danger. At least Rs. 5,000 must be incurred monthly on their account, and the Government recklessly and uselessly expends this sum while it is cutting ten rupees out of every poor devil's salary who gets only one hundred for doing good and useful work. This is a penny wise and pound foolish policy—saving a few pence here and there, throwing thousands and hundreds of thousands of pounds uselessly away. If we are to have a military police in every zillah, do away with the bulk of the native army; we can't want both, and in many zillahs neither soldiers nor military police are wanted. Dacca is one of those zillahs in which there is not to be found one intelligent impartial individual who is not of opinion that the expense now incurred by our military police can in every respect with the utmost advantage be spared.—Dacca News.

THE BERHAMPORE MUTINY.

BERHAMPORE, June 29.—On the 16th of June private information was conveyed to the commanding officer that all the men of the regiment who enlisted for the Company intended to mutiny, many of them declaring that they would shoot any officer or non-commissioned officer who approached their barrack. The commanding officer at once issued an order that all the ammunition should be returned to store, under the plea of its deterioration by the dampness of the weather when in the men's pouches. One of the officers happened to go to his company, and found that many of the men refused to give up their ammunition, and went out armed and accoutred. This being immediately reported, the whole of the officers, accompanied by the commanding officer, proceeded to the barracks of the right wing, hoping to prevent them joining the left, the disaffected wing. On returning from the upper story of the barrack they found three hundred and two men of the left wing drawn up, armed and accoutred; the majority of whom, though perfectly respectful, declared they would do no more duty. On being remonstrated with by their officers, they apparently appeared satisfied, and went to their barracks, where the complaints against the Government were taken down, and ordered to be submitted the following morning at the orderly room. The officer commanding the station ordered a parade on the following morning for the purpose of inquiring into their complaints or grievances; when the bugle sounded, only forty-one privates and a small proportion of non-commissioned officers obeyed the bugle call, the remainder positively refusing to perform any more duty. This was the second act of this mutinous drama. These mutinous men had thrown off all allegiance to the Government, and in refusing to obey the orders of their officers could no longer be treated as soldiers. The loyal men of the regiment were at once separated from their mutinous comrades, and performed their duties in a praiseworthy manner, until the arrival of the force which Government, in its wisdom, thought proper to despatch for the purpose, as we all vainly hoped, of coercing these scoundrels. Although Government was immediately informed of the state of the regiment, ten days elapsed before a force of four companies of H.M.'s 99th regiment, one company of the bulfs, with two guns royal artillery, arrived here, under the command of Lieut.-colonel Kenneth Mackenzie, 92nd highlanders, deputy adjutant general of her Majesty's forces in India. After disembarking from the steamers, the force marched and formed up in front of the barrack occupied by the mutineers, who seeing this grand array, at once turned out, unarmed and unaccoutred, and were told that as soon as they returned to their duty as soldiers their complaints would be listened to. This they refused to do. I will leave your readers to judge of the proper method which any officer of discretion would have resorted to at this critical period; suffice it to say, that the men only jeered, and returned to their barracks. The third act of the drama! Lieutenant-colonel Mackenzie vainly hoping that twenty-four hours' reflection would bring the men to a sense of their duty, ordered the troops to their barracks, and thus confirmed and encouraged them in their mutinous conduct. From this time it was plainly visible that the men became more insolent than ever. On Sunday, at 10 A.M., a parade of all the troops was ordered, when the force again formed up in front of the mutineers' barrack. An officer of the regiment was frequently sent to remonstrate and coax the villains to return out, which they contemptuously refused to do, and for a long time stuck to their barrack. The commanding officer (Colonel Mackenzie), made known to them that he wished them to listen to an order of the Governor-general, regarding their discharge, when in parties of two and three they came out. The order was then read and explained to them, and was contemptuously received by the majority; after a parley of some time, the mutineers (making their own terms) demanded of Colonel Mackenzie if he would guarantee their immediate discharge and the court of inquiry, both of which were conceded on the spot. The men were again asked and coaxed to fall in with their loyal comrades, which the majority did, though after considerable delay. About forty of the mutineers still held out, declaring they would do no more duty, and were then made prisoners. End of 4th Act! Two days subsequently, "tell it not in Gath," these forty men were released! The Court of Inquiry, as promised, immediately assembled, and is now sitting; about half of the regiment having been examined. I am credibly informed the universal cause of complaint is against the Government, and not against the officers, on whose shoulders the blame will be unjustly cast, and with whom the whole station sympathise. In conclusion, I must add that Colonel Mackenzie's appointment, by the Governor-general, to the command of the 5th European Bengal Regiment is in direct opposition to the Act of Parliament, which transfers the late Company's army to the Crown, but which still protects to the officers of the Honourable East India Company's Service all their former rights and privileges. Against this most arbitrary and unjust appointment the officers of the 5th regiment have, I am told, very justly appealed. The suspension of the commanding officer of the station, of the commandant and adjutant of the regiment, without the slightest inquiry, has created universal disgust. I must not forget to add that I am led to believe that the inquiry as carried on appears to be to elicit complaints against the officers rather than to inquire into the conduct of the men, rendering thus void and null the Governor-general's order of June 20th, 1859, which states plainly that the inquiry is to be on the conduct of the regiment.—Delhi Gazette.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DALHOUSIE TESTIMONIAL.—It seems that there is still a balance of Rs. 69,000 at the disposal of the committee of the Dalhousie Memorial Fund; and that they cannot agree as to the way of spending it. Dr. Duff proposes the erection of a Dalhousie Hall, for the delivery of lectures, and the holding of public meetings. Mr. Wylie recommends the foundation of a Dalhousie Museum. Mr. Ritchie rejects both proposals, and would have a Dalhousie College; while the Agri-Horticultural Society thinks it clear that the money should be invested in a Dalhousie Park. In its perplexity, the committee appeals to the public, to judge between these contending plans.

GWALIOR.—We have received information of several rebel leaders of note having bribed the native officials of this district to let them quietly settle down without saying a word about it. A native official, at a certain place I could tell you of, is reported to have taken 500 rupees from one of these gentlemen, and he is now living on the loot he amassed during the rebellion as quietly as possible, not very far from Jalra Putun. He has several followers who have let their hair grow long and taken the disguise of Soondiahs to prevent detection. The native officials are said to be hand and glove with every one of these scoundrels. I forget their names, but Heera Sing, for whom a reward has been offered, is one of them. He was within six miles of this place a few days ago.

THE BANK OF BENGAL. has declared a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum.

LUCKNOW, July 6.—The news from the frontier is, that the Raja of Boondee died of fever in the rebel camp a few days ago. His whole family and followers, some 100 souls in all, have surrendered to Jaffer Ali, native commandant of police at Toolseepore. Rebel sepoys are frequently brought in by the patrols in a state of almost perfect prostration from disease. They report that, at least, one-seventh of their number are in the same dying and helpless condition. Mummoo Khan is said to be anxious to surrender. We have just heard of the arrest by the police at Fyzabad of Raja Jeyllal Sing. The talookdar is known to have been one of the leading spirits of the rebellion—a principal in setting up the puppet king, Brijes Kudur, and in conducting the rebel government. As, however, these offences have been condoned, we can only conclude that the police authorities must have discovered his implication in some other serious crime. This seems the more probable, as we believe it has been rumoured in the city for the last day or two, that the chief of police has for some time past been instituting certain inquiries into the origin and progress of the mutinies in Oude, and there is no doubt that, on the completion of his labours, the amount of guilt attachable to each of the principal actors will be duly determined. This is one, and not the least, of the advantages of our present system of police, which centres the control of the entire police force in one head. Under the old system, now totally discarded in Oude, the multifarious duties of the magistrate left him barely leisure to keep himself at best but imperfectly informed of the details of offences, daily occurring within the limits of a single district; but he seldom or never had time or facilities for investigating those greater crimes, the ramifications of which might extend over a whole province.—Lucknow Herald, July 6.

THE ANDAMANS.—The transport schooner Minnie Lonsdale arrived from the Andamans (Port Blair) on the 10th July. We understand that another attempt at mutiny was tried by the Pandies at the Andamans. A considerable number of Punjabees were sent down as having been connected with the mutinies. These wished to effect a junction with those previously transported from the N.W. The latter would not join, in consequence of the former not having assisted them in the mutiny. An attack was first made on Dr. Walker, and the European sentry before the door of his office was knocked down, and just gave time to Dr. Walker to keep him at bay while assistance was sent him. The Punjabees have been placed in irons, and are kept on the main land, where we hope the spirit of mischief will be driven out of them. We have the most favourable accounts of the progress of the settlements, and we only trust that the Governor-general will make it worth the object of Dr. Walker to remain, and improve upon what he has already performed. We have heard further, that a great deal of sickness prevails amongst both Europeans and Natives on the island, attributable to the monsoons. The little schooner is making itself useful in its trips, and in course of time we hope to hear that it will be as profitable to its enterprising commander as it is to the interests of Government.—Maulmain Times.

ISMAEL KHAN OF MALLAGHUR, well known as a leader of the rebels in the Doab and in Rohilcund during 1857-58, is now undergoing his trial before the sessions judge of Shahjehanpore. He had surrendered under the amnesty to Brigadier Troup in Oude, and had received a free pardon, but in April last he was arrested at Rampore, whither he had retired, upon a charge of wilful murder brought against him by the thakoor zemindars of Mirzapoor, in the Shahjehanpore district. Those who were upon or near the frontier of Rohilcund in the spring of 1858 will remember the successful "dour" made by Sir Thomas Seaton from Futtehgurh in April of that year, wherein he surprised and defeated the rebels under this Ismael Khan at Bangaon. Mirzapoor is close to Bangaon, and it appears that the expedition was planned upon information from one of the zemindars of the former village. It is certain that the Mirzapoor thakoors distinguished themselves by harassing and plundering the flying stragglers of the rebel army. In retaliation for this, three days afterwards, Ismael Khan attacked and burnt Mirzapoor, and deliberately put to death five of the principal men of the village. The relatives of the murdered men waited for a whole year, and as soon as Ismael Khan, tired of campaigning, had retired to the seclusion of Rampore, they laid an information against him in the district court of Shahjehanpore, whence he has been fully committed to the sessions upon the charge of wilful murder. Ismael Khan loudly exclaims against the perfidy of the Government in subjecting him to this treatment after allowing him the benefits of the amnesty, and there is no doubt but that all his countrymen consider him the victim of the most unmitigated treachery. They are utterly incapable of understanding the principle that a free pardon granted by the State is not allowed to bar the claim of a private individual for justice against the pardoned man. And in this case there is certainly a point for casuists to decide—whether acts of reprisal, such as this of Ismael Khan, committed in the capacity of general of the rebel forces in the time of war, ought not to be considered as included in the free pardon for acts of rebellion. No one would now think of arresting an amnestied rebel for having slain a British subject in the field; and Ismael Khan, if he were acute enough, might maintain that his deeds at Mirzapoor were such as are allowed in fair oriental warfare. But, to leave hair-splitting, there is no doubt but that he slew five men in cold blood, on account of aid rendered by them to our forces, and the relatives of the murdered men have every right to demand justice upon the slayer at our hands.—Delhi Gazette.

NATIVE INTRIGUES.—A Mahomedan named Fussahut-oolla has been taken up in Lucknow, on information of his being in treasonable correspondence with the rebels being furnished. It appears that this Fussahut-oolla was formerly a Government pleader at Bareilly, but having during the mutinies become a leader of rebellion, a reward of Rs. 3,000 was offered by Government for his apprehension. Intimation of this was received by Mr. Carnegy, the deputy commissioner, from the magistrate of Buddaon, who had managed to trace the rebel to Lucknow. Mr. Carnegy laid his plans well; watched the house in which Fussahut-oolla was reported to reside, and ultimately effected his capture very quietly—together with that of his relative, one Fuzil Ahmed, an ex-vakeel of Bareilly, Hakeem Yar Khan, an ex-peshkar, and Ali Buksh, a pensioned Russuldar, and the owner of the house in which the said rebels found shelter. With them were also seized several letters of a treasonable character addressed for the most part to Fussahut-oolla, under cover to the Russuldar. The letters contain many dark and insidious expressions. In one of them allusion is made to the fearfully-unsettled state of Rohilcund, and the "prospect of the present crop withering"—evidently meaning, in oriental metaphor, the European race in India. In Fussahut-oolla, however, Mr. Carnegy was greatly surprised to recognise the pleader who had but recently conducted a suit for the heirs of the late Nawab Munnoowur-ood-dowla in his court, and who appeared to have set himself up in Lucknow as a professional pleader. The detection of these has of course led to the discovery of other worthies, their correspondents in other parts of India, whose names it would not be advisable to allow to transpire just at present. Meanwhile, we are given to understand that the prisoners will be forthwith forwarded, under a strong escort, to Buddaon, where they are to stand their trial.

OUDE.—A messenger from the Begum's camp, with a letter of credit and Government promissory notes to the amount of nearly two lakhs of rupees, was apprehended the other day on the Barraitch frontier, and sent in to Lucknow. These notes are a portion of the forty lakhs invested in Government paper on account of the Hoossianabad Mosque, and of the whole of which the Begum is in possession. The messenger had instructions to negotiate their sale at a small discount, and was, moreover, enjoined to make friends with the sahiblogues in Lucknow, and if possible discover what terms the Chief Commissioner was prepared to offer the rebels. Mummoo Khan proposed for himself and the other leaders a free pardon and honourable treatment, whilst for the Begum and her son he said that, as the Government had already promised to provide suitably, he wished to know the precise nature of the provision they intended to make. We believe there was no occasion for such inquiries, as all the information they are likely to get on the subject has already been supplied them. We may add, that it is distinctly stated in the letter that the Nepaulese have ceased to assist them to the extent they had promised, or had hitherto done.—Lucknow Herald.

WRECK OF THE "LADY RAWLINSON."—We regret to announce the loss of the Lady Rawlinson, bound from Rangoon to Calcutta. We learn that she experienced very severe weather after proceeding to sea, and that it was found necessary to cut away her masts. She capsized about ninety miles S.W. of the Light Ship, and now lies stranded on the eastern bank at the mouth of the Rangoon river. The captain, his wife and child, the mate and ten lascars, with a native passenger, were picked up by a pilot schooner and brought to town on Saturday evening, but twenty-two of the crew, who put off in a boat, have never since been heard of. The wreck, with her valuable cargo of teak timber, amounting to about three hundred tons and six hundred and ten bags of cutch, was sold by public auction, June 21st, by Messrs. Jordan and Co., for Rs. 6,100. We understand the vessel was insured for £8,000, and the cargo at about £3,000.

CAMP, GONDA, June 22.—Sixty rebels gave themselves up to Col. Gordon of the Sikh local infantry on the 15th inst.; they were sowars belonging to the 13th irregular cavalry that mutinied at Benares. Bala Rao was on his death bed a short time ago, but has again recovered from his attack of fever and ague. The Nana keeps in good health. It is by the most authentic sources given out that he is still at the head of 5,000 sepoys, exclusive of camp followers, of course. The Nana maintains that he had no hand in the Cawnpore massacre, and denies the correctness of all the charges preferred against him. Colonel Brayer's regiment of Ferozepore has arrived from Toolseepore, en route to Sealkote.

A ROMAN CATHOLIC PRIEST.—We learn from Calcutta Journals that the Rev. Father Johosaphat, who is at Hazareebagh, has been active in fomenting the insubordination evinced by the European troops at that station. His misconduct in this respect has been so great and so openly manifested as to have incurred not only the condemnation of the military authorities but also the reprobation of his brother priest, Camillus. Under these circumstances the Government has ordered him quietly to quit Hazareebagh.

SEPOY REGIMENTS IN CHINA.—The withdrawal from China of the Bengal Native Infantry regiments, the 47th, 65th, and 70th, has been postponed. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has directed all officers now in India belonging to those corps, not on staff employ, or on leave on medical certificate (with the exception of young officers who have not yet completed six months' duty with European regiments), to proceed at once to China, to join their respective corps.

RESTORATION OF TRANQUILITY.—The Saran contemporary of the Hurkaru states that the indigo factory belonging to a Mr. Pepe, in the Goruckpore district, was recently burnt down by the rebels, and that this gentleman was once more obliged to flee for his life.

SUTTEE.—The Delhi Gazette records three cases of suttee during the month of May last. One took place in the neighbourhood of Futtehgurh, another at the village of Koongur, in Hansi district; and a third in the estate of the Dadree Nawab. It is stated that at Koongur the subject was talked of for some days before, and the barbarous rite celebrated in the open day without any remonstrance or check from the local police.

A NEW POLICE CORPS.—The Governor-general has sanctioned a proposal for forming a police corps of irregular cavalry in Bengal, from portions of corps now at the disposal of the Lieutenant-governor. This force, we are informed, is to be commanded by Capt. Adlain, whose head quarters will be at Patna.

MURDER BY A EUROPEAN.—Henry Edward Murray, the son of Mr. Jacob Murray, was tried at the Sudder court on the 23rd June, before E. A. Samuels, Esq., judge, and H. V. Bailey, Esq., officiating judge, on a charge of having on the night of the 15th February, 1859, murdered one Baboo Mudden Mohun Lall Lalla, by shooting him with a revolver while fast asleep in his own house. The prisoner committed the deed from jealousy of Mohun Lall Lalla, who was intimate with a female named Mussamut Diljan, with whom he (the prisoner) had been in the habit of cohabiting. The judges have sentenced the unfortunate young man to be hanged. The father appealed to the Lieutenant-governor, pleading on various grounds for a commutation of the sentence, but his honour declined to entertain the petition. A representation of the case was next made to Lord Canning, and among the grounds urged in both memorials was, that the prisoner being a Christian had been tried before the Zillah and Sudder courts under the Mahomedan law. The Governor-general refused to interfere with the course of the law in the case. A petition was next presented to the Sudder court calling for a revision of the judgment, but that court has distinctly given a refusal.

CAMP SEEPREE, July 10.—The detachment royal artillery are under orders to proceed to Gwalior. Perhaps they will leave this to-morrow by the bullock train. A detachment of Madras horse, of 9th N. I., and of the Seepree police, left this during the week, to visit Goorwiehye, where it was reported that a body of rebels had come again. We have here an illustrious prisoner, who was taken at the siege of Goorwiehye, who it appears occupied a conspicuous place in the rebel army list. He ranks no less than a full colonel. Originally he was a sepoy in the 66th Bengal native infantry, and was promoted to the present elevated position by Tantia. He, however, instead of endeavouring to maintain his position with his men, was trying to get away under the guise of a blestie. When spoken to, he is surly, and always appears to be meditating. He was the means of identifying several of the bodies of noted rebels. He appears to know full well his doom, as he says quite saucily, "What will you do more than hanging?" The weather is getting warm, in consequence of their being no rain. The station is dull as ever; and the going away of the royal artillery will render it more so.

TROS TYRUSVE.—A correspondent of the Englishman makes a comparison between the pension offered by Government to the son of the late Mr. Tandy and that given to the infant son of a man by name Jagroo Tewary, a Burkundaz Jemadar in Zillah Goruckpore, whose only service to the Government was in endeavouring to bolt from the rebels. The former has received a pension of only Rs. 20 per mensem, whilst the latter has had a present of Rs. 500, and confiscated estates yielding a clear profit of Rs. 1,000 per annum.

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH DEPARTMENT.—It is reported that Sir William O'Shaughnessy retires from the service next year, and that Captain P. Stewart, of the Engineers, who at one time officiated for Sir William, will be his successor. Captain Stewart's services in extending the line of the electric telegraph have been repeatedly noticed by the Government and Sir W. W. O'Shaughnessy. His services during the late campaign in keeping the communication open between the column of the commander in chief and other divisions elicited admiration from the chief. The reader will remember his volunteering an attack on one of the outworks of Lucknow.

SATGON, July 9.—Captain Wheeler, of the 2nd Gwalior infantry, has got a cordon around Feroze Shah and is closing on him near Seronj. It is said this rebel and the Row Sahib are going to give themselves up, and that Sir R. Shakespeare has left Indore to meet them. The rebels are more troublesome here and in Lullutpore than ever, and there are more detached posts around than last year. There are about twenty or twenty-five discharges in the troop of horse artillery, one-fifth of the whole only; but there are 640 out of 900 in the 3rd Madras European regiment at Jubbulpore.

RAILWAYS.—It was announced some short time back that the Eastern Bengal and Calcutta South Eastern Railways had been transferred by the Government of India to the direct control of the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal. The E. I. Railway has also, we learn, been placed, from the 1st July, under the local Government.

ORAI, July 11.—We have had no rain, save a fall or two about ten or twelve days ago, and the heat is dreadful, so much so that the people have ordered khus khus tatties again in their bungalows. Burjore Sing and two other rebels are still moving about in this district, and troops after them, such as can be spared. The 31st will in a few days leave for their new destination. The "Shah-jehanpore levy," for its relief, has arrived at Calpee. When the new European barracks ordered to be got ready for the accommodation of 500 of H.M.'s 48th were nearly completed, orders were received to stop any further progress, and the materials collected here were directed to be sent to Jhansi, though why is a hard question to answer. The commissioner of the Jhansi division is here in camp, and what brings him out this time of the year is a question.

JHANSI, July 11.—After a refreshing period of cool weather, we have for nearly a fortnight had a dry south-west wind, which has made away with all our clouds; as it still continues, the Panè Jog, which ought (the weather-wise natives say) to have brought us lots of rain, is going on without doing anything to abate the heat. In a recent affair Burjore Sing nearly got nabbed. His whereabouts having been discovered by Catania (Adjutant of Police), that officer made a push to catch him in the dark, and having to go over very broken ground got an ugly spill, horse and all, into a ravine. The game was, however, not given up by him, and Burjore got the alarm hardly in time to run off just as he was, leaving a lot of property, including valuables. The next hunt was managed between a small detachment of the 24th Madras infantry, and one of military police horse and foot, under Major Davis. After knocking about for some time, on the 19th June the little force reached Joarum, when at one o'clock P.M. they learnt that Burjore Sing, and his fighting brother-in-law, Chutter Sing, were eleven miles off across the Dessaum river, close upon the border of the Tehree State, convenient for a retreat. As they had 400 infantry and 50 cavalry, Major Davis moved up two other columns of military police to a given point, and dropping all heavy baggage at Alipore, the force was in full march at two o'clock, and got up to the attack about five. The enemy were in a dense jungle, but ten of these were killed and fifteen taken prisoners,—pretty well for an evening's work, especially as amongst the killed was Burjore's foster brother, the real leader. He wore a lot of gold ornaments, making a considerable addition to the prize property, which included a number of tattoos and arms. This fellow, I believe, had fired at Lieutenant Hawthorne, when he was immediately shot by Major Davis, and his head promptly made its appearance at Jhansi to report progress. This is not a very great affair, but it is not without importance. One loss after another to our local rebels disheartens their well-wishers throughout the country; and in this last affair the vigorous move forward surprised the enemy by daylight. Burjore had faith in our perseverance when we had the cool of the morning before us, or even after breakfast; but he now begins to find out that even tiffin does not stop us—to say nothing of a June sun. Burjore was last heard of at Indoorkee, and there, on the 30th, lost some more of his men and baggage. His whole policy now is to fly for miles in length, was destroyed. Although Central India was infested with rebels through its length and breadth, the whole line from Indore to Calcutta was in working order by the end of September, 1858; thus from October, 1857, to September, 1858, nearly one thousand miles of telegraph line were erected and offices opened, without any aid scarcely from Calcutta, and the officers engaged in the line from high to low were forced to undergo the greatest hardships and dangers, and had frequently to fly for their lives, leaving their camps standing.

ALLAHABAD.—The Allahabad Commercial Gazette mentions that several buildings at that station came down from a heavy fall of rain. Among them was Mr. Benson's hotel, which has suffered considerably. The same correspondent relates an accident that occurred there on the 23rd June, at an indigo factory, within eighteen miles of the station. Several ladies and gentlemen were about to sit down to dinner at a house of Mr. Flouest's, at Koorsoom, when the building was struck by lightning. The explosion was so loud that it appeared as if a barrel of gunpowder had been blown up. Mr. Flouest and a little girl were thrown down, and the room was filled with sulphurous vapour. The latter escaped unhurt, and Mr. F. sustained a slight injury in his foot, which was blackened through his shoe. The remainder of the party in the room were uninjured.

SEEPREE, July 5.—Major Meade returned yesterday from his successful dour against the rebels. He started on the evening of the 30th with 250 men, including forty of H.M.'s 92nd highlanders, marched thirty miles during the night, and reached the enemy's position at Girisao a little after sunrise. He commenced the attack immediately, and after five hours' fighting, cleared the hill on which the rebels had taken up a very strong position (300 feet high, covered with a jungle, and two miles in length), and stormed their village (a large stone-built one of great strength). The enemy were between 400 and 500 strong, with 100 sepoys; of these eighty or 100 were killed, including all the head men. But, unfortunately, some women and children were accidentally smothered by the smoke, and perished in the village. This was not the fault of our brave soldiers. The enemy had got into a strong loop-holed house, and would not give in, and no one had any idea there were any women or children there. Our loss was twelve or fourteen killed and wounded. It was a most successful affair, and ought to have the best possible political effect among the unruly Thakoors and their rebel followers.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—We have been informed that the Secretary of State for India, in a despatch dated the 25th January last, adverting to the circumstance of the tenantry in the North-West Provinces having expelled or ousted the purchasers of several estates during the insurrection in those provinces, and given their adhesion and support to the former hereditary proprietors, has requested the opinion of the Indian Government whether it would be possible to devise some measures by legislation to entertain the latter as a source of maintaining the authority of the British Government. A circular has, therefore, been issued to all the Revenue Commissioners and other law officers in the Mofussil by the Board Revenue requesting their opinions on the subject. It is also generally believed that Lord Stanley intends to effect some improvements in the existing ryotwarree system in India.—Bengal Hurkaru.

DILATORY JUSTICE.—A curious instance of delay in the administration of justice in the Mofussil has just been brought to our notice. A few years ago a man in the service of an influential zemindar, in Krishnagur, was charged by his master with having stolen a horse and run away to Calcutta. A few days after he was arrested by the Calcutta police, and sent up to Krishnagur under the escort of a few Burkundazes. The prisoner, however, managed to effect his escape. The Burkundazes were severally sentenced to pay a fine, to be imprisoned for three calendar months for neglect of duty, and dismissed the service. A safety and for succour anywhere, and his friends are beginning to insinuate that the country will at once be quieted if our Government will, according to precedent, only give him a nice little jageer and leave him alone! But I have not done yet, although I cannot give you many facts of the next affair. What I heard is, that a force under Major Meade moved out from Seepree, and unexpectedly came upon a body of Pukka sepoy at Goorwaiee, about seventy in number, and as the fellows could not get away, they fought well. Numbers were cut up, and a great many got into a house which we then surrounded, and as it somehow took fire, almost all in it were accounted for, some thirty, I think.—Delhi Gazette.

DELHI, July 7.—The number of soldiers who have availed themselves of the option of taking their discharge is large at this station. Upwards of 400 in the 2nd fusiliers, and of the battery, only some twenty or thirty remain! It is a pity; but like everything else it will find its own remedy. Already volunteering has commenced from the 88th Connaught rangers; and the gap in the artillery will soon be filled up. The band of the 2nd fusiliers will suffer considerably, but, fortunately, enough will still be left to keep up its character. Brigadier Troup has arrived and assumed the command of the station; his brigade major has also arrived. Several officers of the 88th have proceeded to the hills on leave; amongst them Colonel Maxwell, commanding. They are wise, for never in the memory of man has Delhi been so true to its character for extreme heat; the hot winds are blowing like a furnace blast while I write, and those who have preserved their "tatties" are fortunate. The faithful are showing in greater strength daily, and ere long we shall see the Sikhs out of the Jumma Musjid and the Mussulmans in. A guard, under an European, goes the rounds of the city every night to see all quiet, a measure induced, it is said, by the state of the native mind upon hearing that the European soldiers of the late East India Company had expressed a desire to help themselves whenever they felt disposed, a report perfectly groundless; but the natives are not wanting in low cunning, which points at once to what they deserve, and the consequence has been the burial of immense treasure, which will not be brought to the earth's surface until the owners are well satisfied that the recent excitement is entirely abated. Truth to tell, it is not Europeans they have to fear, but I could point out other candidates for a fresh opportunity for a "good big loot," from whom there might be some reasonable cause for alarm. Mr. Woodington, our chaplain, has been compelled to proceed to Kussowlie for the benefit of his health.—Delhi Gazette.

A HIMALAYAN PRINCIPALITY.—A correspondent from the Himalayas writes:—"We are going, I hear, to recognise a bastard son of the late Gurlwal Raja, who has just died, although when the late Sovereign was restored by us he was informed that his legitimate heirs only would be recognised. If we let this tract slip through our fingers it will be bitterly regretted, and will be denounced as foolish as our surrendering Java in 1814. Upwards of 20,000 square miles of hill and valley, with every variety of climate from the tropical of the valley to the Siberian on the mountain tops, might be honestly and fairly annexed for the future site of a European colony. The tract is more than thirty times the size of the Dhoon and thirty times more valuable."

ELECTRIC TELEGRAPH LINES.—On the 9th October, 1857, a line was erected to Kundowlie, and a message sent to Colonel Greathed's column summoning it to Agra at once. It came, and the result was the total defeat of the rebels on the 10th. From Kundowlie the line was speedily carried to Allyghur and thence to Delhi by the aid of fifty-four miles of very thin copper wire, as no iron wire could be obtained from Calcutta. On the 29th January, 1858, the line was working between Agra and Calcutta, and the line to Gwalior was completed, and for three months no one was permitted to proceed to Gwalior to work it. It was carried on to Seepree, and on Tantia Topce's taking Gwalior the whole of this line, 140 few months after the delinquent was again arrested in Calcutta, and sent up under a stronger guard to be tried at Krishnagur. He was convicted, and sentenced to six months' imprisonment with labour. On his release from prison the man came down to Calcutta, where he remained some years. In the month of May last, however, this individual was again arrested near Serampore by the dismissed Burkundazes and imprisoned, pending a reference to the magistrate of Krishnagur. The prisoner has now, we hear, been in the Serampore jail for about two months without any prospect of being soon set at liberty.

THE CHEPAUK PALACE and grounds were bought by the Madras Government for Rs. 5,80,000. The gold throne of the Nawab of the Carnatic was sold for Rs. 22,000, and the silver ladder for Rs. 2,500.

EXECUTIONS AT MADRAS.—The Madras journals have stated, as a significant fact, that during the present century no fewer than twenty-two Europeans have been executed at Madras, having been found guilty by Madras juries of the crime of murder.

A SAD STORY.—On Saturday, June 2nd, the Melanie anchored in the roads, having sailed from Acheen and Penang. She had on board thirteen of the crew of the late barque Sir Charles Napier, Captain William Balsillie. It appears that the Sir Charles Napier left Rangoon on the 17th May, with a cargo of rice, and proceeded on her voyage to Falmouth; that when in lat. 4 north, lon. 94 east, on the 30th May, a leak was discovered; that the efforts of the crew to lessen the quantity of water in the hold were unavailing; and that the boats were taken to on the 2nd June. At that time there were eight feet of water in the hold. The captain, his wife, and two of the crew got into the long boat, the second officer and four of the crew got into the captain's gig, and in the jolly-boat were the chief mate and five of the crew. When near Acheen two prahus gave chase to the boats, came up with them, and plundered all they contained, but did not ill-treat the inmates. The boats remained at Acheen until the Melanie arrived, the commander of which vessel gave the unfortunate mariners a passage to Madras. While on board the Melanie Captain Balsillie's wife was confined of a female child, which died the same day (23rd June); on the 26th Captain Balsillie died, and four days afterwards his wife also died. They were all buried at sea. To conclude this sad story, we may mention that the Deputy Master Attendant, Captain McKennie, forwarded the shipwrecked crew to the sailors' home, where no doubt they will be cared for.—Athenaeum.

MOVEMENTS OF TROOPS.—From the Deccan we learn that the movement of troops this year in the Hyderabad Contingent will be confined to the cavalry, the artillery and infantry standing fast. The 1st cavalry is to proceed from Mominabad to Bolarum, the 2nd from Bolarum to Hingolie and Ellichpoor, the 3rd from Aurangabad to Mominabad, and the 4th from Hingolie and Ellichpoor to Aurangabad, the whole being set in motion about the middle of November.

HYDERABAD.—The course of events is progressing. European troops are arriving, but not with any evil intent, and only on recommendation of Sir P. Grant, the commander-in-chief. It is a pity that intrigues are rife against the Nizam's minister, it is familiar to all despotic governments, I allow, and at this moment that highly-gifted man Sallar Jung swings on the same scales with the Emperor of France, for the lives of both are not worth twenty-four hours' purchase by the insurance offices. The arch rebels of Hyderabad were two Moulvees, namely, Allahodeen and Ahmed Saib. The first is in durance vile, tried by a jury of Moulvees, and, much against their convictions and consciences, sentenced to be banished the kingdom like the Nawab of Barrar. The second non est inventus. Jehangeer Khan was cut down, Jafferoodowla incarcerated.—The like fate befell Kootab Khan, Raj Jung, and Meerda-chand. The resident, Colonel Davidson, is quietly but surely following up his game. Ring Row, the accredited agent of Nana Sahib, was tried and sentenced to be hung. His fate depends on the will of Lord Canning.

GOLD MOHURS.—According to the Madras Times orders have been received at the Madras Mint, for all the gold in the Treasury at present, consisting chiefly of gold mohurs, star pagodas, &c., to be sent forthwith to England. It is reported that the Mint Committee is shortly to be numbered amongst the things that were.

THE SUPREME GOVERNMENT has declined to sanction the appointment of a fourth judge to the bench of the Madras Sudder Court, recommended by the local Government in consequence of the large amount of work to be performed.

A DASHING AFFAIR.—Captain Nuttall, who commands the Nassick Kolie police corps, with ten horse and twenty-four foot—the remainder of his party being a reserve—attacked the rebel Bheels under Bhagojee Naik in the hills east of Sungumair on the morning of the 9th July. A smart engagement, which lasted several hours, ensued. The two sons and a nephew of Bhagojee were killed; eight others were taken prisoners; Heerjee Naik was also wounded, and no casualties occurred on our side, except that Captain Nuttall's sowar orderly was wounded in the rump: Captain Nuttall's horse was hit in two places.

SIR CHARLES TREVELYAN.—It is stated that his Excellency Sir Charles Trevelyan purposes making a tour into the provinces, starting in about a couple of months. He will proceed first to Cocanada, Dowlaiswaram, and up the Godavery, in order that he may personally satisfy himself concerning the advantages of that river as a means of communicating with the interior. He is also anxious to look into the condition and prospects of the irrigation works. His Excellency will most probably return to the Presidency by land.

NIZAM'S DOMINIONS.—Our readers will remember that after attempting to cut down Major Macintire of the 2nd Hyderabad cavalry, a few months ago, in camp, near Secunderabad, the assassin, a trooper of the corps, attacked the Rissaldar Major, Meer Dilawur Hoossain, and one or two other men—the Rissaldar Major died shortly afterwards of his wounds. We now learn, that in consideration of the long and faithful service, and untimely death of the Rissaldar, the Governor-general has been pleased to sanction the grant of a Jagheer village in the Hyderabad assigned districts in perpetuity, for the support of his family, of the annual value of Rs. 2,844, and also the continuance of the Horse Assamies of the late Rissaldar, by the entertainment of a supernumerary sowar in his room. Meer Dilawur Hoossain, Rissaldar Major, and Sirdar Bahadur obtained the Order of Merit in 1854 for saving the life of his commanding officer Major Macintire, c.b., in a fight with a Rohilla band, in which encounter the major's horse was cut down, the rider being under him. When in this perilous situation, Meer Dilawur Hoossain and his son-in-law, Dowlut Khan, most fortunately rushed up sword in hand, and killed four Rohillas, thus rescuing the life of their commanding officer from the jaws of death; this old and distinguished native officer was the first man in the Contingent on whom the above honour was conferred. In Central India he again greatly distinguished himself; and had many hair-breadth escapes, falling at length by the hands of a base assassin when almost on the very threshold of his own quiet home. It is gratifying to learn that Government has made ample provision for the family of this gallant soldier; an act of justice for which they are indebted to the good offices of the resident Colonel Davidson.—Madras Spectator.

RAILWAY PROSPECTS.—We are given to understand there is every likelihood that by the end of the year our local railway will be opened southward to the town of Sholapore, a length of about one hundred miles; and simultaneously there will be an opening northward to Nassick of nearly another one hundred miles, making the total length of line, which will be at work in 1860, amount to something like four hundred miles. Pleasing as these figures are, we feel assured that every extension which is opened will not only increase the passenger traffic with the rents offered for amusement-seekers, but the denizens of this tight little island may look forward to a prospect of obtaining grain and gram for something like one-third the prices now paid. And then who shall calculate at this moment the thousands of devotees prevailed upon to attempt a pilgrimage by rail (!) to the Hindoo shrines at Nassick! How the myriads of Banians, who now revel in filth, will then be seen in all the beauty and pride of cleanliness with limbs laved in the purity of these sacred waters! What an exquisite annual report might now be fairly expected of the director general of prisons, as with the philanthropy of John Howard he reduces the number of passengers in a third-class carriage from 200 to twenty! What blessings he will earn from the Buddhists for his tenderness to animal life; how likely to induce said Buddhists to transport the Pinjrapole from Bombay to Nassick by the railway; and how, finally, we shall find a monument erected at the conjoint expense of the railway companies and of Pinjrapole societies of that director general who promoted their mutual interests! Our feelings will not permit us to say much more.—Bombay Gazette.

ENCOURAGEMENT TO LEARN ENGLISH.—The revenue commissioner, southern division, proposed to the Government, with the view to encourage the acquisition of the English language by all candidates for public employment on Government native establishments, to allow a knowledge of English to entitle to additional marks at the entrance examination. Government has approved of the proposal, and directed that as a test for qualification for the service, the programme sanctioned in January, 1854, must be fully passed. The additional marks attained in consequence of a knowledge of English are not to be estimated in judging of the candidate's failure or success.

CAPTAIN THE VISCOUNT DANGAN has been appointed military secretary to the Right Honourable the Governor, vice Lieut. col. Russell, proceeded to Europe.

LIEUTENANT CHARLES HENRY STRUTT, of the Bombay Artillery, has been appointed an aide-de-camp on the personal staff of the Right Honourable the Governor, during the time he is employed at Bombay as prize agent for the Central India Field Force.

NUGGUR PARKUR.—An extract of a letter from Rajpootana, dated the 2nd July states:—"Nixon goes towards Nuggur Parkur. It appears that Colonel Evans and Lieut. Tyrwhitt thought the business was over, and dismissed almost all the troops, retaining only two levies and a couple of companies. On the night of the 20th (the day that the head-quarters of the Belooch battalion marched on their return to Hyderabad), the Nuggur Parkur Rana made a successful attempt to escape, overpowered and cut down Evans' and Tyrwhitt's guards, cut the tent ropes, seized the treasure and liberated the prisoners. The new levies bolted. The two companies of Belooches, however, must have stuck to it, for they were fighting till sunrise, when Johnstone's Belooches returned and cleared the place, pursuing the rebels into the hills with severe loss, and killing many of the liberated prisoners. Another field force has gone out from Deesa, and they will be obliged to maintain a force at Nuggur Parkur for some time to come.

STATISTICS OF INQUESTS.—From a classified return made by Dr. Reid, coroner of Bombay, of the inquests held by him during the quarter ending the 5th of July, as compared with that immediately preceding it, it would appear that the total number of cases in which juries had been summoned since December, 1858, were 107. Of these 10 were ascertained to have been natural deaths; there was 1 still-born case; and 4 cases in which the verdict was "found dead" (that is the cause of death not ascertained), were also probably natural deaths. Deducting those 15 cases, there remain 92 deaths, of which 4 were found by the inquisition to be homicidal—2 being murder, and 2 manslaughter; 3 were cases of poisoning, in which the agency had not been ascertained; 10 were suicidal, and the remaining 75 casual deaths. The mode of suicide was in 2 cases drowning, in 4 poisoning, in 2 hanging or strangulation, in 1 throat cutting, and in 1 stabbing. 2 of the victims destroyed themselves while suffering from delirium tremens, 2 while in a state of temporary insanity, and in the remaining 6 cases the state of mind was "not ascertained." Besides the 2 cases of suicide, no less than 25 other deaths were by drowning, 13 of which were returned as "accidental," and 12 as "found drowned," most of which also were probably the result of accident. Besides the latter there were 3 other doubtful cases, being injuries of the head or abdomen, how caused not known; there were also 2 cases of traumatic tetanus, probably the result of quackery; and no less than 7 cases of "excessive drinking"—that is, of alcoholic poisoning. Of the remaining 38 casual deaths, 10 were the result of what may be called public accidents, 3 having been caused by a fire, 4 by the falling of buildings, and 3 by horses running away in the streets. There were 5 deaths caused by falls from palm-trees, 9 by falls from houses, or on ship-board, and 14 by various other accidents. Deducting the natural and the "found dead" cases, there remains an average of 13 cases a month under the head of "accident and violence," since the commencement of the official year in December, which is at the rate of 156 deaths a year; the average of the ten years (1848-57) over which Dr. Leith's Mortuary Reports extend being about 149 a year.

VICTORIA MUSEUM AND GARDENS.—Two Parsee gentlemen have offered to subscribe the princely donation of Rs. 50,000 to the Victoria Museum and Gardens' fund, on certain conditions, with regard to which they have placed themselves in correspondence with the committee of that fund.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM LOCH, of the 1st regiment light cavalry (lancers), paymaster southern division of the army, and acting remount agent, Bombay, has been appointed to act for Lieutenant Colonel Barr as military paymaster at the Presidency, during his absence on furlough to Europe.

MAJOR THOMAS CANDY, of the Invalid Establishment, and Marathe Translator, Educational Department, is appointed commandant of the Sion Fort, in the room of Major Parkinson, deceased.

HONOURS TO NATIVES.—Subadar Major Sirdar Sing, of the 25th regiment Bombay native light infantry, has been admitted to the second class of the Order of British India, with the title of Bahadur, from the 1st June, 1859, in succession to pensioned Jemadar Oodday Sing, Bahadur, of the second class, deceased. Subadar Dhall Metter, of the 13th regiment Bombay native infantry, has been admitted to the second class of the Order of British India, with the title of Bahadur, from the 1st June, 1859, in succession to pensioned Jemadar Chola Khan, Bahadur, of the second class, deceased.

THE MONSOON.—The total fall of rain at Bombay up to the 16th of July is as follows:—At Byculla, 41 in. 40 cts.; in the Fort, 43 in. 82 cts.; and at Colaba, 38 in. 70 cts.

CHOLERA.—The mortality from cholera has very much abated; the number of deaths reported during the past week being, on an average, about six or seven per day.

DR. BUIST.—We hear that one of the most zealous members of the Bombay municipal board, Dr. Buist, has been offered the situation of superintendent of the Government printing office in Bengal, on a salary of Rs. 1,700.

MR. GREGOR GRANT, sub-treasurer, general paymaster, superintendent of stamps, and secretary to the Government savings' bank, has been permitted to retire from the Bombay Civil Service.

COL. JAMESON, having been appointed by the Government of India president of the financial commission to inquire into the reduction of military expenditure in the three Presidencies, has been relieved of his duties as military auditor general; Lieut. Chitty to act for Capt. Forbes as deputy military auditor general; and Mr. Thomas Salby, uncovenanted assistant, to act for Lieut. Chitty as assistant military auditor general.

CRIMINAL SESSIONS.—The second criminal sessions of this year were dissolved on the afternoon of the 13th July, the cases having been disposed of by Sir Joseph Arnould in eight days. There were thirty-six cases, comprising fifty-one prisoners, of whom twenty-five were Hindoos, twelve Mahomedans, ten Christians (eight Europeans, one native, and one African), three Parsees, and one Jew. The ages of the prisoners ranged from seventeen to forty years. The grand jury ignored the bill in one case, in which a Suggooma woman was charged with larceny in having received stolen property knowing it to have been stolen; in the rest of the cases true bills were returned. One case of breach of trust, in which two prisoners are charged with fraudulent misapplication of the property of one Lalman, was traversed to the next sessions. In two cases of larceny, the three prisoners did not appear to stand their trial. Of the forty-five prisoners who stood for trial, sixteen were acquitted and discharged, against one the sentence has been reserved, and twenty-eight were sentenced by the presiding judge. One was sentenced to be hanged. One, an incorrigible offender, was sentenced to be transported to the Straits' settlements for a period of seven years. Twenty-one were sentenced to be imprisoned in the House of Correction, with hard labour, for the following periods:—three for two years, five for eighteen months, nine for twelve months, one for nine months, two for six months, and one for three months. Five were sentenced to be confined in the county jail—one for twelve months, three for six months, and one for three months. At the last sessions the prisoners committed for trial were forty-three, showing an increase at this sessions of eight.

CAPT. SEPTIMUS SCOTT, of the 9th regiment N. I., has been transferred, at his own request, to the invalid establishment. This officer served with the Bombay column army of the Punjab in 1848-49, at the siege and surrender at Mooltan, for which service he received a medal and clasp. He also served with the Satpoora field force in 1858, and commanded the right wing of the regiment in the action of Ambapassani.

REMOVAL OF THE SEAT OF GOVERNMENT.—Rumours have been prevalent for some days that the seat of Government will be removed, so soon as arrangements now pending are completed, from Bombay to Poona. A wiser or more desirable suggestion could not have occurred to the authorities, and it possesses also the advantage of being timely during an extraordinary demand for house accommodation, and while rents are ruling unprecedentedly high. Why the island of Bombay should for so long have been made the capital of the local Government one can hardly divine, unless it be for the only reason that it has always been so. Considering its area and the vast accommodation it must continue increasingly to afford for commercial purposes in the way of stores and docks, for the terminus of probably more than one railway, for public gardens and other purposes, Bombay could not much longer have remained the head-quarters of the Government. A measure such as that now to be obtained will most certainly be a boon to the denizens of this island, while it will give property a real and not a fictitious value of a permanent instead of a fluctuating character. The removal of public offices will be further attended by the removal of hundreds of beings who are mere dependents on those who have incomes that will permit of charity being bestowed—vagrants rather than anything else. And if the military chief's permanent quarters were at Ahmednuggur, and along with it the establishment of the remount agency—the island of Bombay would comprise wholly the industrial population in its largest significance, together with breathing room for thousands, who are now hourly dying from inhaling impure air. Another noticeable reason in this change is, that both Bombay and Poona will profit in having space for elegant buildings; and that class ever on the wing for variety, and known as the migratory, may hereafter find Ahmednuggur more agreeable as a residence during the rains. Other large and important benefits must result which we cannot now foresee, but we anticipate that both European and native will have occasion to be grateful for the change.—Bombay Gazette.

IMPORTS (Bombay, July 21.)—Cotton Manufactures.—There is an active inquiry for almost all descriptions of Piece Goods, and prices are improving every day; the only exceptions being Domestic and T. Cloth, for which at present the demand is limited, and Mulis and Drills, which are quiet. There is an improved inquiry for the principal kinds of Bleached Goods. All sorts of Glasgow Goods are steady, except Cambric and Mull, which are inquired for at slightly higher rates. Turkey Red Goods continue dull. There has been a large amount of business effected in Piece Goods during the past fortnight. Metals.—Manufactured Copper is in improving demand, and we quote eight annas to one rupee more for Braziers, Sheathing, and Bottoms. The two former have been sold to the extent of 925 cwt. at Rs. 64-10 and Rs. 65-4. Nails are out of inquiry, and lower in price. In Iron 50 tons Swedish Bars have sold at Rs. 55-4 per catty. British Bars and Square Nail Rod may be quoted Rs. 1 higher, and other kinds unchanged. Nothing has been done in Lead or Steel. Of Spelter 1,850 cwt. has been disposed of at Rs. 13 to Rs. 13-8. Tin Plates are inquired for at higher rates. There are few changes to report, or business to advise. Saffron has further advanced, 100 lbs. having realised Rs. 27 per lb. Tar of both descriptions is looking down. Coals are still wanted, and sales have been effected at Rs. 42 per ton. EXPORTS (Bombay, July 21.)—Cotton.—During the fortnight there was some little demand on European account, but since the receipt of the last China advices, prices are more in favour of purchasers, and the market has assumed a rather dull tone than before. Oil Seeds.—These are without any activity in the transactions, and owing to a fair supply Lucced has receded about two annas.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, 11th July.—During the fortnight two vessels have sailed, both for London. They took away 8,805 cwt. of coffee, of which 7,569 were plantation and 2,236 native. The exports of both kinds are considerably in excess of former years, especially in the case of native. Here, as elsewhere, anxiety is felt to be prepared for contingencies. It is natural that we should wish to see some of Armstrong's new guns mounted in Colombo, and the magnificent harbour of Trincomalie placed beyond the danger of surprise. Two war steamers have left our shores for Australia, and the steamer Oriental, with the 61st regiment for Mauritius, has touched at Galle. We have here proof that other British colonies are cared for. Meantime there is a rumour that three more regiments are to be stationed in Ceylon. At present the military expenditure in the island is about £200,000 per annum, of which about £80,000 comes out of the colonial revenue as contribution to the Queen's chest, island allowances, repairs of fortifications, &c. For 1859 we expect the proportion of the colony will be fully £100,000, in consequence of the expenditure on new and splendid military quarters, and in consequence of an augmented scale of island allowances. £100,000 is one-sixth of the revenue, and about as much as we can be reasonably expected to defray; so that if more troops are sent for the defence of this "Key of India," we trust the additional expenditure will be defrayed out of imperial funds.

Next to the war and railway question, attention has been directed to the squabbles and litigation between Bishop Chapman and Warden Baly, of St. Thomas' College. The bishop wishes to get rid of the warden on the ground that the funds cannot support such an officer. Mr. Baly insists that his appointment as dean of the cathedral, college chaplain, and warden, was "during good behaviour," and that it cannot be terminated at the mere wish of the bishop. The case is fully before the court, the Queen's advocate being retained against the bishop, and the scandal to Christianity is great.

In consequence of the departure of Mr. O'Grady to England, Mr. Mitford has gone to act as Government agent of the North-Western Province; while Mr. Gibson, relieved by Mr. Walker at Galle, has gone to act as agent to the Eastern Province. Mr. T. C. Power is to act as assistant agent and district judge of Ratnapoora. Mr. T. B. Stephen takes Mr. Vane's place in the customs at Colombo, and Mr. Brooke succeeds Mr. Stephen at Jaffna.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. James Clubb, of Kandy, which occurred at Colombo on the 9th July. He sunk from abscess in the liver.

During the fortnight we have had a good deal of rain, a result, no doubt, of the absence of rain in May.

The health of the country is improving.—Ceylon Overland Observer.

CENTRAL ASIA.

Our Cabul advices extend to June 26:—

June 4.—Sirdar Meer Afzul Khan arrived at Cabul from Candahar on this day, previous to which he despatched a letter to the Ameer of Cabul of the following purport:—"That Sirdar Mahomed Azum Khan marched from Boglan for Dhaindurra banarain, and on his way enlisted 2,000 sowars and 500 infantry of his own selection from Koondooz, in addition to the number of followers (2,500) he had with him previously. On reaching Dhaindurra-banarain, he gave battle to the Oozbookees and defeated them, killing twenty-two and taking many prisoners; he also captured fifty horses. The rest of the enemy fled towards Koondooz. The Oozbookees took eight prisoners from the Sirdar. The latter then proceeded to Shahirkhanabad, and took possession of it, and also captured Shair-Ush-Kumish (a place about three coss from Koondooz). The inhabitants of Koondooz hid themselves in the city on the arrival of Sirdar Mahomed Azum Khan and his army. Meer Ataleek Beg (one of the Sirdar's chieftains) rode into the city of Koondooz with 1,000 sowars and 500 infantry." Dost Mahomed was much gratified with the above intelligence.

June 5.—The Dost issued orders for the despatch of 1,500 cavalry and infantry to Koondooz, to join Sirdar Mahomed Azum Khan. A case was brought before the Ameer, in which the wife of a sowar (who had taken service with Mahomed Afzul Khan, and had proceeded to Toorkistan,) was implicated in a case of adultery. The circumstance was reported by the father of the woman to the Dost, who ordered the woman to be executed, and the ears of her paramour to be cut off; the woman to be set on a horse and paraded through the city of Cabul, as a warning to others.

June 6.—A letter was received from Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, from Toorkistan, to the following effect:—"That Sirdar Mahomed Azum Khan had issued orders to his army to get themselves ready by night, and that before the dawn of the following day he would lead them towards Koondooz, as some 2,000 or 3,000 men had assembled near that place. Sirdar Mahomed Usлам Khan also gave orders for his men to be ready, and to march for Koondooz, and reach the place before the forces of Sirdar Mahomed Khan. The former started with his force during the night, and on reaching Katghun (en route to Koondooz) was encountered by nearly 2,000 of the inhabitants of that place, who gave him battle and defeated him, killing thirty of his men and capturing three. The rest of his men fled towards the hills, and 200 were drowned. Sirdar Azum Khan, on hearing of this catastrophe, abused Usлам Khan for this shameful conduct, and marched for Katghun with his forces. On his arrival there the Kutghances fled in all directions.

June 7.—The Dost consulted with Sooltan Mahomed Khan and others, and instructed Sirdar Ameen Khan to collect his forces and proceed to Koondooz (via Kohistan), and to take with him the forces of Sirdar Shum-soondeen Khan, and the army of Gouree Boglan. Some regiments have arrived from Candahar under their leader, Shair Ally Khan, on leave. Two regiments of Wuzeer Ukhar Khan, and one cavalry regiment, have been left at Candahar. The Dost has issued orders to Sirdar Mahomed Hussen Khan to enlist soldiers at the rate of five rupees each per mensem. The Dost ordered Sirdar Oosman Khan to take his regiments to Toorkistan, but the Sirdar refused, and said that he was willing to go anywhere else but to Toorkistan.

June 8.—The Dost received a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan to the effect that 300 men (inhabitants of Kolab) came by night and murdered some of his men, and took three or four prisoners. Sirdar Afzul Khan went in pursuit of the insurgents, and captured twelve men, and the rest ran away. These twelve men depose that the King of Bokhara had set them up to commit depredations. The Ameer ordered Soofee Khan, Kohistanee, and Nadir Khan, Purdane, to enlist 2,000 cavalry and infantry, and proceed at once to Toorkistan.

June 9.—Another letter was received from Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, stating that Meer Abdul Kurreem Beg, by the advice of the King of Bokhara, and with the assistance of Meer Attalick Beg, had come down to Kohat to aid the 300 men who had committed depredations the previous evening. There is a rumour current in Toorkistan that the King of Bokhara has come as far as Koondooz. The Dost has ordered Abbool Reza Khan, to instruct all the Sirdars and chiefs to proceed to Toorkistan at once with their regiments.

June 10.—Sirdar Azim Beg's letter was received by the Dost, in which it was stated that Shair Khan and Baiz Khan had sent Kwaja Abdool Azeez to the Governor of Koondooz, and requested him to come and yield obeisance to Sirdar Mahomed Afzul Khan, and that they would be responsible for any injury which Sirdar Afzul Khan might inflict on him (Governor of Koondooz). If you refuse to humble yourself to Sirdar Afzul Khan, you and your people will be greatly oppressed. The Governor of Koondooz replied that the place belongs to the King of Bokhara, and that if Shair Khan and Baiz Khan wished to make any arrangements they should forward their proposals to him. A letter was also received from Meer Attalick Beg by the Ameer, the contents of which ran thus:—"That Sirdar Mahomed Azeem Khan had left 2,000 cavalry, one regiment of infantry, and four guns, for the protection of the Fort of Bogslan, and taken up his quarters at Narain, which place is also well fortified." The Dost is engaged in despatching troops to Toorkistan.

June 20.—Mahomed Nazem Khan was summoned by the Dost, and ordered to collect as many camels as were available for the conveyance of the baggage of troops that were proceeding on service. The Sirdar produced the camels, and branded them as the property of the State. A Kohistanee was arrested by some wayfarers, and brought to the Dost. This individual was in the habit of killing travellers, and plundering all they possessed. The Dost convicted him of highway robbery, attended with murder, and sentenced him to be imprisoned for life. The Dost summoned Sirdar Kwajah Khan (a Kohistanee chieftain), and other chiefs, and ordered them to parade their regiments. After the parade the Ameer instructed the chiefs to get 400 picked men from the regiments, and equip them for active service in Balkh.

June 21.—In the evening a young girl was found dead in a nullah by her father. It appears that she wore some gold ornaments, and went for an evening walk, and that some person had taken away the ornaments from her, and, having put an end to her existence, buried her in a nullah. The father, whilst in search of her, accidentally came to the place, and having perceived some hair sticking out of the nullah, immediately discovered the corpse of his murdered child. The corpse was taken before the Dost, who ordered the Kotwal (Ushruf) and Surwur Lohanee, to trace the murderer.

June 22.—The Kotwal arrested the thief and murderer, in the neighbourhood in which the relatives of the deceased girl resided, and brought him before the Dost; and on the Ameer asking the prisoner what induced him to commit this heinous offence, he replied that he had done so by an oversight. The Dost made the culprit over to the parents of the deceased girl, to be hanged by them; and the assassin was executed this very day.

June 23.—Intelligence was received by the Dost from Tashkurgah to the effect that Sirdar Mahomed Azim Khan was fortifying the forts of Boglan and Narain, and in three days had constructed entrenchments at the entrance of the forts. The Sirdar was using his best endeavours to get all the entrenchments ready quickly, and was also engaged in storing up provisions for the troops in case of a siege. After strengthening the forts of Boglan and Narain, the Sirdar intends to proceed to Koondooz. Meer Attalick Beg has gone to Khanabad, near Koondooz, for the sake of security, in case he should require assistance, which can be rendered him by Sirdar Azim Beg. The Dost paraded 200 Kohistanee troops, and ordered them to be held in readiness for active service in Toorkistan. Meer Abdul Kadir Khan requested the Dost to inspect the new levies that had been enlisted. The Dost having chosen 100 men from them, ordered Abdul Rozack Khan to pay them two months salary, and to march them to Koondooz. The troops started in the evening to Koondooz.

June 25.—The Ameer received a letter from Sirdar Shah Ahmed Khan, son of Sirdar Azim Khan, from Kooram, stating that three gentlemen had arrived at that place, and were proceeding to Cabul; and requested permission from the Dost, to allow them to proceed. The Dost has, in reply to Sirdar Shah Ahmed Khan, requested him to provide all necessaries for the three gentlemen, to give them every assistance, and to let them proceed without molestation. The Ameer informed Mirza Ahmid Khan that he had received a letter from Sirdar Mahomed Azeem Khan, stating that he was in want of troops; the Dost gave orders to enlist a new regiment and to send it to Sirdar Azeem Khan, at Koondooz. The regiment marched for Koondooz the following morning.

June 26.—The Dost inquired of his Kazee of some lucky day on which he could start his troops for Toorkistan. In reply, the Kazee begged of him to wait for a few days, when a lucky day would come. Sirdar Wully Mahomed Khan got in readiness two regiments, 100 sowars, and fifty tattoos laden with ammunition, for despatch to his brother, Sirdar Faiz Mahomed Khan. Wheat-flour sold at two seers half chittack per rupee, and jow three and a half seers per rupee, according to the weights current in Cabul.—Lahore Chronicle.

Court Martial.

CAPTAIN R. C. STEVENSON, 3RD BENGAL EUROPEAN REGIMENT.

At a general court martial assembled at Morar, Gwalior, on June 6, 1859, Capt. Robert Charles Stevenson, of the 3rd Bengal Eur. regt., was arraigned on the following charges:—

1st Charge.—With conduct unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, in Fort Gwalior, on March 22, 1859, when in command of the fort guards, been unable to perform his duty from an attack of delirium tremens brought on by excessive drinking.

2nd Charge.—With conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in having, between the month of June, 1858, and the 22nd of March, 1859, been habitually negligent in keeping the accounts of the company under his command, in consequence of which, on the date last stated, there was a deficiency of 937,84 rupees, or thereabout, public money, for which he, Captain Stevenson, could not account.

Not Guilty of the 1st charge.

Guilty of the 2nd charge, in so far as the prisoner not being able to account for deficiency of public money, amounting to 937,84 rupees, less the sum of one rupee and twelve annas, which has been satisfactorily accounted for; but the Court do acquit him, the prisoner, of that part of the 2nd charge which relates to habitual neglect.

Sentence.—The Court having found the prisoner Capt. R. C. Stevenson, 3rd Bengal Eur. Regt., guilty to the extent already stated, do sentence him to make good deficiency of 935 rupees, twelve annas, and four pies, instead of 937 rupees, eight annas, and four pies, as mentioned in the 2nd charge; and further that he be reprimanded.

Confirmed.

Simla, June 29.

REMARKS BY THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF IN INDIA.

The C. in C. has confirmed the entire finding of the court; but from the evidence brought forward at the trial, his lordship has strong doubts of the correctness of the acquittal upon the first charge.

The court properly declared the exact amount of the deficiency, for which Capt. Stevenson is responsible, but it should not have specifically awarded refund.

Capt. Stevenson is to be released from arrest and directed to return to his duty. He will adopt immediate measures for adjusting the account of his company, by making good the amount deficient.

Survey of Government Steamers.

Under instructions from government, it is notified for general information and guidance, that where committees of officers, or officer of the qr. mr. gen.'s dept., are directed to survey government steamers or other vessels, they must invariably be guided by the commander of such steamer or vessel in apportioning the number of men or quantity of stores to be put on board. The decision of the commander on such a purely professional matter must invariably be adhered to, and under no circumstances are men or stores to be ordered for embarkation in excess to what a commander of a vessel may consent to receive.

In acting upon this order, however, committees of officers, or officers of the qr. mr. gen.'s dept., will report fully, for the information of the C. in C., through the dep. qr. mr. gen. at the Presidency, on any matter connected with the embarkation of troops or stores which they may deem to require notice.

Appointments of Medical Officers.

Id. Qrs., Simla, June 16.

With the concurrence of the Government, it is hereby notified that all appointments and postings of medical officers or of medical subordinates, made by C. in C. will, in future, be arranged for on the recommendation of the Director general of the medical department, subject to the approval of H.E.; and all members of the medical department are consequently desired to forward their applications on such subjects to the Secretary to the Director general medical department, instead of to the Adj. gen. of the army.

Applications for Leave.

Id. Qrs., Simla, June 14.

The following clause is to be added to paragraph 6, part 1, Section xiv. of the Military regulations:—
“Officers of her Majesty's British army who may be serving on the Staff, or in any detached employment of any description, under the orders of the C. in C., save in the department exclusively appertaining to the royal British army, will submit applications for leave of absence of every description, through their superior officers, under whom they are serving, to the department of the Adj. gen. of the army.”

Roman Catholic Chapels.

The C. in C. is pleased to announce for general information and guidance that H.E. the Gov. Gen. in Council has resolved, that henceforward all sanctioned charges for the establishment of Roman Catholic Chapels, for European troops, shall be drawn by the Roman Catholic Priest in a contingent bill duly attested, and countersigned by the commanding officer of the station.

The bill, on presentation, will be immediately paid by the nearest military paymaster.

Conveyance Allowance, and Passage Money.

Adj. Gen. Office, H.M.'s Forces, Calcutta, June 25.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, April 28, 1858.

The Government of India have communicated the decision of the right hon. the Secretary of State for India that an officer removed from a battalion of a regiment of H.M.'s troops serving in India to another battalion of the same regt. in Europe, who ceases to draw pay and allowances from the date on which his removal is published at the station where he is serving, is entitled, if transferred on public grounds, to be provided with conveyance or conveyance allowance to the port of embarkation, and with passage money to Europe.

This decision applies equally to officers of the Royal Artillery proceeding to join their companies in Europe, or the colonies.

When an officer is entitled to the benefit of this regulation, the General Order notifying his transfer to the Home Establishment will state that it has been made on public grounds.

Regimental Colours.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, May 11.

It is notified that H.E. the Governor-general in Council has decided, subject to the approval of her Majesty's Government, that the European infantry regiments of the Indian army shall be provided with colours of precisely the same pattern as those lately introduced in her Majesty's British regiments, and that accordingly new colours shall be made up for the six Bengal regiments; the distinctive badges conferred on the 1st and 2nd fusiliers being retained by those corps.

Also that the European light cavalry regiments, as in the British regiments, shall not carry standards.

The Governor general in Council has further approved of the clothing department having assigned to it the duty of providing colours for regiments.

Prizes for Rifle Shooting.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, H.M.'s Forces, Calcutta, June 7.

Allowances to Officers in N.W.P.

The C. in C. is pleased to announce that the right hon. the Gov. gen. in Council has extended the application of G.O. No. 561, dated 2nd Dec. 1858, authorizing an allowance of rupees (137) one hundred and thirty-seven pence per mensem to officers doing duty with the levies raised in the North-Western Provinces to the 1st extra Goorka regt.; but that H.E. in Council has thought fit to determine that the allowances granted to officers doing duty with corps of the Punjab irregular force, the levies in the N.W.P., and irregular corps in the field shall be restricted to subalterns.

Dress of Officers.

Head Quarters, Poona, June 28, 1859.

The C. in C. having had occasion to call for reports on the subject of the dress of officers of the army, is surprised to learn that in many regiments the officers European and native are not yet provided with complete full dress uniforms, particularly as respects the full dress cap or chako, which article of dress appears to have been altogether dispensed in some corps.

The dress of officers of infantry is clearly laid down in H.M.'s Dress Regulations, and as this was pointed out in G.O.C. No. 1, dated 14th January, 1858, there could have been no cause for misapprehension on this point. Moreover in the order referred to, officers were directed to provide themselves at once with uniform in strict conformity with these regulations, therefore the C. in C. was not prepared to find that after so long a period this order had not been fully carried out.

The attention of generals, officers, and brigadiers is called to this subject, as it is to them the C. in C. must look for the fulfilment of his orders in every respect.

The C. in C. is pleased to direct that the provisions of G.O.C. No. 1 of the 6th instant, shall be made applicable to the augmentation of the native commissioned and non-commissioned rank of the regiment of artillery authorised by Secretary Colonel Melville's letter, No. 3,887 of the 14th July, 1857, and that the reduction to the formed establishment be effected in the manner therein laid down.

SIR BARTLE FRERE, Commissioner in Sind, has transmitted for the information of Government the following return of indigo cultivation in the Hyderabad Collectorate for the half year ending 30th April, 1859, from which it would be seen that there is a considerable increase over the return of last year. The amount of land cultivated was 2,008 beegas and 8 bis; and the indigo produced was 559 maunds and 15½ seers, sold at the rate of Rs. 60 to Rs. 80 per maund.

Charge of the 8th Hussars before Gwalior.

No. 835 of 1859. H.E. the Gov. gen. in council has much satisfaction in publishing the following letter from the offg. adj. gen. of the army, No. 406, of the 28th of May, 1859, with enclosures, giving cover to a duplicate copy of the latter portion of the report from Brigdr. Smith, late comdg. a brig. of the Malwa div. of operation before Gwalior, on the 17th of June, 1858.

H.E. in council notifies his entire concurrence in the opinion expressed by the C. in C. as regards the gallant charge of a squad. H.M.'s 8th hussars, under the command of Capt. Heneage. H.E. in council offers his cordial thanks to Brigdr. Smith and all the officers and men employed on the occasion, and regrets that the miscarriage of the original report of these operations should have delayed the public notice of them.

From the offg. Adj. Gen. of the Army to the Secy. to the Govt. of India, Mily. Dept.

Sir,—I have the honour, by desire of the C. in C., to forward for submission to the rt. hon. the Gov. gen. of India in council, a letter No. 180, dated 23rd ult., from Maj. gen. H. G. Roberts, comdg. northern div. By. army, transmitting a communication No. 27, dated the 15th of Jan. last, from Brigdr. H. W. Smith, late comdg. a brig. Malwa div., giving cover to a copy of the latter portion of his report (with enclosures) of operations before Gwalior on the 17th of June, 1858, the original of which appears to have miscarried.

2. I am at the same time directed to observe, that the charge of the squadron of H.M.'s 8th hussars, therein described, and in which the Rane of Jhansie was killed, is considered by Lord Clyde to be one of the finest exploits of the war.

H. W. NORMAN, Major,

Offg. Adj. Genl. of the Army.

Hd. qrs., Simla, 28th May, 1859.

From the Maj. Gen. Comdg. North. Div. of the Army, to the Chief of the Staff, Army Hd. Qrs., Allahabad.

Hd. Qrs., North. Div. of the Army,

Dated Camp Ahmedabad, 28rd April, 1859.

Sir,—In obedience to the orders of H.E. the C. in C., conveyed to me in a letter from the adjt. gen. of this army, No. 2,344, of the 18th ult., copy of which is hereto attached, I have the honour to forward the accompanying letter No. 27, of the 15th of Jan. last, and its accompaniments, for the favourable notice of the rt. hon. the C. in C. in India.

2. The delay in forwarding Brigdr. Smith's report, which I much regret, has been caused by its having only now been received back from army hd. qrs., where, in the first instance, it was forwarded.

H. S. ROBERTS, Maj. Genl.,

Comdg. North. Div. of the Army.

From Brigdr. M. W. Smith, Comdg. Brig. R.F.F., to the Asst. adj. gen., Rajpootana F.F.

Camp Omra, 15th Jan., 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour to forward duplicate of latter portion of copy of my report of operations before Gwalior on the 17th of June, 1858, the original of which appears to have miscarried, and only a copy of the first part of my report seems to have reached the maj. gen. then in command of the Rajpootana f.f., of which this brig. formed a detached portion.

I was not aware of the miscarriage of this latter portion of my report until I saw the publication of the first portion, or I should have earlier forwarded a duplicate, as the services of a portion of this brig. are mentioned in this latter portion of my report, which I am most anxious to bring to the notice of the maj. gen.

I also take this opportunity of supplying a few omissions, which I regret to say occurred in my first report.

M. W. SMITH, Brigdr.,

Comdg. Brig. R.F.F.

From Brigdr. M. W. Smith, Comdg. Brig. Malwa Div., to the Adj. Gen., Poona Div. Poona.

Camp Sepree, 25th July, 1858.

Sir,—In accordance with the wishes of Maj. gen. Sir Hugh Rose, K.C.B., conveyed to me in your note dated Pachesi, 11th July, that I should furnish an official statement of all the circumstances of the charge made by a squad. of the 8th hussars, on the 17th of June, and evidence should be officially recorded,

I have the honour to state, that on the afternoon of the 17th of June, the enemy having been driven from the heights, we advanced through the Pass, which runs by the large canal or nullah in the direction of Gwalior. Some 200 or 300 of the enemy's cav. being formed in front of Gwalior, I advanced with a squad. of the 8th hussars, under Capt. Heneage, and a division of guns under Lieutenant LeCocq, By. art., into the open ground beyond the Pass, leaving orders that a comp. of the 10th regt. N.I., and a division of guns, under an escort of gunners, should secure the mouth of the Pass, and a squad. of the 1st By. lancers should move up in the open ground in support.

The squad. of the 8th hussars advanced out of the Pass in file, and formed line at a gallop. After advancing about three hundred yards I ordered the squad. to charge. The squad. then charged, broke the enemy, and pursuing them closely, entered their own camp along with them. The camp was soon cleared, and the 8th followed the fugitives, now increased by a large number of panic-stricken infantry from the camp, into the ground beyond, and never stopped until all who remained had taken shelter in the outskirts of the town itself.

In so doing the 8th took five guns, cutting down the gunners. The Rane of Jhansie also lost her life in the melee. All this took place under a heavy fire from the guns of the fort, and from several field guns in position round the town, and from which was opened a converging fire upon the squad.

During the charge Col. Raines, of H.M.'s 95th regt., brought up a portion of his regt., and took up a position on the left flank of Lieut. LeCocq's division of guns, I having sent him an order to that effect, by Cornet Goldsworthy, 8th hussars.

I shall next record the statement of Capt. Heneage, who commanded the squad., and also some evidence collected by him as to further particulars and details.

Statement and evidence collected by Capt. Heneage.

Capt. Heneage's squad. of 8th hussars was ordered by Brigdr. Smith to attack 200 or 300 of the enemy's cav., who were threatening our guns. They advanced out of the Pass in file, and formed line at a gallop. After advancing some 300 yards they were ordered to charge, which they did, and were upon the enemy in a moment, many of whom were cut down, and the rest fled towards the town. The ground here being very rough and intersected with small nullahs, about one-third of the squad. was obliged to diverge to the right under Lieut. Harding; the remainder, under Capt. Heneage, with Mr. Poore and Lieut. Reiley, going a little to the left and continuing the attack, came shortly into the midst of the enemy's camp, where they took three guns, cutting down the gunners, and completely clearing the camp of the enemy's troops, under a continuous fire from the guns in the fort, and small field guns on the right and left. After passing through the camp, and crossing the road from Gwalior to Moorar, the squad. came upon a large force of the enemy's cav. and inf. in a disorganised mass, who were trying to escape from the camp into the fort. Many of them made a stand, but the 8th slackened their pace, and dashing into the midst of them, cut them down by scores, the Rane of Jhansi being amongst the slain. Two guns were taken here.

The whole of the ground over which the charge had been made being now completely cleared of the enemy, Capt. Heneage withdrew his squad. at an easy pace, and was shortly joined by the detach. under Lieut. Harding, which had charged through the right of the camp, cutting down many of the enemy's gunners and infantry, and had taken four guns. Lieut. Harding was shot at by a dismounted sowar, who missed him, but the shot struck his charger in the eye, and completely destroyed it. He was attacked at the same time by two of the enemy's infantry, whom he cut down and killed.

Capt. Heneage then halted and re-formed his squad, in front of the supports of art., cav., and inf., which had meanwhile come up, and was then ordered by Brigdr. Smith to form his men in single rank, in order to show a larger front.

The squad, of the 8th being then formed in single rank, on the right flank of the art. and inf., the squad, of lancers in second line, he again advanced in order to secure the enemy's guns; after that Capt. Heneage was obliged to relinquish the command of the squad., in consequence of the heat of the sun, and great exhaustion. Capt. Poore assumed the command, and remained with the squad, until the guns were brought away.

Col. Hicks, of the By. art., charged with the squad, through the camp. Lieut. Reilly, upon the return of the squad, from the charge, was obliged to dismount from his horse, and died almost immediately from the effects of the sun and exhaustion. Asst.-surg. Sheilock charged with the squad., and was wounded by a musket ball in the shoulder. He was ready and active in affording his assistance when required.

Cornet Goldsworthy was on my left and in front of the squad, when preparing to charge, and was about to charge with them, when I, in consequence of the very great necessity of having support up quick, ordered him to go back and bring up the horse art. and inf. to a spot which I had pointed out to him, which he did. This officer gave me much assistance, both on the 17th and 18th, in carrying my orders and other matters.

Several of the enemy's guns remained in our possession after the charge, but, from the want of horses and the exhaustion of men, only two could be got away, and it was only through the exertion and skill of Lieut. LeCocq and the men of his division (the right division of the 3rd tr., under the personal superintendence of Lieut. col. Blake) that this could be effected.

One of the enemy's guns had a limber and a pair of wheel horses, the broken harness was lashed up in the best way circumstances would admit of, and a leading pair of our own horses hooked in the gun was sent to the rear, the wheel horses were got to move with great difficulty, being completely done up, and one severely wounded.

The other gun had no limber, but Col. Blake having taken back one of his own guns to the entrance of the Pass, left, the gun within it, and sending back the limber, the enemy's was hooked on it, and brought to the entrance of the Pass, when our gun was lashed to the muzzle and thus drawn off.

These operations were conducted with great coolness and steadiness under four cross fires from the fort and guns in different directions on the place.

This being effected, and seeing the enemy collecting upon our flanks, and having too small a force at my disposal to warrant my advancing further or to enable me to hold my position if I had done so, we retired across the plain by alternate squadrons, and re-entering the Pass took up a position for the night, as stated in my former report of the operations during the seventeenth.

M. W. SMITH, Brigdr.,
Comdg. brig., M. D.

From Lieut. col. T. R. Raines, H.M.'s 95th regt., to Brigdr. Smith, &c., &c.

Dated Camp Godowlie, Nov. 12, 1858.

Sir,—With reference to my report to you on the taking of Gwalior on the 19th June last, I beg to correct an impression I was then under that the guns alluded to in the 5th para. were found by the 10th N.I., abandoned; the words should have been, "captured from the enemy by the 10th N.I.," which I was not cognisant of when I addressed you on the proceedings of that day.

I am informed by Lieut. Sexton, to whose charge I gave one of the captured guns, which was afterwards turned on the rebels, and alluded to in the 3rd para. of the same report, that he received great assistance from Lieut. Read, 10th N.I., who made some good practice in pointing and firing the said gun. I therefore beg to bring Lieut. Read's name to your favourable notice.

T. R. RAINES, Lieut. col.,
H.M.'s 95th regt.

While the infantry skirmishers were feeling their way through the Pass leading to Gwalior, their progress was checked for a time by the fire of two or three guns, which the enemy had brought into the Pass. Lieut.-col. Blake therefore proposed taking a division of his guns on the heights on our right, which was accordingly done, and the result was most successful. By firing at low elevation round shot and shrapnell were dropped on the enemy's guns near, obliging them to retire precipitately to another position, and by thus advancing and coming into action on every occasion of their making a stand, they were at length fairly driven out of the Pass, which was thus made clear for the advance of our force.

Extract from letter from Col. Blake, Comdg. 3rd Trp. H. A., dated 12th Nov., 1858.

"In that part of your report of bringing away the two captured guns, you mention that it was done 'under four cross-fires.' I think it would be well to mention the number of from sixteen to eighteen guns."

Col. De Salis wishes to mention the zeal and intelligence evinced by Maj. Chetwode, when in command of a detached portion of the 8th hussars, on the 17th June.

Lieut. Jenkins, 8th hussars, was on one occasion employed by me in carrying orders to bring up supports, which he executed to my satisfaction.

M. W. SMITH, Brigdr.,
Comdg. brig., M. D.

Brigadier Horsford at Balapoor.

No. 834 of 1859.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council is pleased to publish the following report from Lieut. col. Gordon, comdg. detach. F.F., attached to Brigdr. Horsford's column, of the proceedings of the force from the 3rd to the 5th May, 1859, in pursuit of the rebels near the village of Balapoor:—

From Lieut. col. G. Gordon, comdg. detach. F.F., to Maj. Dillon, Maj. of brig., Brigdr. Horsford's column, Trans. Gogra.

Camp Balapoor Tal, May 5, 1859.

Sir,—I have the honour to report for the information of Brigdr. A. Horsford, c.b., that having heard on the 2nd inst. from Mr. Asst. comr. King that a body of rebels were in the jungle east of Bhinga, I crossed the Raptee at Kukra Ghat on the following morning, and proceeded through the jungle in the direction of Musha, encamping about four miles south-west of that place at eleven A.M.

Here, while pitching my camp, I was informed that some of the enemy's videttes had been seen on the edge of the jungle. I immediately sent off spies to bring correct information of their position; but the men did not return till between four and five o'clock P.M., and their only information then was that they had all gone westward through the jungle. On learning this, I directed Capt. Grant, comdg. 1st regt. Hodson's horse, to send out a small patrol, and to follow himself with the rest of the cav., and watch the movements of the enemy during the night.

Lieut. Anderson (Brig. maj. to Hodson's horse), the officer in command of the patrol, came upon the rebels, 300 in number, about five miles of camp, and was received by a volley of musketry. As the patrol had no fire arms, and were a small party, they returned to camp. On the morning of the 4th I started in pursuit, and followed them with the column as far as Balapoor Tal, where I was informed that they had taken to the jungle, with the view of making the Corunnea Sota en route for Sonar.

I encamped at Balapoor about 10 A.M., and marched again between 12. and 10 o'clock P.M., with the force as per margin,* towards the Corunnea Sota, where, from information obtained from Cap. Grant, I had every reason to suppose that I should overtake the enemy.

After a very hot and fatiguing march of 14 miles, six of which lay through a dense jungle, the rest over hills and through deep and narrow ravines, we came upon their outlying picket and attacked it, killing three of them.

As the signal had been now given to the rest, I knew not a moment was to be lost. I therefore pushed on with all possible speed, and after following the path for about four miles over hillocks, through ravines, and thick jungle, and meeting detached parties, numbering in all some 700 or 800 men, I came, on debouching into the valley, upon the main body, then in full flight over the plain and through the jungle on our right, but now out of musket range.

As the evening was fast closing in, and their numbers were greater than I had anticipated, I thought it prudent to halt and bivouac here for the night, placing the men under a fair shelter of some cow sheds, and taking all necessary precautions to guard the camp against surprise.

In the course of pursuit we killed from twenty-five to thirty men, besides capturing a quantity of camp baggage, fire-arms, and tattoos.

The only casualty on our side was that one man 1st Sikh inf. received a slight bayonet wound.

I regret to say that during a false alarm in the night, occasioned by a herd of buffaloes rushing towards our camp, one man 1st Sikh inf. and two Kahars were severely wounded by the discharge of fire-arms by some men of my party, who, suddenly awaked, fired in the direction of the rush.

I have to thank Capt. Welter, comdg. left wing H.M.'s 53rd regt., who accompanied me on this occasion, leading the column in the latter part of the evening, also Lieut. Bell and Dr. Ashton, of the same corps, and Lieut. Unwin, 1st Sikh inf. I beg especially to bring to the notice of the brigdr. comdg. the services of Capt. Grant.

This officer, though already having been eighteen hours in the saddle, volunteered to serve in this expedition, and point out the position of the rebels, whom he had traced on the previous night to the foot of the pass.

Also Lieut. Eyre, H.M.'s 53rd regt., my detachment staff, whose exertions on this occasion were most praiseworthy.

I have again to thank Mr. M. R. King, asst. commissr., who was forward in the whole business, and acted as my extra orderly officer. Amongst the native force I beg particularly to mention Lall Singh, 1st Sepoy grendr. co., and Mahomed Ally Havildar and Peer Buksh Sepoy, both of light co. These three men, all of the Sikh inf., were first up and attacked the picket.

Having sent directions for provisions to be forwarded to the foot of the range of hills for camp, I marched on the following morning by the same route which I had traversed the previous day to my camp at Balapoor, which I reached at 10 A.M.

A prisoner taken on my return informed me that the force I had pursued was the Nusseerabad Brigade, under Debi Singh, and numbered not less than 1,500 men. Our previous information had led me to estimate their force at 700 men.

I consider that the effect on the rebels will be most beneficial, as showing them that crossing the hills and getting into the ravines and jungle on the other side will not afford them that security which they have hitherto relied on.

From Capt. W. C. Grant, comdg. 1st Hodson's Horse, to the officer comdg. detach. f.f.

Sir,—I have the honour to report to you the proceedings of the reconnaissance which you ordered me to make on the evening of the 3rd inst.

Leaving your camp at 7½ P.M., I proceeded in a north-east direction, skirting the jungle to the villages of Hanipore eight miles. Leaving the villages of Hanipore on our right, we proceeded six miles further, taking a line nearly in the centre of the two belts of jungle. Arrived at the villages of Neortiva, we heard news of a body of rebels, said to be 2,000 strong, who were at a hovel (Tal) near the village of Balapoor, about four miles in our front. I at first thought of attacking them at once, but having with me only 125 sowars, of whom not more than eighteen were armed with fire-arms of any description, and these so inadequately supplied with ammunition as not to have more than one or at most two rounds in possession for each weapon, it being, moreover, pitch dark, and none of us being in the least acquainted with the country, I decided on bivouacking where I was until daylight, and sent an express off to you at once, acquainting you with the intelligence I had received concerning the position of the enemy. During the night my pickets captured all who approached. Most of them were villagers running away themselves from the enemy, and these I discharged in the morning; one man, however, confessed himself to belong to the rebel ranks, and as he had a British officer's regulation sword in his possession I directed him to be disposed of at once.

At the dawn of day we started at once, and found traces of the enemy at Balapoor Khal; advancing rapidly at a trot, we must have entered the jungle in our front shortly after they had done so. Here, however, as we afterwards ascertained, they had turned off to the N.E. towards Kalapoorwah, whilst we crossed their rear and proceeded straight on Bhojpoor, my object being to get to the end of the jungles before they did, and either to prevent them advancing into the plain, or to cut them up as they did so. At Bhojpoor, where both belts of jungle meet and end, we could hear no accounts of the enemy; but seeing a very suspicious looking body of men of about thirty sowars and 140 foot on the plain, who retreated precipitately at our approach, we gave chase and pursued them to Muttee before we discovered that they were a body of jezailchees and police sowars who had been invited to co-operate with us from Kulkulla.

Taking our new friends with us, and having evidently over-run the scent of our proper enemies, we returned through the N.E. belt of jungle, keeping as close as we could to the foot of the mountains; we passed two tracks leading towards the Koronia Sota, at both of which I left a picket of sowars, and at length, on arriving near Gigelee, heard that the rebels, whose numbers were variously stated at from 1,000 to 2,000, had undoubtedly taken the road to the Sonar Valley, crossing the Dundua mountain by the pass of Koronia Sota, the main path towards which enters the jungle nearly at the back (or north-east) of the village of Gigelee. With this information I returned to camp, then moved to Chickenee, leaving the pickets I had placed still standing, one at Bhojpoor and one at each of two pathways leading to the pass of Koronia Sota before mentioned.

FUNERAL CEREMONIES IN CHINA.—We went in with a crowd of other strangers through the open doors, as is commonly done in China on such occasions. The paper house for the departed soul was near its completion. It was about ten feet high, and twelve feet deep. It contained a sleeping room, library, reception-room, entrance-hall, and treasury. It was furnished with paper chairs and tables. We saw boxes of paper-money carried in. A paper image of the dead appeared in the interior seated in state. There was a sedan chair, with bearers, and also a boat and boatmen, for the use of the deceased in the unseen world. A table spread with food was placed in front of the house. A party of Buddhist priests now came forward and walked in procession, striking bells and chanting. As they passed round the house they threw rice and wheat upon it. The family came forward and worshipped their deceased mother, for whose use the house was built. They wore white cotton cloth and sackcloth, white cloth shoes and white cotton braid at the ends of their pigtails, instead of the usual silk braid, used as a terminal decoration to that ornament. The Chinese think that in mourning costume the material should be uncoloured, and they therefore employ white.—Edkins' Religion in China.

DR. BRYCE'S CHARGE TO THE PRESBYTERIAN CHAPLAINS.*

It must still be in the memory of our readers that a certain number of ministers of the Scottish Kirk were lately appointed chaplains on the East India military establishment. At the ordination and induction of these reverend gentlemen, an excellent charge was delivered by the venerable Dr. Bryce, formerly senior minister of St. Andrew's Church, Calcutta. Without entirely vindicating the late Indian Government from the accusation of religious indifference which has so loudly been urged against them, he bore witness to the cordiality with which they had responded to the arguments employed by the General Assembly when pleading for an extension of spiritual ministrations to our countrymen in the East. He then glanced at the difficulties in the way of Hindoo proselytism owing to the peculiarities of that ancient and now terribly corrupt philosophy. The Brahman is ready to believe not only what transcends the utmost stretch of reason, but also that which is directly opposed to it. He accepts not only what is incredible, but also what is morally and physically impossible. In the earliest days of the English factories the chaplains were especially enjoined to encompass the conversion of the Gentoos. Unhappily their predecessors, the Portuguese, had done little to illustrate the purity of the Christian religion, or rather had reduced it almost to the level of the degrading superstitions of the Hindoos. However, the early Protestant missionaries laboured with zeal and knowledge to diffuse the truths of Christianity among the natives, and in many instances received active encouragement from the independent princes of the land. There have been published very contradictory estimates of the Hindoo character. According to one party, never was there such a mild, gentle, and harmless race; while, according to the other, such cruel, crafty, false, and fraudulent wretches were never known as in Hindostan. The truth, as usual, lies midway between the two extremes. What the natives require in the first instance is moral training and the benefit of good examples in the Christian community. The clergy, above all, should act circumspectly, remembering that they are as "cities set upon a high hill." At the same time there must be no indiscreet haste to push forward the work of conversion. To command eventual and perfect success it is needful to act in accordance alike with Christian toleration and sound worldly policy. The work must advance by slow degrees, if it is sought to establish it firmly and securely. Between Lord Stanley's views and those of Sir John Lawrence there is no impassable gulf, but merely a difference on the question of time—a difference, however, of no slight importance. There is no real antagonism between the Government system of intellectual, moral, and scientific education, and the more decidedly religious training of the missionary schools; and had it not been for the mutiny it is probable that the Bible would ere this have been introduced as a class-book "to be put into the hands of all desirous of receiving instruction in its history, doctrines, and precepts." It is as impossible as it would be unjust to force instruction on the native youth, whether of a religious or secular character. The desire to learn must first be felt and expressed, and then it will be the duty of Government not to withhold the means. It must always be remembered that in Hindooism there are heretical as well as orthodox tenets. Suttee, for instance, was not sanctioned by the Veds, but by the Shasters or heretical and superstitious commentaries on the Veds; so that something would be gained if only the errors of the Shasters were pointed out and explained. But the chief hope and door of success now centres in a native pastorate. Native ministers must go forth and preach the gospel to their countrymen. In the southern parts of the Madras Presidency there are whole villages of Christians, whose numbers are steadily and rapidly increasing. It is time, therefore, that there should be native pastors, specially trained to the good work, and ordained in the usual manner. There can be little doubt, we think, if native preachers can be obtained of good family and respectable social position, and thoroughly versed in scriptural lore, that more converts will be made in twelve months than have been baptised during the last hundred years. With respect, therefore, to the immense advantage of having a native pastorate we entirely agree with Dr. Bryce, whose able, eloquent, and liberal-minded Charge we commend to the attention of our readers.

INDIA AND THE BRITISH PARLIAMENT.

ONE of the last acts of the House of Commons before its prorogation was to affirm the principle of a local European army in India. General Peel, indeed, entered a sort of protest on the part of the Horse Guards against a vote which virtually set aside the report of the majority of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the organisation of the Indian army. The Commons, however, showed little desire to increase the patronage already in the hands of the military authorities at home, or to entrust the future safety of our Eastern Empire to those who have exhibited such carelessness and incompetency in the conduct of their own peculiar department. Power was, therefore, granted to the Secretary of State for India in Council to augment the permanent European force to a total of 30,000 men, and this, probably, will be the number hereafter maintained for exclusive service in the East. Unfortunately, this army, owing to Lord Canning's recent blunders, will have to be organised afresh, as if it had never existed. Of officers there is certainly an abundant supply for the present, but otherwise the regiments are mere skeletons. The first thing to be done must, therefore, be to enlist some 20,000 recruits, for in the existing state of affairs in Europe it would be most unwise and impolitic to encourage the transfer to the local corps of veteran soldiers from the Queen's regiments about to return to this country. Thus at a time when every man capable of bearing arms is wanted at home, and the Indian exchequer is on the verge of almost hopeless insolvency, the obstinacy, pedantry, and short-sightedness of Lord Canning and his advisers have created a necessity for the immediate expatriation of 20,000 young men and the expenditure of two millions sterling before those recruits can be marched as efficient soldiers into Agra, or Delhi, or any other up-country station.

The financial difficulty is even more serious than the military one, for the latter is, after all, of a temporary nature and caused by an act of stubborn stupidity. The deficiency of the income, however, to cover the exigencies of the State appears to be rapidly becoming a chronic and incurable disease. The wisdom of the Legislature is evidently all at fault. In a vague way it has been recommended that the expenditure should be reduced forthwith, as it is idle to look for any sufficient relief from an augmentation of taxes. An additional million, or even two, perchance, might be raised by an extreme exercise of ingenuity, but beyond this there is nothing to be hoped for from that source. Consequently, there remains no other alternative than a reduction of the outgoings. But, then, the obvious question arises, "How is that to be effected?" Mr. Vernon Smith—we beg pardon, Lord Lyveden—is of opinion that the salaries of Indian Civil Servants are excessively high, nor can he understand why an English magistrate should be paid more for his services in the Madras Presidency than in Ceylon, unless it be to enable him to indulge in those eastern luxuries about which so much has been written, and of which so little has ever been seen. Lord Ellenborough, indeed, denies that there is any such thing as luxury in the East, and insists that the Civil Service salaries will bear no reduction, except in a few of the highest offices. But who would compare the noble Earl with the late President of the Board of Control? It is true that his lordship himself once occupied that post with considerable credit and dignity; and equally true that he was once Governor-general of India, and in that capacity saw a good deal of the country and its administration. But what does that prove, except that he comes under the category of "old Indians"—men whose experience is supposed to disqualify them from forming large and enlightened views, such as an intuitive genius flashes into the brain of a Bright, a Vernon Smith, or an Ayrton? On one point, however, Lord Lyveden happened to make a sensible remark. He said that the time must inevitably arrive when Parliament would be called upon to extend the imperial guarantee to the Indian debt, and that, consequently, the wisest course would be to diminish the amount of our future responsibility by raising the present loan on the national credit. In fact, after all that has lately been said upon the subject in both Houses of the Legislature, the imperial guarantee has already been morally accorded, and the result is that India Stock is in greater request than ever.

During the debates that preceded the transfer of the Indian Government from the East India Company to the Crown, it was constantly asserted that great advantages would arise from the frequent discussion of Indian questions that might thenceforth be expected to come before Parliament. We look in vain for the fulfilment of those rhetorical predictions. What has Parliament hitherto done, or even attempted to do? What great principles have been enunciated, what new policy inaugurated, what knotty questions investigated even if unanswered? In truth, nothing whatever has been done beyond sanctioning two make-shift loans to the aggregate amount of twelve millions sterling on the nominal security of a bankrupt exchequer, and authorising the augmentation of a force that can hardly be said to exist. Parliament itself is ashamed of its shortcomings, and is half disposed to confess that India is an anomaly, and not to be treated as a European country. This tacit confession of ignorance is a hopeful sign, and augurs well for the future. In its first feeling of disappointment it naturally vents its irritation on the heads of others, and now an opinion begins to be entertained that the Council of India is unnecessarily large, and that it would be more effective if reduced to five or six heads of departments. Undoubtedly this is the wisest scheme, provided the Secretary of State were appointed for a certain term of years, invested with despotic power, and answerable only to Parliament. Despotism is the only system of Government suitable to oriental nations, and if beneficently administered is, perhaps, the best for all. In any case it is impossible that India can be governed through an agency liable to sudden and repeated changes, and fettered by the necessity of humouring the fancies of a political party.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A CRYING INJUSTICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

SIR,—The readiness with which you expose for redress every well-grounded grievance of the veteran soldier, who, but too often, is cast aside as an useless burthen during peace, a blessing won, too, by his services, satisfies me that you will not refuse a corner in your excellent journal to the following statement of a wrong about which as soon as known there can be but one opinion, viz., that it is a scandalous injustice, which the honour of the country demands should be instantly redressed:—

"A few years ago, in 1835–37, the India Directors passed resolutions wherein, after full, but too tardy reconsideration of their old retiring regulations of 1796, the injustice of determining, as those regulations did, the retiring pay of their old officers by the principle of regimental rank, so unfair in a seniority service like that of the late Company's army, was recognised. The Court, in consequence, rescinded, as far as that manifestly unfair principle was in question, these old regulations, and established others in their stead, fixing the retiring stipend or subsistence allowance of their veteran officers by the more equitable principle of length of actual service. Besides the unequal distribution of public requital which the old rules awarded, and which was assigned as the main reason for their revision, the failure of their officers to establish a retiring fund by means of their own contributions to supply the admitted insufficiency of provision in their old age which the Government allowance afforded, was stated to be a further motive for the enlarged measure, and in making it known to the army the Governor-general expressed his confident belief that the boon would be received as a convincing proof of the warm interest felt by the honourable Court in the welfare of their old officers."

Not a word was traceable in the Court's despatch announcing the new rules to the Indian Government, nor in the latter's General Order publishing the same to the army, that could be construed into an intention so opposed to the benevolent tenor of all the Court's past similar concessions, and to the general practice which, in such matters, uniformly governs the royal service, as that the regulations were to be exclusively prospective. The palpable injustice of so unfeeling a limitation, to say nothing of the irritation (from which, to be sure, the Court had nothing to fear,) it must create in the minds of those older officers whom it would have the effect of excepting from the advantages of the new pension regulations, many of whom would have been benefited by a retiring fund—had one been established—and who, moreover, had acquired irresistible claims on the liberality of their country by their sufferings and services in the field and elsewhere, which, though past, ought not, surely, on that account to be repudiated, forbade the supposition that such a limitation could be intended. A retrospective operation was, therefore, assumed; and, accordingly, those old officers who had, from damaged health, the consequence of severe suffering in the memorable campaigns of Lord Lake and the Goorkha war, retired on the publicly admitted insufficient provision of the old rules, and whose length of service entitled them to the enlarged provision of the new rules, claimed it as their just due. The claim was, however, rejected, the auditor or disbursing officer at the India treasury-office, on the occasion of the first demand of the enlarged rate of retiring pay being made, declaring that he was precluded from issuing the same, the enlarged rules not being expressly declared to carry retrospective effect, and from oversight, as must be believed.

What renders the injustice the more indefensible and severe is, that among the excluded claimants are men with families who are reduced in their old age to an income, viz., the miserable retiring pittance awarded by the old rules, admittedly insufficient to their respectable maintenance, putting that comfort which the Court thought so necessary and professed so great an anxiety to secure for their officers in their old age entirely out of the question, having had the misfortune to lose, after their retirement, the savings of their entire service in India through the calamitous bankruptcy of the Calcutta agency houses, which occurred in 1832 and following years.

Though it ought not to be necessary to say a word more by way of strengthening a claim which affords no room for even evasion, resting as it does on the irresistible ground of right and desert, I shall observe that its concession, from the advanced age of the men in whose behalf I am invoking the sympathy of the country, and the advocacy of their just cause in your liberal journal, would create but a very transitory drain and that of trifling amount, on the revenue of India; and, finally, that from their scant means they are utterly disabled from making the smallest provision, through life assurance or otherwise, for their families, more especially since those inadequate means have been declared in a spirit of niggardliness so opposed to the liberality of the country and the benevolent nature of the present Chancellor of the Exchequer, who, I hope, is a subscriber to your paper.

FIAT JUSTITIA.

P.S.—Lapse of time, which but too often deadens the sense of public as of private grati-

* As witness the two Royal Ordinances passed after the triumphant termination of the great war against the First Napoleon, extending the honours of the Bath to the junior grades of the army, and awarding compensation annuities for wounds and loss of limbs in action, both of which were made retrospective, with the just and liberal view of bringing all entitled officers of former wars then living within their operation.

tude, I am glad to find, is considered by the British Government to be no bar to the remedying of an injustice, as, in the statistics of the "Civil Contingencies," just published, which, by-the-by, honestly record how munificently the trustees of the national power and funds deal in the matters of salaries, outfits, compensations, and entertainments, by themselves and kindred, I perceive this curious and somewhat bewildering item of expenditure:—"Amount granted for distribution among the three surviving daughters of the late P. Shakerly, an American seaman, who was killed in an attack made by her (?) Majesty's ship Leopard on the United States frigate Chesapeake in 1807, £500."

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—August 10.
EUROPEAN TROOPS FOR INDIA.

On the order for considering the European Troops (India) Bill, as amended,

Sir C. Wood explained the particular reasons for introducing this Bill. He stated the limitations which had been imposed upon the East India Company as to the number of their European troops, which had been increased by Act of Parliament in 1853 to 24,000, but that number had been at one time exceeded under a doubt which this Bill would remove, legalising what had been done, and giving a margin for an increased force to the extent of 30,000. The opinions of the members of the Royal Commission differed as to the expediency of a local army in India; but he thought the weight of authority was in favour of a local force, of which he pointed out some of the advantages. The late Government had come to a decision that a local army should be maintained, and the present Government had arrived at the same conclusion. Referring to the discontent of the European troops in India, he observed he did not think they had any substantial grievance; but there were palliatives of their conduct, and he did not think it fair to treat them as wrongheaded or mutinous. The matter had been left to the decision of the Governor-general and Commander in Chief in India, and the men who wished it were to have their discharge and be sent home. He remarked that most of the malcontents were men who had recently arrived in India, and he considered it was a mistake to send out raw recruits there.

General PEEL regretted that this portion of so important a question should have been brought on at so late a period of the session, this Bill being in direct opposition to the report of the Royal Commission, that no local army should be maintained in India. He regarded the conduct of the European troops in a more serious light than Sir C. Wood, and he asked whether the Government had received any communication from Lord Clyde and General Mansfield respecting the mutiny. He was of opinion that the enlisting men in this country for India would weaken the resources of the recruiting market for the regular army and militia, and saw no reason, he said, why the foreign market might not be resorted to for India. He, however, objected to any increase of the local force, and believed that Sir C. Wood had adopted a purely Indian view of the case, which was nothing more nor less than a question of patronage.

Sir DE LACY EVANS, Mr. S. HERBERT, Colonel NORTH, Colonel DUNNE, Mr. AYRTON, Sir F. SMITH, Colonel SYKES, General UPTON, and Mr. VANSITTART continued the discussion.

The Bill was read a third time and passed.

HOUSE OF LORDS.—August 11.

EAST INDIA LOAN BILL.

On the motion for passing the East India Loan Bill through committee,

The Duke of ARGYLL made a statement on the present state of the Indian finances, similar to that made by Sir C. Wood in the House of Commons. One cause of pleasure, he observed, amid surrounding difficulties, was that the revenue of India had been increasing annually, and had not even decreased during the year of the mutiny.

He could not agree with those who, eager to reduce expenditure, advocated the dismemberment of India or the emancipation of the smaller Presidencies from the central control of Calcutta, nor did he think we should sufficiently meet the difficulty by reducing the salaries of the civil servants. The only source of reduction was in military expenditure, which could be the more readily effected as we had no longer any foes to contend with in India. By judicious reductions in the army, by disarming the people, and by forbidding them to cast artillery, he considered that the expenditure of India might be reduced to the point at which it stood before the mutiny.

Lord ELLENBOROUGH supported the Bill as being identical with one he had formerly himself proposed, and because he did not think the estimated revenue for the coming year would be realised. Deprecating strongly the system of guarantees as being to a great extent the cause of the financial embarrassments in India, he congratulated the Government on their manifest desire to apply a cure to the present evil by the appointment of Mr. Wilson as a kind of Chancellor of the Exchequer. The remedy for these evils did not consist in increasing taxation, but in diminishing expenses. He did not think that any reduction ought to be made in the salaries of the civil servants, as such a measure, by delaying retirements of the elder servants, would tend to throw the government of India into the hands of old instead of young men. In the native establishments and in the military expenditure the greatest reductions could be made, but at the present moment no steps, as far as he could judge, had been taken to produce this result. It was imperatively necessary for the maintenance of our position in India that an almost equal balance should exist between the European and native troops, but so far from this principle being observed, there were 270,000 native troops, including police, to only 120,000 Europeans. Here was the point where great reductions might be made, conducive to the safety of India and the benefit of the finances. He did not look gloomily on India, as he considered it the noblest empire ever acquired by man, and it was the duty of every Government to do all in its power consistent with the public interests to preserve it.

Lord LIVERPOOL could not separate the political from the financial condition of India. The deficiency of the Indian revenue had long struck him with alarm, and he had always attributed it to the existence of the double Government, which, although nominally abolished, still existed. The only means for bringing about a better state of things was by reducing the civil as well as the military expenditure, by reducing the numbers of Indian Councillors to six, and by imposing fresh taxes upon the natives of India. If these measures could be carried out he saw no reason for looking despondingly at the future of India.

The Bill was then passed through committee.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ACT AMENDMENT BILL.

EUROPEAN TROOPS (INDIA) BILL.

The Duke of ARGYLL moved the second reading of this Bill.

The Earl of ELLENBOROUGH alluded to the recent disaffection manifested by the European troops in India, and was understood to say that the Government should have given a full explanation of the circumstances to the men; for it was not only necessary that justice should be done, but that the men should also understand that they were dealt justly by.

After a few words from Lord WYNFORD, the Duke of ARGYLL, and the Earl of ELLENBOROUGH, the Bill was read a second time. On the following day it was read a third time and passed.

APPOINTMENTS.—MAURITIUS AND CEYLON.—Downing-street, Aug. 18.—The Queen has been pleased to appoint Capt. A. E. H. Anson, R.A., to be superintendent of police for the Island of Mauritius; Mr. W. P. Charsley to be principal civil medical officer for the Island of Ceylon; and H. Dickman, Esq., to be colonial surgeon at Kandy in the said island.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEATH OF SIR GEORGE STAUNTON.—We have to record the death of Sir George Thomas Staunton, which occurred on the 10th, at his town residence, No. 17, Devonshire-street, Portland-place. The deceased baronet was born at Milford-house, near Salisbury, in 1781, and succeeded his father, the first baronet, in 1810. He was educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, but does not appear from the University Calendar to have taken honours. After leaving college he was appointed chief supercargo for the East India Company, and was President of the Select Committee at Canton, and Commissioner of Embassy to Peking in 1816. In 1818 he was elected member for the borough of St. Michael's, which was extinguished by the Reform Bill. For St. Michael's he sat two years. In 1830 he was returned for Heytesbury, another borough abolished by the Reform Bill. In 1832 he was elected member for the Southern Division of Hampshire, which he unsuccessfully contested in 1835 and 1837. In March, 1838, he was returned for Portsmouth, and sat for that borough fourteen years, namely, until July, 1852, since which time he has not had a seat in Parliament. Sir George was the author of a translation of the Penal Code of China, and has written several works, which are held to be authorities on the subject, on our relations with that country. His father, the first baronet, was secretary to Lord Macartney, Governor of Madras, and received his title after the negotiation of the peace with Tippoo Sultan in 1784. He was subsequently Secretary of Legation during Lord Macartney's well-known embassy to China in 1792. With the death of Sir George Staunton the baronetcy becomes extinct.

INDIA (TERRITORIAL ACCOUNTS).—Accounts respecting the territorial revenues and disbursements of the Government of India for the year 1857-58 have been presented to Parliament. The total revenue receipts of all the Presidencies of India of the said year amounted to £31,706,776, and the total payments out of the income to £8,162,326, leaving £23,544,450 as the actual receipts into the Government treasury. The gross receipts were— from land revenue, £17,310,195; from customs, £2,148,834; from salt, £2,131,346; and from opium, £6,864,209. The remaining items are hardly worth notice. The total charges on the revenue in India and England amounted to £39,570,998, which, balanced against the gross receipts (£31,706,776), leaves an excess of expenditure, or a deficiency, of no less than £7,864,222. The estimated revenue for 1858-59 was £33,806,294, and the estimated charge in India and England £47,199,431, thus leaving an estimated deficiency for that year of £13,393,137. This is tantamount to a deficiency of more than £20,000,000 in two years. The charges defrayed in England on account of the Indian territory for 1857-58 was £4,492,470, and the estimated charge for 1858-59 was £6,051,566. The actual deficit on the accounts of all the territories and departments under the immediate control of the Government of India in 1857-58 was £11,610,734, and for the next year, 1858-59, it was estimated at £15,900,754.

EAST INDIA (UNCOVENANTED SERVANTS).—The following is a return of the number of native and European uncovenanted servants, respectively, in the service of the Indian Government who are in the receipt of two hundred and fifty rupees per month, and upwards, according to returns made up to the 1st of May, 1858:—viz., natives, 339; and Europeans (including Anglo-Indians), 849; making a total of 1,188.

CHARGES IN INDIA.—In the year 1857-58 the charges of the civil and political establishments of India amounted to the sum of £4,051,675; the judicial and police charges to £2,657,214; buildings, roads, and public works to £2,660,818; military charges to £15,963,094; the Indian navy and other marine charges to £1,171,706; Mint charges to £145,514; and the interest on the debt to £2,106,672. SOLDIERS AND THEIR WIVES.—Notice has been given from the India-house that ships are required for the conveyance of 4,691 troops to India; and also for emigration ships for the conveyance of females to the number of 7,000—it is understood the wives of soldiers serving in India, in accordance with the recent resolution of augmenting the number allowed to the troops in garrison. By this arrangement many feminine duties, now performed by the men, will be conducted by the proper department, while at the same time the comfort of the soldiers will be much increased.

ORDER OF THE BATH.—(War Office, Aug. 17).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to make and ordain a special statute of the most Honourable Order of the Bath, authorising the following appointment to the said order—to be an Extra Member of the Military Division of the Third Class or Companions, viz.: Lieut. col. Henry Wyde Norman, of the Bengal army.—Gazette, Aug. 19.

INDIAN RAILWAYS.—The grand total amount of capital raised by the various Indian railway companies and paid by them into the home and Indian treasuries in the years from 1848-49 to 1858-59 is set down at £23,250,480. The total amount of interest on capital received by all the companies from 1849-50 to 1858-59 was £2,739,453. I can take riding or other exercise without feeling that extreme lassitude and weariness afterwards. My general health is much improved. You have my best thanks. #### TEETH.

No. 9, LOWER GROSVENOR-STREET, GROSVENOR-SQUARE.

Mr. EPHRAIM MOSELY, Surgeon-Dentist, No. 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, sole Inventor and Patentee.

A new, original, and invaluable invention, consisting in the adaptation, with the most absolute perfection and success, of chemically prepared White and Gum-coloured India-rubber, as a lining to the ordinary gold or bone frame. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted in a few of their most prominent features.

All sharp edges are avoided; no springs, wires, or fastenings are required; a greatly increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity, hitherto wholly unattainable; and a fit, perfected with the most unerring accuracy, is secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose, or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums.

The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the chemically prepared India-rubber, and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may with thorough comfort be imbibed and retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being, at the same time, wholly provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

To be obtained only at 9, Lower Grosvenor-street, Grosvenor-square, London; 14, Gay-street, Bath; and 10, Eldon-square, Newcastle-on-Tyne.

THE ROYAL INSURANCE COMPANY,

Buildings, Liverpool.

CHAIRMAN IN LIVERPOOL.—CHARLES TURNER, Esq.
CHAIRMAN OF LONDON BOARD.—SAMUEL BAKER, Esq.

The Royal Insurance Company is one of the largest Fire Offices in the kingdom.

At the Annual Meeting of the 5th instant, the following highly satisfactory results were shown:—

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The most gratifying proof of the expansion of the business is exhibited in the one following fact—that the increase alone of the last three years exceeds the entire business of some of the existing, and of many of the recently defunct fire insurance companies of this kingdom.

The Premiums for the year 1858 being... £130,060
While the Premiums for the year 1855 are... 196,148
Showing an actual increase of... 66,088 or upwards of 50 per cent. in three years.

The recent returns of duty made by Government for this latter year (1858) again show the Royal as more than maintaining the ratio of its increase as stated in former years. Only one among the London Insurance Offices exhibits an advance to the extent of one-half the increase of the Company, while all the others respectively fall far short of the moiety of its advance.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.

The amount of new life premiums received this year is by far the largest received in any similar period since the commencement of the business, and must far exceed the average of amount received by the most successful offices in the kingdom. The number of policies issued in the year was 832, the sum assured £387,752. 6s. 8d., and the premium £12,354. 3s. 4d. These figures show a very rapid extension of business during the last ten years. Thus:—

No. of Policies.	Sum Assured.	New Premiums.
1848 ... 98 ...	£48,764 17 0 ...	£1,380 9 1 ...
1850 ... 190 ...	95,650 9 11 ...	2,627 4 7 ...
1852 ... 422 ...	181,504 10 6 ...	5,828 5 10 ...
1854 ... 408 ...	161,818 13 4 ...	4,694 16 0 ...
1856 ... 703 ...	297,560 16 8 ...	8,850 3 11 ...
1858 ... 832 ...	387,752 6 8 ...	12,354 3 4 ...

The remarkable increase in the business of the last four years is mainly consequent upon the large bonus declared in 1855, which amounted to no less than £2 per cent. per annum on the sums assured, and averaged 80 per cent. upon the premiums paid.

PERCY M. DOVE, Manager and Actuary.
JOHN B. JOHNSTON, Secretary to the London Board.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT.

—SCIENTIFIC RESEARCH.—Some few years only since the art of medicine was practised by few who had minds capable of observing facts from which to deduce in valuable results, one practitioner ascribes every ailment to the liver, another to the stomach, a third to the brain, and a fourth found the seat of every malady in the kidneys; but all agreed in prescribing mercury, though their diagnoses differed so widely. Under advancing science that poisonous drug has ceased to Holloway's preparations, which are disinterestedly recommended by the Faculty. The Ointment has been used with the happiest effects in our home and colonial hospitals. The mode of preparing Ointment and Pills retains the vegetable principles of the healing herbs.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT

from the Second Edition (page 188) of the Translation of the Pharmacopœia of the Royal College of Physicians of London, by Dr. G. F. Collier, published by Longman and Co.:—

"It is no small defect in this compilation (speaking of the Pharmacopœia) that we have no purgative mass but what contains aloes; yet we know that hemorrhoidal persons cannot bear aloes, except it be in the form of COCKLE'S PILLS, which chiefly consist of aloes, scammony, and colocynth, which, I think, are formed in a sort of compound extract, the acidity of which is obviated, I suspect, by an alkaline process, and by a fourth ingredient (unknown to me) of an aromatic tonic nature. I think no better and no worse of it for its being a patent medicine. I look at it as an article of commerce and domestic convenience, and do not hesitate to say it is the best made pill in the kingdom; a muscular purge, a mucous purge, and a hydragogue purge combined, and their effects properly controlled by a dirigent and corrigent. That it does not commonly produce hemorrhoids, like most aloetic pills, I attribute to its being thoroughly soluble, so that no undissolved particles adhere to the mucous membrane."

NEWBERRY'S COD LIVER OIL CAKES.

"We have examined a specimen of gingerbread made by Messrs. Newberry—each cake containing a teaspoonful of Cod Liver Oil. The gingerbread is extremely light and pleasant, the flavour of the oil being completely covered. This seems likely to prove a very useful mode of administering Cod Liver Oil to children, and to others who are nauseated by the offensive odour and flavour of the Oil as generally taken."

"Messrs. W. H. Allen and Co. have just brought out the first number of a monthly periodical, called THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW OF POLITICS, LITERATURE, AND SOCIAL SCIENCE. We confess that until we read this first number we had no very clear impression that we were in any need of any addition to our already heavily-laden monthly literature; but a careful examination of the contents of the work has satisfied us that its projectors are justified in the undertaking. If they cannot be said, in the slang of the book-market, to have supplied a want, there is little doubt that they will create an audience. The best brief notion we can give of the publication is to say that it promises to become to English readers what the Revue des deux Mondes is to French, with an indefinitely wider latitude of topics and freedom of opinion. The critical element predominates, but it admits of the essay in its pure form, and is sufficiently elastic in both departments to embrace every variety of subject of current or permanent interest. In politics it ranges with the progressive section of the Conservative party, which would preserve the constitution, by adapting it from time to time to the necessities of successive epochs. The soundness of its judgment on the question of Parliamentary Reform is displayed in the ablest and most thoroughly constitutional article that has yet appeared in any of our periodicals on the subject; an article which acquires additional value from the fact that it foreshadowed the whole scheme of the Government two days before the Reform Bill was brought forward. In social laws and morals, the object of the UNIVERSAL REVIEW will be to note the progress, and collect the results, of all movements tending towards the advancement or elucidation of those vague philosophical investigations which are clustered under the general head of social science. Good earnest is given of the resources at the command of the writers, and of the practical manner in which they are prepared to deal with them, in an excellent article on the 'Homeless Poor.' There are also capital papers upon 'Russia,' and 'Indian Finance;' and some admirable literary articles. This last department is pervaded by a spirit of independence, and a high scholarly tone which, we trust, 'custom' may not impair. Let us have at least one English periodical, written with integrity and good taste, to which we may confidently look for fearless and honest opinions. The UNIVERSAL REVIEW promises to realise these expectations, and we heartily wish it the success it deserves."

10. BOOKS ON OUR TABLE.

From THE PRESS, May 14, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW contains seven articles, which, some for one reason, some for another, merit the attention of the public. The article on Mr. Robertson derives virtue from the excellence of its subject, but is nicely written as well. 'Women—neither Nice nor Wise,' is a protest against the smoking-clubbed, shooting-galleried, red-trousered style of young lady, of whom it is very truly said that all their efforts for the emancipation of women are in reality intended for the enslavement of men. 'The Resources of India, and its Colonization,' has only one fault—it is greatly too short; and we confess if it had been extended over the space which 'The Philosophy of Fabulous Ages' now occupies, we should not have regretted the exchange. 'Michelet on Love' is a review of which it is difficult to determine the merit without having read with great attention the book of which it treats. The writer seems so entirely to agree with his author as to have abandoned any idea of criticising him in the literal sense of the word, so he gives us instead a very compact and clever abstract of his theory, expressed with great felicity, and enlivened by occasional touches of real humour. The writer of 'French Dramatists and English Adapters' took a good grasp of his subject, but laid it down again before he had squeezed it dry. His article contains a good deal, but might have contained more. For instance, he takes up some half-dozen hypotheses to account for the decline of the drama, turns them over, and leaves them, saying it is not his business to settle which is true. But we think this is just what his business was. The article is written in so agreeable a style, and evinces so much latent ability, that we regret more was not made of it. 'The Last of the Moguls,' though a little florid in diction, is well and strikingly executed. The article called 'How shall we vote?' after a summary of the policy of Lord Derby's Administration, proceeds to the delivery of a strong philippic against the Opposition leaders, and especially Lord John Russell. We observe this article has been reprinted in a separate form, and we trust may have contributed to blow away some of those delusions which the public mind has been carefully fed by the partisans of the 'Bedfords.' With the writer's remarks on Lord Palmerston we do not so fully agree. His lordship has performed great services, and what he may have done in a moment of irritation should not be too harshly criticised. The customary 'Session' and 'Books upon our Table,' conclude a very good number."

No. 4 (JUNE) CONTAINS:—

1. MAN AND HIS DWELLING PLACE. A REVIEWER'S PARCEL. THE STORY OF MICROSCOPICAL DISCOVERY.
2. AUSTRIANS AND SLAVONIANS.

3. RESOURCES OF INDIA.—COLONIZATION, PART II.
4. THE ROYAL ACADEMY AND THE WATER-COLOUR EXHIBITIONS.

5. POPULAR HISTORY.—KNIGHT'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND.
6. THE FRENCH IN ITALY—A NATIONAL AND TRADITIONAL POLICY.
7. BOOKS ON OUR TABLE.

From THE GLOBE, June 3, 1859.

"The UNIVERSAL REVIEW is, as usual, distinguished by discussing subjects of deeper and more permanent interest than are commonly entered on in monthly publications. The first article, on a book entitled 'Man and his Dwelling Place,' affords the writer an opportunity of professing his acceptance of the Idealistic theory of Bishop Berkeley, which, though supported by reasoning that it is admitted cannot be refuted, has hitherto made so little progress with mankind in general, chiefly on account of the misapprehension that has prevailed, or, perhaps, we may say, which does prevail, respecting it—a misapprehension that, doubtless, the writer is correct in ascribing to people picking up their notions of it at second hand, instead of resorting to the exposition of Berkeley himself. The article entitled 'A Reviewer's Parcel' is a lament over the degeneracy of the present age, especially made manifest by the vast number of new books published every month. Every one has a vague desire to go behind the scenes of a theatre, and by admitting, or pretending to admit, the public behind the scenes of reviewing, the writer of the article in question has produced a taking and readable paper, with which those who know little or nothing about the subject of which it treats will probably be best pleased. 'The Story of Microscopical Discovery' is an interesting article in which the progress of microscopical science is traced from its commencement to now. 'The Resources of India and its Colonization,' an article the first part of which appeared last month, is continued in the present number by a writer who has evidently devoted to the subject considerable care, pains, and research. An article on the picture exhibitions, a political article entitled 'The French in Italy,' 'Austria and the Slavonians,' with other papers, fill up the number."

7. PARTIES, NATURAL AND ARTIFICIAL.
8. LOUIS NAPOLEON—PRINCE AND EMPEROR.
9. THE SESSION.

From THE ILLUSTRATED TIMES, July 9, 1859.

"The new periodical, THE UNIVERSAL REVIEW, fully maintains its excellent start, and may be regarded as one of the cleverest exponents of sound, sensible, unbiassed views among the periodical press. Nothing can be fairer than the spirit pervading two of the articles of the new number, the one on the Divorce Court, the other (in the shape of a review of a bad novel, 'Out of the Depths') on the Delicate Question; though, while giving the writer of the first-named pages every credit for sincerity, we deny the truth of his denunciation of a measure which undoubtedly has given the means of relief to scores of persons weighed down and lost here and hereafter by their tie to a worthless person. As regards the second article, every man of sense must go hand in hand with the reviewer, more especially in that portion of his paper where he deprecates the publication of such books as useless and demoralising. Other very readable essays are—a review of 'What will he do with it?' in which Bulwer is very honestly, and withal very favourably, judged; a pleasant paper on 'Charles James Fox;' an erudite dissertation on Mr. Norris's 'Erudite Book,' 'The Ancient Cornish Drama;' and three political articles, the best written of which is devoted to Louis Napoleon, and closes in the following words—'He said of himself, Je suis citoyen avant d'être Bonaparte. He might more truly have said that he was a political fanatic rather than a great prince; that his genius was a monomania; that his idea of internal order is that of a wolf who would muzzle the dog, and that his faith in foreign powers is that of a burglar in possession of a ticket-of-leave who surveys at his leisure his neighbour's premises, and chooses his own time to break in and seize the spoils.'"

PESHAWUR, PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE.

When we first took possession of Peshawur in the year 1849, the prevalence of autumnal fever in the valley was well known, as it had long been found by the Sikh garrison most unhealthy in the autumn, while the inhabitants of the valley suffered from the disease nearly as much as the Sikhs themselves. On this account Sir Henry Lawrence strongly opposed the occupation of Peshawur by a large European force, proposing that it should be held by an irregular brigade of the three arms, as Kohat, Bunnoo, and other frontier stations have since been. The late Sir Charles Napier, then commander-in-chief, insisted that if we intended to hold the Peshawur Valley, the defence of this important frontier post could not be intrusted to natives, but must be held, if held at all, by a strong European force—and the present large cantonment was accordingly laid out. The force at Peshawur then consisted of two troops and two batteries of artillery (twenty-four guns), with three or four reserve companies, two corps of European infantry, one corps of native regular cavalry, five regiments of native infantry, and two of irregular cavalry, or in round numbers a total of 3,000 Europeans and 7,000 natives; and this strength was subsequently increased by a regiment of European infantry, a corps of native infantry, and an irregular cavalry regiment, stationed at the new station of Nowshaira, about midway between Peshawur and Attock.

It was at first imagined that the Nowshaira cantonment would be more healthy than Peshawur, but the result has disappointed expectation. The site was so badly selected, that parts of the cantonment were twice overflowed and destroyed, once by a flood from the hills, and once by a rise of the Cabul river; until in August, 1858, the whole cantonment was submerged, and with the exception of the Pucka Government-buildings, which withstood the flood, entirely destroyed by the back water of the Indus. Another catastrophe of the same kind is now again expected, and though the barracks are occupied by the officers and men of the 98th regiment, they are ordered to hold themselves in readiness to leave them at once, on any signs of the coming flood appearing, tents, &c., being stored in readiness on the sand hills beyond the parade ground. The Nowshaira cantonment was a mistake from the beginning, it serves no useful purpose, and the sooner it is abandoned the better.

The determination of Sir Charles Napier and Government to have a large European force stationed at Peshawur was, under Providence, the means of saving our Indian Empire in the great outbreak of 1857, as the Europeans kept the border tribes in check, and enabled us to use as allies those who would otherwise have been our most determined enemies. It is, moreover, but reasonable to suppose that the Punjab Irregular force, a great proportion of which were natives of Hindoostan, would not have stood so true to us as they did, had it not been for the presence of this strong European force on the frontier.

It is believed that Sir John Lawrence left this country with the determination of advocating at home the cession of our Trans-Indus territory to Dost Mahomed Khan. His reasons are chiefly financial, and founded on the great expense of maintaining this large frontier force at Peshawur. Sir John's proposal is said to be to make the Indus our frontier, but it would appear that the line of hills between this and Cabul, which can only be crossed by certain passes, which might be easily defended, is a far better frontier than the line of the Indus, which can be crossed at any point, while the expense of the frontier force is not fairly attributable to Peshawur, as a large force would always have to be kept up on the frontier, be it where it may. In the present state of the political horizon, the cession of our Trans-Indus territory to the Afghan would be an act little short of madness, as Russian gold would soon purchase it of him, who though now our professed friend and ally, has never either forgotten or forgiven his deposition by us in favour of Shah Soojah, and would only be too glad of an opportunity of being revenged on us by any means that might present themselves. With the Peshawur Valley and the Derajat in their possession as a base of operations, and Dost Mahomed as an ally, the Russians would have an advantage they never can possess as long as we can keep the line of hills as our frontier.

After the example of their fidelity given by our old native army in 1857, the wildest enthusiast in the cause of Pandiyism would never surely for a moment advocate the holding our frontier with a native army. We require a strong European force, for so long as the Indus remains unbridged, or unspanned, it would be most imprudent to leave a small European garrison to hold Peshawur—where it would be quite isolated from its supports. Even the present fine European force is still deficient in one most essential arm, European cavalry, for without cavalry artillery is inefficient, and we have no European cavalry in Peshawur. The present European force, consisting of one troop and two batteries of artillery (eighteen guns), and two corps of European infantry, (a third being now stationed at Nowshaira) requires only the addition of a corps of European cavalry to render it complete in every respect and equal to every emergency.

If, then, it be admitted that a large European force must, for the present, at least, be maintained at Peshawur, it surely becomes an object of the greatest importance to keep them as healthy and effective as possible. To effect this most desirable end three things are chiefly requisite, namely, a larger amount of barrack accommodation, to prevent crowding, which is one great cause of sickness; a greater attention to sanitary arrangements, which would beneficially affect the health of the whole force; and the establishment of a sanatorium at an easy distance from Peshawur, and beyond the influence of the autumnal fever, where the sick men of the force might be sent for change of air, as the Peshawur fever, though very weakening and prostrating in its effects, yields readily to a timely change of climate.

The barrack accommodation at Peshawur has been much improved of late years, and fine pukka barracks have been substituted for the mud hovels of yore. But ever since the outbreak the works have been at a dead standstill, while more than a dozen barracks which only require roofing are, with a mistaken and false economy, left unfinished. And as both the European corps are now at their full strength the men are much crowded, and increased sickness is the result. Lakhs of rupees have been spent on these unfinished buildings, and now, when a lakh more perhaps would finish the whole of them, the work is stopped, and the Europeans sicken and die for want of them.

Some improvements have lately been made in the sanitary arrangements, but much still remains to be done. The unchecked irrigation which is allowed in the cantonment itself is one great cause of sickness, and it is strange that when the sanitary committee, some years ago, recommended that no crops should be irrigated within one mile of the cantonment, they omitted to notice the daily irrigation carried on under their noses. So long as the canal which passes through the cantonment exists in its present state, there will be no preventing this, as each gardener can now flood his master's garden from the stream as often as he pleases, the supply of water being unlimited. Sixty public wells, the average cost of which would certainly not exceed Rs. 2,500 each, or Rs. 150,000 for the whole, would be ample for the cantonment, and would give about five wells to every native, and ten to every European corps.

As regards a sanatorium for the European troops, a site was some five years ago proposed by Major Coke, then Deputy Commissioner of Kohat, and highly approved of by General, then Brigadier, Cotton commanding, and several engineers and medical officers. It is situated in the Khuttuk Hills, at a place called Chirat, and is in every respect admirably adapted to the purpose. The Hill chosen is near the Meer Katan pass, and is from 4,000 to 5,000 feet above the level of the sea; it is well beyond the influence of the autumnal fever, while it is also free from the heavy rains which prevail in hill stations at greater altitudes.

The proposed site is only twenty-eight miles from Peshawur, and could, therefore, be easily reached in one night by the invalids requiring change of air, and when they had sufficiently benefited by their stay, they could in one night return to their duty. The whole of the road to it, and the proposed sanatorium itself, lies in our territory, the nearest tribe of Afreedies being eight or ten miles distant. But these men are in a great measure dependent for their livelihood on their trade in firewood, charcoal, and lime with the cantonment and city of Peshawur, and a stoppage of this trade is the severest punishment which can befall them. This sanatorium once established, the great objection to Peshawur as a cantonment for European troops would be at once removed, and the contemplated abandonment of the cantonment, which has already cost Government some fifty lakhs of rupees, or half a million of money, need be contemplated no longer.

At some future date, when the Indus shall have been spanned and a railway constructed to Peshawur, this brigade might be located south of the Indus, but not till then. In the present state of affairs it would never do to cede Peshawur to the Dost, who might betray us to the Russians, while the people of the Valley, who only like us for the money spent among them, and prefer our rule only slightly to the Sikh tyranny which preceded it, would gladly join any new comer against us Affghans or the Russians, or both; our only safety is in holding the passes.—Friend of India.

RELEASE OF THE EX-KING OF OUDE.

The following letter has been addressed by the Governor-general to his ex-Majesty of Oude.

TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING OF OUDE.

SIR,—In some of the letters which during the past two years I have had the honour to receive from your Majesty, request has been made by your Majesty for your release from Fort William.

It would have been very agreeable to me to comply with this request long ago; but the condition of Hindostan, and, especially, of the province of Oude, has made it impossible.

Your Majesty may not be fully aware of the use which has been made of your name in fomenting disaffection and treason; but you are perhaps informed of the fact that, for more than fifteen months, one of the most active enemies of the State has been the Begum Hazrat Mahal, who in assuming in her own person and in that of your Majesty's son, Brijis Kadr, to represent your Majesty's house, has supported this pretension by measures of the bitterest hostility to the British Government.

Nevertheless, when by the advance of the Commander in Chief's army, the Begum and her partisans had been driven from British territory to become fugitives in Nepal, I caused it to be intimated to her that upon surrendering to the Government she would receive all the consideration which is due to her as a woman and a member of a royal house. She was told that political power she should never have, but that by prompt submission she would secure a generous treatment and an honourable position for the rest of her life.

Unwise and influenced by evil advisers the Begum has not availed herself of this offer. I regret that it has been so, not only for your Majesty's sake, but also for the sake of many who have been misled into following her hopeless cause, and who, had she accepted the offer, might long ere this have returned to their homes in peace and security.

But the Begum and those about her are now powerless against the British Government, and I am unwilling that your Majesty should suffer longer restraint on account of their impotent enmity.

Your Majesty is free to leave Fort William whensoever it may please you to do so.

All the members of your Majesty's suite are likewise free to leave Fort William, but as regards some of these persons certain conditions of their liberation will be communicated to them.

I desire to acknowledge the courtesy which has marked your Majesty's communications to myself, and (Signed) I have, &c., CANNING.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.—We feel great pleasure in being able to announce that Lieut.-colonel Cavenagh is to be Governor of the Straits Settlements. This appointment reflects the highest credit on Lord Canning, and will be hailed with pleasure by all classes of the community. It is a suitable recognition of most valuable services rendered by a most meritorious officer; will give the Straits Settlements an able governor, and will be most gratifying to the European public of this country, with whom Lieut.-colonel Cavenagh has been, especially since the breaking out of the rebellion, deservedly popular. The lieut.-colonel's services in the field are on record, and need no recapitulation. The services to which we would especially allude were those rendered by him during the worst portion of 1837. Of the town major's doings during that period, little has been said, but we speak advisedly when we say that if Calcutta escaped the horrors of sepoy and Mahomedan revolt, it is indebted in no slight degree for that escape to the exertions of the officer who has been chosen to succeed Mr. Blundell in the government of the Straits Settlements. In those days more than one plot was set on foot to give Fort William a rebel garrison. Fortunately, however, the town major was an officer who understood the native character thoroughly, an adept in the Oriental languages, and was as likely as any man in India to ferret out concealed or lurking danger, and to render its plotters powerless for mischief. Thus, through information hunted out by this officer, was more than one plot hatching in the very heart of Calcutta and at Garden-reach, brought to the notice of Government, and the plotters safely deposited in durance in Fort William, where some of them—we do not allude to the King of Oude—still remain. During these critical times it was—as those who served in the volunteers must have known—the custom of Lieut.-colonel Cavenagh to nightly patrol the city—a degree of vigilance which rendered a surprise in the shape of a sudden irruption impossible. The services rendered by the lieut.-colonel during this period alone, were such as to entitle him to high reward, and if he had no other claims, they should have secured him the governorship to which he has been nominated, or equally good promotion. Apart from all this, however, the appointment is one highly to be commended on entirely different grounds. England is at peace at present, but none can say how long she will be permitted to remain so. Should war be declared against France, or against any other maritime power, Singapore would be likely to be troubled with a hostile visit by the enemy's cruisers. Under these circumstances, it becomes imperatively necessary that Singapore should have a military governor, and the appointment of one reflects credit on Lord Canning's foresight. As to the Singaporeans themselves, Lieut.-colonel Cavenagh is just one of those men likely to become popular among them. Clear-minded, active, determined, without an atom of red-tapeism about him, and known in private life as an example of conscientiousness, he seems to us the very model of a governor for a British settlement like Singapore in times such as the present.—Calcutta Phoenix.

THE REV. A. F. LACROIX, of the London Missionary Society, Calcutta, died on Friday, the 8th July. He was one of the oldest missionaries in India, having served his Master thirty-eight years. His great work was evangelising, and there are few streets in Calcutta or districts in Bengal where his voice has not been often heard. His thorough knowledge of Bengali, his frank and persuasive manner, and his genuine natural eloquence, were attractive to native audiences. No one was so universally beloved and esteemed by all classes of the Christian community, in which he lived to see so many changes. He has left no literary work behind him, but it will be long ere his name is forgotten. He was buried on Saturday, in the presence of a crowd of natives and Europeans, variously estimated at from 700 to 1,000. The bishop and clergy of all denominations in Calcutta were present. So pass away the old men, and their experience with them.

COLONEL FILOSE AT MORAR.—A correspondent of the Bombay Standard gives an account of the burial of the Christian residents at Morar who were massacred by Sindiah's rebel soldiery, on the night of the 15th June, 1837. The Maharajah and Col. Filose sent Byro Sing, the Kotwal of Gwalior, with two followers in disguise to the place, and in the course of a week they interred the bodies of eighteen. When the rebels evacuated Morar, Colonel Filose took steps, at the expense of the Maharajah, to remove the bodies to puckah graves in the Christian burial ground. This was done with the assistance of some native Christians, and in spite of the fanatic Mussulmans still in the place. The Government presented Colonel Filose with Rs. 1,000, which he distributed among these Christians. They have farther promised the colonel a gold medal, to commemorate the act.

THE LATE MR. LONGDEN.—The Friend of India has been requested to state that the depression under which the late Mr. Longden, of the Secundra press, laboured, and which led to his lamented end, was without any fixed object. He had an indistinct dread of some impending calamity, which made trifles seem overwhelming burdens. Statements in some of the journals as to the unsettled state of his affairs are quite incorrect. The arrears of work he has left are very few and unimportant, and his private affairs were in a most satisfactory state. His brain and energies were alike overtasked. He was buried with every mark of respect by the magistrate and residents of Futtehpore.

A DESTRUCTIVE GALE.—The gale in the Bay of Bengal during the third week in June was one of the most disastrous on record. The Calcutta papers are filled with accounts of the loss and damage to shipping. The steamers Fire Queen and Baltic had to put in to ports on the coast, the General Godwin, Tubal Cain, Bushire Merchant, and Sardinian ship Luciana Manara, W. Thomas Lewis, and Moses Wheeler, were much injured. The Blenheim, laden with rice, from Akyab to London, foundered on the 17th June sixty miles west of the island of Ramree; fourteen men were lost. The Lady Rawlinson, with teak from Rangoon to Calcutta, capsized ninety miles south-west of the Rangoon light-ship; twenty-two men who put off in a boat have not since been heard of, but the others were saved. The gale lasted from the 12th to the 17th June.

MINING ADVENTURE.—The Government advertise for lease, on such reasonable terms as may be agreed on, some limestone tracts at the southern base of the Cossiah hills and the coal mines at Cherrapoonjee and Byrung Poonjee. Were a large mercantile firm to take lease of these mineral tracts, and at the same time to establish regular communication with them and the whole of Assam by means of river steamers, the speculation would be most profitable.

A CURIOUS ACTION FOR TROVER has been brought before the first judge of the Calcutta Small Cause Court. James Macgrath, a private soldier, came out to India with his regiment in the Undaunted. He was ordered by his officer to cook for the men, and told he would be entitled to the slush. He did so, and accumulated his perquisite in eleven casks during the voyage. On reaching Calcutta the captain of the ship refused to allow him to remove the casks, as he himself had supplied stores for the troops, and according to his agreement with the authorities the residue was his property. The soldier claimed Rs. 110 as the value of the casks. As the captain did not prevent him from saving the slush, as the chief officer had given him permission to store it in the hold, and as he did not think slush could be treated as surplus stores, the judge decided that the plaintiff was entitled to it. The captain offered to let him have it, but as Macgrath preferred its value, he threatened an action to recover its freight.

THE CALCUTTA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE have drawn up a petition to the House of Commons, to be signed by the inhabitants of Calcutta, on the state of the finances, and the position of Europeans generally in India. The petition asks for the closing of all Indian loans, a guarantee for the Indian debt, the appointment of a commission to inquire into financial reform and retrenchment, into the development of the resources of the country, into the extension of a freehold tenure, the improvement of the fiscal system, the new tariff and taxation, into the present legislative council and the admission of outsiders as in Ceylon, and the question of centralisation.

PREACHING IN JAILS.—The official correspondence between the Government of India and of the Punjab on the subject of missionary preaching in jails has been published. The question was raised by the American missionaries at Sealkote, who applied for permission to preach in and visit the jail there. They cited the precedent of the jails of Lahore and Goojanwallah. Sir John Lawrence thought the exclusion of missionaries from jails would be an act of disability and not of neutrality; the prisoners should not be "exempted" any more than free natives from liability to hear the gospel. Lord Canning cannot concur. If a man is free, he hears the preacher only when he pleases. If, being in jail, he wishes to hear him, there can be no objection. But prisoners are not free agents even in the matter of listening. To allow preaching in jails would be to turn the machinery of justice and civil government to religious purposes. We fear the Government of India is right. Nothing in or about a jail is voluntary. To allow missionaries to visit Christian prisoners, and those who express a desire to see them, is sufficient.—In the same correspondence, the Governor-general rebukes the writers—that is Sir John Lawrence, Mr. Macleod, Mr. Thornton and Mr. Cust, for "maintaining views on this most important and delicate subject so directly opposed to the strong and lately reiterated commands of her Majesty's Government." He desires "that the practice of original remarks, and raising and prolonging discussions on subjects of general policy, a practice which has been of late indulged in, by subordinate executive officers in some parts of India, and which has been too easily tolerated by the local administration, may be entirely discouraged and repressed." Everybody except the Governor-general is to be stupid.

NAGPORE.—A correspondent draws our attention to the state of Nagpore in this the sixth year of our administration of the province. No establishments are fixed, there is no system of working laid down, there is no police worth the name, there are no roads but what are impassable at all seasons, there are no jails, no cutcherries either at the Sudder station or in the Mofussil. "There is nothing that ought to be and plenty that ought not." The really hard-working heads of districts and departments are discouraged, for no report is made, no notice taken of their efforts.

EDUCATIONAL EXAMINATIONS.—We see from the Calcutta papers, the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal insists on the educational inspectors of South Bengal and Behar at once passing an examination in the vernaculars. Mr. Halliday's order was merely that no inspector should be promoted until he has done so.

A PLEASANT PROSPECT FOR COLONISTS.—A correspondent of the Englishman gives an account of the plundering of his house on the Goruckpore frontier, by fifty Rajpoot sepoys. He complains that the disarming operations in Oude have been carried out so as to deprive the zemindars of all means of resisting attack. The rebels carry them off and keep them in the hills until they are ransomed by their friends. The Oude frontier is well protected by the Sikh and Oude police, supported by a queen's regiment, but from the Gunduk to the Coosy all seems exposed.

"MESS" MEMORANDUM.—The following extract from the section "Messcs" of the forthcoming edition of the General Regulations of the Army is published for general information:—"An officer appointed to do duty with another regiment is to be an honorary member of its mess, and is to pay the monthly subscription of his rank to that mess."

BLOOD-MONEY TO CIVILIANS.—Lord Stanley has ruled that officers and men enrolled as volunteers and having a military organisation, shall enjoy the same privileges in regard to compensation for wounds as corresponding grades in the regular service. Officers in the civil service when wounded in action will receive special compensation, those of the uncovenanted service in proportion to their salaries, Rs. 500 a month ranking as equivalent to a captain; and persons in neither the civil nor military service according to their station in life.

THE NEW STAMP LAW.—The most important proceeding of the Legislative Council on Saturday, the 9th July, was the introduction of the new stamp law, whereby means are to be taken very greatly to increase the revenue derived from stamps, the duty at present levied being in some cases much increased, and a duty being now, for the first time, imposed in many cases where hitherto none has been levied. The portion of the bill which will most constantly affect the public in general, is perhaps that which requires all receipts and drafts payable to the bearer on demand to have one anna stamps. The penny-stamp duty levied on such documents in England is said to produce more than thirty-seven lakhs, and it is hoped that the anna stamp duty to be imposed on them in India, will also be very productive. Bank notes, too, are to bear a stamp equal to five per cent. on the amount of the note. And bills of exchange, inland as well as foreign, are henceforth to contribute their mite towards paying the expenses of the late rebellion. These really are very hard times in which to find oneself a resident in India. The cost of living is already in other respects nearly double what it used to be. House-rent, food, and servants' wages are all exorbitant. And now we have new taxes every now and then imposed upon us,—taxes from which those who lived here in the palmier days, which are gone never to return, were wholly free. However, we need not grumble, for taxation is inevitable, and will be steadily increased for years to come, so we may as well make up our minds to it.—Hurkaru.

THE RIVER GOGRA.—The Lucknow Herald gives some information about the Gogra, on which a steamer and flat for public use has been sanctioned by Government. The river is never less than six feet deep throughout its navigable course. It drains the finest indigo and sugar districts in India, as it traverses the entire extent of the province of Oude for 300 miles. In case of war with Nepal, stores could be sent up direct from Calcutta, entering the river at Revelgunge on the Ganges, to Bangala or even to Tuktkhana, within twenty miles of the Nepalese capital. The traffic on the Gogra previous to the rebellion was 100,000 tons per annum. Like all the Indian rivers, it offers tempting returns to a navigation company.

D'ORGONI AGAIN.—A correspondent of the Rangoon Times mentions the arrival of the steamer Alon Prah, with D'Orgoni and his party at the capital, who were graciously received by the king. The same correspondent states that the Alon Prah does not belong to a private mercantile company, but is the private property of Prince Eugene Napoleon.

THE NEW CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE came into operation on the 1st July, in all the Civil Courts in Bengal not established by Royal Charter. It has effect only in the regulation provinces, except where it is specially extended to other districts by the Governor-general in Council, or the Lieutenant-governor. The code is not to take effect in Madras and Bombay until the 1st of January next, unless the local Governments should see fit to order otherwise.

AKYAB, June 27.—Information reached the station a few days ago of the loss of two vessels, the Tulloch Castle and the Blenheim. The former, according to the account furnished by the captain, was driven into a paddy field, in Combermere Bay, near Khyouk Phyo, during the late storm. On the receipt of this disastrous intelligence, the steamer Nemesis was forthwith despatched by the commissioner to afford her such assistance as she could. It was found that the ship had twelve feet of water in her hold, and was laden with Moulmein teak timber, with which she was proceeding to Calcutta, when she was overtaken by the storm. The Nemesis brought in seventeen of the crew, of whom all were saved; and also such appurtenances, &c., of the ship as she could conveniently bring away. The Blenheim is a total wreck. She left this with a full cargo of rice a few days previous to the occurrence of the storm. The captain and one of the officers, together with three or four sailors, were drowned while endeavouring to reach the shore in a boat, in the vicinity of Combermere Bay also. She foundered, and a very small portion of the crew has been saved. No accounts have yet reached the station regarding the fate of the Meridien and Robena, which left the harbour two or three days after the Blenheim.

ST. CECILIA IN CALCUTTA.—The performance of Mendelssohn's oratorio of St. Paul by the Sacred Harmonic Society in the Calcutta town hall on Friday evening, the 8th July, seems to have been a success. The amateurs have improved since their first appearance. The hall was crowded. The applause given, and the arrangements for the supply of refreshments, however, do not seem to have been in keeping with the performance of sacred music.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, July 16).—The late arrivals and the continued unfavourable accounts from the Upper Provinces have been the cause of buyers holding back. The accounts lately received from Furruckabad and Mirzapore report a fall of about four annas on all descriptions of Grey Cottons. The Company marks Grey Shirtings, which had been formerly selling in the Upper Provinces at Rs 8-12 to 9, have now fallen to Rs 7-4. Sales of all Grey Goods in our market are impracticable, unless at reduced prices. Bleached Cottons are in limited request, and confined to local requirement. Woolen Twist is dull of sale, with rather heavy arrivals, prices of several counts are two to three pie lower. Chintzes and Prints are without improvement, and in limited request. Turkey Red Cottons in very moderate request. Woolens still in limited request, but are expected soon to improve. Metals as dull as before in the absence of buyers.

EXPORTS (Calcutta, July 16).—The produce market since last mail has exhibited the same dullness as before. Although supplies are daily arriving, there is no decided decline in price. Holders show no desire to make any concession, as the stocks in their hands are not considerable, and they do not seem pressed for funds. Raw Silk has been dealt in rather more freely than before, but without any change in price. Corahs have been without much disposition for purchase, although they are offered at a reduction in price. Sugar has been in very limited operation, though dealers seem willing to submit to a reduction in price. Saltpetre has been less inquired for. Rice has been in fair demand for Australia, Mauritius, and Bourbon, but in limited operation for Europe. Lineds has been freely imported, and in increased operation. Rape has fallen in demand and price. Jute is without inquiry, and giving way in price. Safflower.—Almost all available in the market has been purchased.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE SHANAR WOMEN.—The Madras Spectator objects to the seemingly fair concession of the Rajah of Travancore with respect to the dress of the Shanar women as a "delusion, a mockery, and a snare." In 1812, when Colonel Munrow was British resident at Travancore, the Raneé Parvatee permitted all the Christian Shanars to wear the upper cloth. In 1829, when Colonel Morrison was resident, she restricted them to the use of the kupporam or jacket worn by the Moplah women, but this was generally disregarded, and many besides Christian Shanars began to wear the upper cloth, some purchasing the right and others obtaining it as a favour. Practically, before the Queen's proclamation, all wore the upper cloth. Since then, even with the present concession, the Shanar women are in a worse position. They are forbidden to wear their national costume; and can appear in public only as harlots or Feringhees.

THE TRAVANCORE PROCLAMATION.—A writer in the Madras Times comments on the so-called concession of the Rajah of Travancore in his proclamation on the dress of the Shanars. They alone are to be allowed to wear the upper cloth. They number 84,000, while the Eriuvars, Pallars, Pariars, and Pulliars, who are to be subject to the same barbarous restrictions as before, amount to 316,000. The liberty given to the Shanars to dress as they please, but not to imitate the higher castes, they cannot avail themselves of, as these castes wear the cloth in so many different ways. The ambiguity of the promised proclamation will afford the officials of the Sircar new grounds for persecution.

NEW AMBULANCE CARRIAGES.—The Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Madras recently inspected new ambulance carriages for the use of hospitals. The light two-wheeled cart for bullocks, capable of accommodating four men sitting or two reclining, exclusive of the driver, was approved of for service in the field. The large wagon, able to hold ten men with ease in a sitting posture, or three sitting and three reclining, was thought well adapted to follow an army along its great lines of communication.

SHRAYANNA BELLAGOLLA.—A correspondent of the Bangalore Herald describes Shrayanna Bellagolla, the seat of the Jan worship in Mysore. It is a steep mountain, 1,000 feet above the level of the plain. On the top is a large temple, from the court yard of which rises a statue of a man seventy feet high, called the Tirtankara. It consists of a solid piece of granite, and seems to have been cut out of the living rock. It is surrounded by forty-three minor deities, carved out of granite, hornblende, and white marble. A similar statue, that of Gautama Swami, forty-five feet high, of black stone, and with an Egyptian expression of countenance, stands beside the famous Jain temples, thirty miles N. E. from Mangalore.

A HINT TO THE SALOON OMNIBUS COMPANY.—The railway authorities in Madras advertise that they will give a prize of Rs. 100 for the best design of an omnibus, to be an adaptation of the English and French vehicle, and to combine ventilation, lightness, elegance, durability, cheapness, and protection from the sun. The omnibus is to be used, we presume, between the station, which is out of town, and the European part of Madras. When the termini of the Eastern Bengal and Mutlah railways are completed and in use at Sealdah, something of the kind will be required in Calcutta, but its projectors will probably be a little more liberal. The company might as well have offered a premium in pice.

GRAIN RIOTS.—There have been two grain riots in the south, one at Quilon, the other at Cochin, sepoy of the 45th M. N. I. being concerned on both occasions. The riot at Cochin appears to have been a trifling affair, so far as plundering was concerned, but it created great excitement among the native population for several days. Gen. Cullen, the resident at Travancore, gives the following account of the riot at Quilon:—

"I regret to have to report that considerable excitement has existed for the last fortnight amongst the men and families of her Majesty's 45th Regiment of Native Infantry at this station, owing to the scarcity and high price of rice, and that a few men on the 25th, but a large number on Sunday, the 26th ult., at eleven in the forenoon, conducted themselves with much violence in the bazaars, forcing open a number of shops and committing considerable depredations, and in which they seem to have been joined and encouraged by some of the town's people. A number of these men were subsequently apprehended, though not without resistance, by a party from the regimental guards under Lieut. Griffith, and a court of enquiry was afterwards held, the result of which has, I presume, been communicated to the Major-general commanding the division. It did not appear that any of the sepoys in confinement were distinctly identified as engaged in the act of plundering, although there was the strongest presumption against them, and I have since learnt that stolen property has been discovered in possession of some of the men. The scarcity and high price have prevailed more or less since the end of April, but more particularly since the middle of last month; the Dewan, however, who has come over from Travendrum, has brought considerable supplies with him, and is collecting also from the northern districts, and the bazaar is already well provided, though the prices still continue high. The extent and value of property plundered have, I believe, been greatly exaggerated, but there is much reason to apprehend that it may have amounted to Rs. 7,000 or 8,000 in money and goods."

The order in Council on this letter is as follows :—“ The Governor in Council has received this intelligence with great regret and disapprobation ; and, did he not believe that the persons who committed this outrage against the public peace and welfare, were acting in some degree under mistaken impressions, he should cause an urgent application to be made to the Travancore Government for their exemplary punishment. The resident will explain to the Raja's government the necessity for giving early and full compensation to the dealers who have suffered by the plunder of their stores ; and he will say that if it should be proved that any of the soldiers or servants of her Majesty's Government took part in this disgraceful riot, the Governor in Council will pay a proper share of the compensation. The resident will also move the Raja's Government to make it generally known that any repetition at Quilon or elsewhere of the grave offence which has been committed, will be followed by the punishment of the offenders, and that a fine will be levied upon the place in order to provide the means of compensating the injured persons. It should also be explained that the grain merchants are not answerable for the dearness of grain, which depends entirely upon causes beyond their power and that of the Government. The grain merchants perform an essential service to the community by collecting supplies of food and retailing them at the current prices, and any obstruction to the freedom of their operations is certain to be felt in the shape of an increase of price to the consumer.”—Athenæum.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SCOTCH ECONOMY.—The Madras Spectator approves of the attempt of the Bombay Government to meet the financial difficulty by the sale of official waste paper. The same custom prevailed in England till lately, when a speculator, who had bought a quantity, sold it at a high price to the British Museum, as it was found to consist of important historical documents. It is not long since people were scandalised by finding that confidential papers of the income-tax office were sold to grocers and confectioners. When Sir Charles Trevelyan was in the treasury, waste paper was sold to paper manufacturers, who were under a heavy bond to see that all documents were at once destroyed by being "pulped" with the rags. In Bombay, however, it is officials and not paper manufacturers who have to see to the "pulping."

SENNA is described as a perfect weed in Scinde. England derives much of its senna from Bombay, which is the entrepot for what comes from the Red Sea ports. The other places from which it is supplied are Madras, Alexandria, and Tripoli. Dr. Gibson cultivates the Cassia Lanceolata at Hewra near Poona for the use of the Government hospitals. If raised in Scinde it could be brought to Kurrachee and sold at twelve rupees per cwt., leaving a large profit. In 1838-39, 5,70,426 pounds of this kind were imported into Bombay from Arabia, of which 2,62,000 pounds were re-exported to Europe, the rest being used in India.

immediate signs of improvement. An amicable reception of the foreign ministers will likely improve trade at Canton, and remove the slight check given to trade at Shanghai by doubts on the subject.

The total export of tea to Great Britain for the season 1858-59 amounts to 65,536,100 lbs., against 77,444,200 lbs. for 1857-58, or a decrease this season of 11,908,100 lbs. Of silk, the total quantity exported amounts to 72,584 bales, against 41,034 last year, or an increase for the season 1858-59 of 11,550 bales. To Marseilles the export amounts to 8,708 bales. The Singapore takes about 1,662 for Southampton and 66 for Marseilles.

To the United States the export of tea for the season amounts to 31,216,000 lbs.—Overland China Mail.

CHRISTIANS IN COCHIN-CHINA.—The March number of the Romish Annals of the Propagation of the Faith says, out of the 27,000,000 of inhabitants in Cochin-China and Tonquin, 530,000, or about one in every fifty, are Christians. Notwithstanding persecution the average number of conversions exceeds 4,000 a year. Even taking these facts as true, the nature of the conversion is shown by the boast that, in 1854, 49,000 children of Pagans were baptized in danger of death, and several thousand orphans taken from the streets and confided to the care of Christian families.

Dr. S. W. WILLIAMS, of China, estimates the population of the Japanese city of Yedo at two and a half millions, and Peking at the same. Thus London, Peking, and Yedo are the most populous cities in the world. To a Japanese Yedo seems the centre of everything that is desirable. It is to him more than Paris is to a Frenchman. The population of the whole of Japan is reckoned at from eighteen to twenty millions.

RUSSIAN SETTLEMENTS.—A writer in the China Mail states that the territories of Russia on the Yellow Sea have been divided into two provinces—Eastern Siberia and Sagalien. The capital of the latter is Blagovest Chowsk. The city has its court of justice, its sanitary commissioners, and a special police force. The whole country is fast being opened up by the construction of roads.

HOW TO SPEAK CHINESE.—Mr. Wade, contrary to the opinion of the old sinologues, pronounces the "tone" in speaking Chinese to be the one essential for a correct knowledge of the colloquial. In his "Hsin Ching Lu," a work to aid beginners in the study of Chinese, he says "sing out a couple of hours every day such a sentence as Che-li-lai, as pronounced by your teacher, and at the end of six months you may say it correctly." This is as bad as the Gaelic, and is, we suspect, merely one of those absurdities by which all men with special knowledge strive to keep up the importance of their trade.

THE UNITED STATES EXPEDITION, which was despatched from San Francisco last autumn to survey the route between California and China, reached Hong Kong in May. The track was clear to Johnson's Isles, the station of the Pacific Guano Company. The Sandwich Isles, and Guam or Guahan, the capital of the Ladrone or Marianne Isles, are the only places that will serve as coaling stations. The Ladrone belongs to the Spaniards. The survey has proved the non-existence of the many rocks and shoals, which have been reported to exist by the various vessels that have sailed in the Pacific. The mud deposit of the mid-Pacific, which was brought up from a depth of 3,900 fathoms, contained no infusoria. This was the case with the mud obtained in the Red Sea by the Cyclops. The China Mail says the deposit of the North Pacific is full of low forms of life.

CEYLON.

COLOMBO, July 25.—During the fortnight no vessels have cleared out for Great Britain, and the exports in three vessels,—one to France, one to Mauritius, and one to Melbourne, have consisted chiefly of native kinds of coffee. The addition thus made to our exports of this staple article consist of 11,894 cwt., in the proportions of 968 plantation and 10,926 native. The exports of native are now 185,000 cwt., a figure not only in advance of any previous ten months, but of any previous year. Plantation is now a little under the corresponding periods of the last two years; but probably at the end of September, the total quantity shipped of this sort will reach at least 360,000 cwt. Say that native reaches 200,000 cwt., our total exports of coffee will be 560,000 cwt. The export of cinnamon continues large, while cocoa-nut oil is below the average of previous years.

The great event of the fortnight was the opening of the Legislative Council, and the great topic of discussion has been the position of the railway scheme, as developed in the governor's address, a special railway message from his Excellency, and a report from the chief resident engineer, Mr. Doyne. This gentleman, founding his calculations on the present rate of labour,—about 7d. per diem,—estimates the cost of the line to Kandy at much more than double Captain Moorsom's outside limit. Mr. Doyne's figure is £2,214,000! and he confesses that his data are in many cases still very imperfect, and indicates clearly enough that the sum he names may be exceeded.

Of ordinary topics there are not many to notice. The painful case between the Bishop of Colombo and the Warden of St. Thomas's College has continued to engage the attention of the Supreme Court and the public. The Supreme Court delivered judgment on Saturday, refusing to grant either a prohibition or an injunction. There could be no prohibition because Mr. Baly was not truly a dean, and did not preside over a college. As there was no college the Bishop was not a visitor. An injunction was refused because in civil cases the Supreme Court has only an appellate jurisdiction, except where (clause 49 of charter) relief cannot be obtained in the usual manner from the district court.

The merchants having failed to respond to the Governor's invitation to name a member of council for his approval, his Excellency has appointed Mr. Rust, an English barrister, practising as advocate in the Colombo courts, to the vacant seat in the Legislative Council. The legal element is thus strong in the House, and to the overpowering talents of the Queen's advocate at least a counterpoise may be found in the eloquence and learning of Messrs. Rust, Lorenz, and Dias.

We regret to say that a most useful public body, the Planters' Association, is in danger, from differences of opinion as to the relative positions which proprietors and superintendents ought to occupy in its deliberations and decisions. At a recent meeting the consideration of the question was adjourned; and we trust, for the sake of the largest and most important interests of the colony, that a happy and honourable understanding may be arrived at.—Ceylon Observer.

A CANDID JUDGE.—Indian Courts are not without their experience of the prevalence of clever lying and perjury, but their judges are seldom so frank as a district judge in Ceylon. He was giving judgment on a case instituted for the recovery of debt. "I wholly disbelieve the defence, but it is only just to the first defendant to record that I have never heard a more accomplished liar in my life. His falsehoods dropped so softly and (apparently) frankly, that it was hard, indeed, to suppose that anyone could ever have had the heart to fine him for giving false evidence." Sir James Colville was sometimes severe, Sir Mordecai Wells has begun a crusade against perjury, but neither have yet approached the district judge of Ceylon.

ISLAND ALLOWANCES.—A new scale of island allowances for Queen's troops serving in Ceylon has been sanctioned, and is to take effect from the 1st of last January. A regimental colonel is to receive £45 per mensem, a lieutenant-colonel £40, major £30, captain £19, lieutenant £12 10s., ensign £10, paymaster £22, surgeon £30, assistant-surgeon £12 10s., adjutant £15 10s., and quartermaster £15 10s. In noticing these new allowances and the present state of affairs in Europe, the Observer remarks:—"We believe that every preparation for the worst is being quietly made. The military authorities are said to have received instructions to repair and strengthen the fortifications, and estimates for this purpose are in course of preparation. We are also informed that the Governor has received intimation, that as a measure of precaution three more regiments are to be sent to Ceylon. If those three additional regiments are to receive island allowances on the new scale, a very large proportion of the revenue of the colony will be swallowed up for military purposes. It is scarcely fair to make us pay so severe a penalty for the accident of our position as the 'key of India.'"

THE STRAITS.

THE MASSACRE AT BANJARMASIN.—A letter from Batavia in the Englishman gives further details of the European massacre at Banjarmasin. All the Europeans employed at the coal mine establishment, four German missionaries, three of their wives, and nineteen children were killed. There are still some European residents in the town, and reinforcements of troops have been sent from Java with the hope of saving them. The natives were incited to rise by some Moulaves just returned from Mecca. The atrocities committed are said not to have been surpassed by those of Cawnpore.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—The Herald of Batavia draws a gloomy picture of the state of the native subjects of the Dutch in Netherlands India. When the rebellion broke out in British India, the Home Government resolved to strengthen their military force in Java, but as time passed on and all was quiet, they ceased to send reinforcements. Now the massacre at Banjarmasin is but a type of the state of things all over their possessions. More than a dozen settlements are mentioned where revolt is chronic; piracy is far from being extirpated, and expeditions of sufficient strength cannot be organised, without depriving the places from which they are drawn of all protection.

THE ENGLISH MUSSULMAN, the Hon. Mr. Stanley, son of Lord Stanley of Alderley, has reached Penang, we learn from the Singapore Daily Times of the 27th June. He arrived there as a deck passenger. "He has assumed the name of Shaik Morad; he wears the Arab dress with Fez cap, and is stated to be about twenty-eight years of age; he is living in Chulia-street with an Arab named Shaik Salim Bangadie, and carefully avoids all intercourse with the Europeans. He had visited the Rajah of Perak, and on the 20th June he proceeded to Quedah, and will remain there with the Rajah for a week. Mr. Shaik Morad had not determined whether he would come on to Singapore or return to Mecca."

FILLIAL DUTY IN CHINA.—When Commissioner Yeh was raising money for the defence of Canton against the allies, he called upon an old man there for tael to the amount of £1,000, in addition to the established taxation. "You have two sons," he said, "who are making money in the service of the barbarians, and you must pay in proportion." The old man had not the money, and prepared to sell his patrimony as the only means of raising it. On hearing of his intention, his sons, in English employment, sent to him to say he must not sell his estate, nor suffer on their account; that it was true that they were profiting by the barbarians, and it was therefore just that they should pay in proportion. They sent the £1,000, and engaged to bear their father harmless. Such incidents as these seem to authorise Lord Elgin's conviction that there must be some other way than terror and violence for managing a people who form their judgments by an ethical standard, criticising barbarians, and regulating themselves by the idea of what is "just."—Once a Week.
